SMOKE-HOUSES—HOW SHOULD THEY BE BUILT?

[illegible] should be square in size varying from four to eight feet in diameter, according to the quantity of meat required to be smoked; the lower portion to the height of five feet should be of brick with a door lined with [illegible] This part may serve both as an ash-house and as the proper place for the fire to furnish the smoke. Fire should be placed in the middle and over it [illegible] burned, as the [illegible] by safe[illegible] maintained. The portion for a long time, giving all the smoke with requisite[illegible] The upper part may be wood, and the separation from the lower part by joists, covered with scantling, so as to leave spaces [illegible] The height of the upper portion may be four feet, besides the ascent of the roof, and should be furnished with a door that may be locked, so that the lower portion will not give ingress to the meat-room. This separation between the two [illegible] of meat that may accidentally fall, while the lower portion need not be locked, so as to enable the frequent removal of ashes from the house and the proper attention to the fire to be more easily performed. Saw-dust placed over a few ignited coals will furnish the necessary material for smoking the meat. The saw-dust however, should be from such wood as is most free from resinous matter. The pyroligneous acid evaporated is of a better flavour from hard than from the soft woods, while the amount of creosote, which is the preservative property will be the same. —Working Farmer.

CURING HAMS.

Few persons understand the proper ingredients, and exact proportions, to make a suitable pickle for curing hams. This is the season when such information is useful. The deterioration is to cure the meat, so that it will keep in hot weather, with the use of as little salt as possible. Pickle improved in the following manner, it is believed will accomplish this:

1 ½ lbs. of salt—coarse or alum salt is the best.

¾ lb saltpetre.

1 pint of molasses, or 1 lb of brown sugar.

1 teaspoonful of saleratus.

Let these be added to one gallon of water, and the amount increased in the same proportions to make the quantity required. Bring the liquor to a boil, taking care to skim just before it begins to boil. Let the pickle cool, and pour it over the meat until entirely covered. The meat should be placed in clean, tight casks, and should remain in the pickle six or seven weeks, when it will be fit to smoke. Green hickory wood is the best article for this purpose. Shoulders prepared in this manner are nearly as good as hams. This pickle is just the thing to make nice corned beef, or corned beef tongues, or any lean meat for drying.—Valley Farmer.

COMFORT AT HOME.

A [illegible] attraction to a home is the cultivation of a spirit of neatness and pleasant [illegible] about all its arrangements. There is no [illegible] about a well-kept home which neither wealth nor magnificence can impart, unaccompanied by taste. To keep neat rooms, or best of anything, to be used only for visitors' accommodation is not the wisest policy for a wife to adopt; on the contrary, company rooms contrast too greatly with daily living rooms, and suggest unpleasant comparisons. Neatness and elegance should go hand in hand; one cannot exist without the other; but it must be neatness far removed from formality, and elegance independent of costliness or profusion. Every article should appear as if intended for use, and every article in its right place.

A CHALLENGE LOAD.

A load raised by Mr. Wm. Leask, of East Whitby, brought to Gibbs' Mill, about ten days ago, a load of wheat consisting of upwards of 160 bushels. The teamster says that if the sleigh would stand it the horses could have drawn 200 bushels that day, without trouble, judging by the ease with which they brought along the 160.—We believe the heaviest load of wheat that has been recorded in our columns was one of about 100 bushels drawn from Prince Albert some years ago. Mr. Leask's team has often, however, during the present winter, drawn much heavier loads of cordwood to Oshawa. On one or two occasions it brought 2½ cords of dry beech and maple at a load, the weight of which, it is estimated, would be somewhat greater than that of the load of wheat referred to. Loads of 2½ cords of wood have been quite common in our village during the present season.—Chronicle.

FLEET OF GUNBOATS FOR CANADA IN THE SPRING.

Alluding to the probability of war with the Federal States, the London Times of the 9th of January says:—"The worst part of the struggle, however, will not be on the North Atlantic seaboard, but on the great Lakes of Upper Canada and North America. We are glad therefore, to be able to tell our readers that this danger has been foreseen and amply provided against, and that within a week after the breaking up of the ice in the rivers and canals a whole fleet of gunboats, with the most powerful of the screw recruiting sent out to Admiral Milne, will carry the protection of the English flag from Montreal to Detroit.

AMONG the most important of modern Medical discoveries stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer. As a Family Medicine it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains from Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds Sore Throats, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbis, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c.—The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single instance of dissatisfaction, where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its virtues and magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon it being a sovereign remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, incuring the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of theumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain Destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it.—Price only 25 cents per bottle. All orders should be addressed to Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W.

A perfect Antidote for Pain and Nervousness.

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After research and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE SEAT OF the ailment, ARRESTS IT, KILLS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form those diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

PROTECTION TO LIFE AND PROPERTY.

200,000 Feet

OF THE NEW PATENT ENGLISH ELECTRO-GALVANIZED, ANNEALED AND CARBONIZED

LIGHTNING RODS

JUST ARRIVED FROM ENGLAND, WITH
SPRATTS' RENOWNED
PLATINA TIPPED POINTS!!
AND ENLARGED
INSULATORS & ATTACHMENTS.

THIS ROD is prepared in England with especial reference to its great conducting powers; is highly approved and recommended by the best authorities. The white non-corroding platina guards it from rust, and greatly increases its conducting power, completely obviating the great objections to the old rod. Professor Croft in a Special Report read from the University Buildings, Toronto, and substituted this, on account of the perfect conducting power of the surface, and not being liable to rust. One real advantage gained by the fine conducting qualities of this rod, with Spratt's point, arises from the fact that it constantly receives and silently conducts to the earth, the positive electricity of the surrounding atmosphere generated by an approaching thunder cloud surcharged with this element of destruction and death, thereby drawing off, draining and lessening the fountain, easing the cloud of its constant accumulation, allowing it to pass over our heads in safety, which might otherwise have burst upon us in all its fury. But if it fall in this by reason of too great accumulation of electricity, and the discharge takes place, it conducts all safely to the ground, being a preventative in most cases and a cure in an emergency. We have erected them on the Crystal Palace, and Clifton House, at Hamilton, as well as many of the best buildings in this city. By importing largely for cash, we are enabled to erect them at a trifling advance upon the Carbonized Rod. Common Iron Rods, such as are being offered by parties from the States we do not erect, as we consider them nearly useless. Good Rods, properly erected, protect 25 feet from the point.

$1000 CHALLENGE!

PIPER & KINDALL,
33 Young Street.
Toronto, Sept. 18, 1860.

I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT I HAVE SUPERintended the erection of Galvanized Iron Rods on the University Buildings, at Toronto, preferring the Galvanized Iron to ordinary Iron Rods, on account of the perfect conducting power of the surface, and from their not being liable to rust.

The advantage resulting from these qualities is more than commensurate with the increased cost.

(Signed) HENRY CROFT, D.C.L.
Prof. of Chemistry.
Peterborough, July 28th, 1861.

The agents for the firm of Piper & Kendall, Toronto, have put up for me two of their Galvanized Lightning Rods so highly recommended by Professor Croft. I consider them preferable to all others. The improved Attachments and Insulators, with Spratt's Platina Tipped Point must give them great additional security.

J. BROWNE, M. D.

I entirely concur in Dr. Browne's observations,—Also have bought two of the same Rods for my two cottages on Brock Street.

JUDSON'S
Mountain Herb Pills.

ABOVE, we present you with a perfect likeness of Tecumseh, a chief of a tribe of the strange Aztec Nation, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlets and Almanacs—to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The Inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Sores form the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity at the fountain head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring from which ran a tiny rivulet, in a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. So quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind! All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lamp of life must go out. These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body, they are, therefore, unrivalled as a

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, &c. &c. This Anti Bilious Medicine expels from the blood the hidden secretions, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and sweet, clearing and reanimating the vital organs.

Pimples indeed, is it to us, that we are able to place within your reach, a medicine like the "MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS," that will pass directly to the affected parts, through the blood and fluids of the body, and cleanse the sufferer to happier with the flush of beauty and health.

Judson's Pills are the Best Remedy in existence for the following Complaints:

Blood Complaints, Debility, Impure Women,
Cancers, Fever and Ague, Liver Complaints,
Colds, Female Complaints Enemas of Youth,

Females who value health, should never be without these Pills. They purify the blood, remove obstructions of all kinds, cleanse the skin of all pimples and blotches, and bring the rich color of health to the pale cheek.

Age The Fluids and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very surprising way among the Tecumseh, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Get the almanac or pamphlet and you will read all about it, and the very great success of Judson in the "Family Resource" of the Aztecs.

Observe.—The Mountain Herb Pills are put up in a Round Box. Each box contains 40 pills, and forms of all sizes for the use of persons, from the smallest of B. L. Judson & Co., signature.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIVE AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, TETTERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many troubling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, save themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins: cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this poison of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply it with a remedy so thoroughly true to the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are invisible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.

Price, $1 per Bottle; Six Bottles for $5.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to adduce the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Bruptions of the Skin, Flatulency, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Gout, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, or a Disordered Liver, and for Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the most agreeable in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box: Five boxes for $1.00.

Great blessings of Children, Parents, Husband, Friend, and unlimited possession, have lent their assistance to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these wonderful Pills, but our space forbids us to publish the testimony of these. The Agent below named will furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which these and other matters will be found, and to whom the citizens of this locality are referred for their cures.

We will be put off by unprincipled dealers with Pills of their own, that they make more profit on, because Ayer's are so well known and sought after. The Pills we offer from the best of skill in the land.

DRILL, BOYS, DRILL!

A PATRIOTIC SONG FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

By Charles Sangster.

While the sun of Peace is shining,
Drill, boys, drill;
Cheerful hearts and no repining,
Drill, boys, drill!
Be the men your fathers were,
Hands to do and hearts to dare;
For the day of strife prepare:
Drill, boys, drill!

Action wakes the flame that slumbers,
Drill, boys, drill;
Battles are not won by numbers,
Drill, boys, drill!
Be the future what it may,
Bloodless peace or bloody fray,
Take the duty of to-day:
Drill, boys, drill!

Learn to face the cannon's rattle,
Drill, boys, drill,
Discipline is half the battle,
Drill, boys, drill!
By our sires who fought and bled,
By the unforgotten dead
Let your shalt be truly aped:
Drill, boys, drill!

Be above the strife of faction,
Drill, boys, drill;
Clear the decks, prepare for action,
Drill, boys, drill!
Though the foe also, M never come,
On bine ring, or bullet hum,
Let your Enfield's not be dumb,
Drill, boys, drill.

While the sun of Peace is shining,
Drill, boys, drill;
Cheerful hearts and no repining,
Drill, boys, drill!
Bonnie the patriotic flame,
What glory but a name?
Peace—Defence—be these our aim:
Drill, boys, drill!

For the Examiner.

LINES,

UPON THE AWFUL ACCIDENT AT NEWHARTLEY, ENGLAND.

Above the pit propelled by steam,
There wrought a pond'rous iron beam;
Sudden it at the centre breaks,
And down the shaft its way it takes.
Down cord with rivet, crushing force,
Death—falling timber—marks its course.
'Tis done, the deadly work's complete,
The shaft is filled one hundred feet
When those below heard the dread crash,
Sad thoughts through every mind did flash.

Below, two hundred souls were there,
Six hundred feet from Heaven's pure air.
What their thoughts were no pen can state,
Doubtless each knew death was his fate;
The aching heart, the sighs, the tears,
Faint hopes give place to doubts and fears,
Home with its joys would fill their minds,
Wives, mothers, sisters, brothers, kind,
The visions fly, griefs intervene,
A dreadful barrier hangs between.
Long hours of suffering, hours of grief,
Pass, but bring them no relief.
They congregate, their voices raise
To God, in prayer and in praise;
Escape is hopeless, dark despair,
What would they give to breathe fresh air;
Stout hearts must faint, strong arms must fail,
Since noxious gasses them assail.
Ah! hopes last ray is nearly gone!
The fainting father grasps his son;
Their dying language, mark it well,
Mercy O God! dear wife farewell!

But now our thought the shaft ascends,
Behold the grief of weeping friends,
Wives and mothers,—shrieks and cries,—
Sisters and brothers join likewise.
To clear the shaft the hands engage,
Three lives are saved from off the cage,
Still downward work those pitmen brave,
Striving their fellow-men to save;
Each muscle at'd each nerve is strained
That speedy recue may be gained.
Each workman's vigorous power extends,
As if their fate was in his hands.
Through the last barrier they prevail,
Effluvia's gas told the sad tale.
Six days of grief and toil had passed,
Now the yard seam is reached at last,
Moved with desires of weeping friends,
Two daring pitmen now descend:
A fearful sight was there revealed,
On, every eye in death was sealed.
To bank they came in feeble state,
Their doleesome tidings to relate;
All hopes were crushed, the stroke was brief,
The widowed mother's sake in grief.

Heart-rending scene, soul-sick'ning thought,
Their lifeless corpse to bank were brought.
With trembling hands and tear-bathed cheeks,
The widow, son and husband seeks.
Behold that row of coffin'd dead,
Bereaved friends weep round their heads,
They are removed—to cottage come,—
Now sad, but once their happy home.
O, view that silent cottage row,
All desolation, mourning, woe,
Emblems of death alone displayed,
In every house the dead is laid;
The hour arrives that mourners dread,
The living giving up their dead.
Gently they placed them in the carts,
Midst hardened, almost breaking, hearts;
Onwards that mourning train proceed,
With drooping heads and silent tread.
No splendour, pomp, nor pleme there waves,
They halt beside these open graves.
To them the last sad tribute paid,
In the grave their last remains are laid;
They leave the dead in their last sleep,
The living seek their homes to weep.

WM. TELFORD.
Smith, March 18, 1862.

Why are the All England eleven cricketers like young ladies wishing to be married? Because they are always on the look out for good catches and good matches.

The girls were so much exercised this winter that they were glad to blanket, like modest wenls, in a bullet lobster. One was observed every week so far as to have vegetables thrown and not hair. No wonder the girls love "Bell Ringers."—American Paper.

The Folly of Self-Conceit.

"Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit; there is more hope for a fool than him"—Proverbs, xxvi. 12.

This guilty and miserable habit locks up from the use of all who are under its dominion, those riches without which the fairest intellect must ever remain poor indeed, the wisdom of other ages, and the reasonings and experience of other minds. It is thus that the noblest powers are often stunted in their growth; hindered from reaching the strength, the grace, the ample proportions to which nature may have destined them; and condemned to exhibit the melancholy spectacle of dwarfish infirmity, made more ridiculous and more pitiable by an affection of dignity and importance. So insidious and so malignant is the operation of this disease on the mind, that it converts into a deadly poison the ordinary means of health and vigour, for even if it should fail to destroy the wish for enlarged acquisitions, it renders such acquisitions worse than useless, by extracting from them, instead of wholesome correctives, an inflammatory supply to the malady itself. Every advance in knowledge brings the sobermineded to a more distinct perception of the very narrow limits of human powers, the self-conceited on the contrary derive from every step only an augmented confidence in their own superiority and wisdom. It is dismal to reflect on the number of characters which have been ruined by this unhappy delusion, to contemplate the extent to which it has clouded mankind, by rendering unexceptionable talents of high promise, and feelings originally of a virtuous and happy temperament. And it is a consideration still more fearful, that when once the fatal sorcery has suspended in the mind all aspirations after higher attainments, from that instant the movement of the character becomes infallibly retrograde. By the known constitution of things it is impossible that the intellectual or moral powers can be for a moment stationary. It is the irreversible doom of man, that the improvement and cultivation of his nature, like that of the ground which he tills for his support, should be a work of unmerited toil. In the sweat of his face must he eat the bread of wisdom. There is in his faculties a constant tendency towards relapse and decay, which must be encountered by perpetual exertion. And in whom a presumptuous security has tempted to intermit his labour, will soon have his mind overrun with a wild and worthless produce. Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto him. It will then be seen and felt, that the soil has indeed been cursed for his sake, and in sorrow shall he eat thereof all the days of his life. Cases like these are subjects of painful meditation. But there is yet an extremity still more deplorable; and that is, when the two characters in the text happen to coincide; when imbecility and arrogance go together; when the fool is wise in his own conceit. The case is, unhappily, but too common; and its aspect is desperate, almost beyond human hopes or means. Where there is a solid foundation of talent, or even a substantial good sense, there is at least a possibility of engaging it in a contemplation of high models of excellence, and thus winning it, by degrees, from the debasing influence of self-satisfaction. On the other hand, where there is humility of temper and sincerity of purpose, moderate faculties may be trained to useful, if not to splendid objects, and may be brought into a course of constant and steady improvement. But when self-complacency and folly are combined; when there appears to be no desire, and little capacity, for higher degrees of virtue or knowledge; when the want of those attainments and qualities which win esteem or excite admiration is attended with no uneasy sense of disadvantage; where there is no suspicion of defect, nor the discernible possibility of awakening any such suspicion, the case does seem to defy all modes of treatment which mortal charity or sagacity can suggest. What expedients the mercy and wisdom of heaven may have in store, for recalling a character like this from the depths of that degradation to which it is hastening, it is not for man to pronounce but, humanly speaking, there appears but one gleam of hope. The sense of ridicule has been known to survive, when every better feeling has been lost. There is, consequently, some slight chance, that the principle of rational emulation and honest exertion may eventually be awakened by the stings of that unsparing derision, with which the world is always ready to salute the pretensions of those who are strangers to the secret of their own imperfections. The language of the text must be considered as strictly applicable to the fault in question, only as it exists in its greatest excess.—Since, however, all degrees of it, without timely watchfulness and control have a strong tendency towards this excess, the caution which has saying foreseen, must of course, be useful in the correct, and in every stage of the disorder. It is, however, to little purpose to esp se or to deplore any vicious affection of the mind without endeavouring to fix the attention on its appropriate remedies. The remedies for this peculiar infirmity are such that, if duly applied, it is not only credible that their efficacy can ever be resisted. The nature and the value of these applications will be best understood by considering very briefly what are the causes by which the disease is engendered; or, to speak more correctly, by which it is strengthened and developed, for its seeds are deeply laid in the corruption of man's degenerate nature. It cannot then reasonably be doubted, that the predominance of self-conceit is in most instances the result of neglect or injudicious culture. It should always be kept in mind by parents and instructors, that self-will enters into the composition of every human character. It shows itself with the earliest dawn of the faculties. And when it happens to be combined with lively parts and buoyant spirits, it is evident that the lesson of self-distrust is never likely to be learned, without urgent mortification. There is no instruction more valuable than that which prepares a child to the salutary and painful exercise of examining his own conduct. It is, consequently, an important department of early discipline to make him acquainted with that unwelcome secret. An unsuspecting confidence in his own powers should be represented by every effort, at all compatible with the preservation of the natural tone and strength of character.—Above all things, a premature excitement of ability should be scrupulously avoided; a vicious and unnatural process utterly destructive of that modest simplicity which is the peculiar grace of childhood and of youth. No words can describe or enumerate the mischiefs of dangerous fondness, which lavishes admiration and applause on the sallies of boyish vivacity; which makes the language or measured commendation seem ungracious, and renders that of rebuke intolerable. Little do parents imagine that they are often unconsciously generating those very powers which they seem themselves to be cherishing and confirming, that instead of preparing an estimable and distinguished member of the great brotherhood of mankind, they are, perhaps, but dedicating an unhappy victim to disappointment and disgrace. Where the favours of nature have been thus abused, the easy triumphs of youthful talent furnish no augury of future and sustained success. On the contrary they are fearfully ominous of ultimate failure and defeat. By a sort of magic they arrest the progress of the mind. They consign the man to the dominion of a self-complacent spirit, which binds him in invisible fetters, while the race is won from him by the steady pace of humble and meritorious diligence. The feeling of self-sufficiency, thus introduced into the mind in early life, will be perpetuated and strengthened by the habit of comparing our-elves with low and imperfect characters; of fixing our regards on very humble standards of goodness, industry or talent; and of carefully banishing from our recollections the majestic proportions of wisdom or virtue. Nearly allied to this is another pernicious article of self-indulgence; that which fixes us in the centre of a very contracted circle; which retains us in the midst of a set or party, ready at all times to echo back the flatteries of our own hearts; thus surrounding us with a spell which effectually intercepts the influence of all higher excellence. Nothing can be more fatal to all real advancement in whatever is praiseworthy, than the conspiracy into which men sometimes enter for the deception of each other, and for the expulsion of those importunate fears and suspicions which are apt to disturb their satisfaction with themselves. If to these arts we add the treacherous counsels of indolence, which is perpetually discrediting the necessity of an arduous road to success, we shall nearly discern the process which ends in the completion of that very unhappy, and very despicable character, one who is too proud to learn.—Rev. C. W. Le Bas.

CAPTURE OF A SLAVER WITH 507 NEGROES.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

St. Helena, Jan. 17.

As the vessel to which this goes (Br. ship Meletus,) does not anchor, I am necessarily limited as to time, and therefore can't send you a long letter.

On Thursday, the 15th inst., arrived the schooner Commence, supposed to be Spanish or Peruvian, with 507 slaves on board, she having been captured about sixty miles off the land, near the Congo river, by H. B. M.'s steam gun-boat Ranger, on the evening of the 1st of January. She was taken in a calm, and when boarded had a crew supposed to be all Spaniards. She had on board the American, Spanish and Portuguese colors. The captain was not recognised, but a person representing himself to be either supercargo or passenger came up in the vessel. He appears to be a Spaniard or a Peruvian. The name of the vessel is painted on the stern, and by close inspection I made the letters out to spell Commence, and I understand by certain papers found on board, she appears to hail from Lima. The vessel is rigged as a fore and aft schooner, and is 140 or 150 tons. None of the slaves died on the voyage across. They are mostly all young people. Some of them were children. I saw them landing at the depot, and they appeared to be in a tolerably healthy condition. The officer in charge of the vessel, Mr Warren, was taken ill with the African fever, and lingered until his arrival here. He was landed and conveyed to the hospital, but only survived a few hours. His remains were interred today. It is said that the Spanish supercargo navigated the vessel to this port.

There is no particular news from the coast, beyond that it is very unhealthy, which is always the case at this season of the year. The slave trade is very brisk, and more captures are expected shortly to be made.

IMPORTANT CASE.

SIR M. SMITH VS. SAMUEL SHAW.

This case was tried yesterday, and, in its results, will have a most important bearing on the corporation of the city, and its right to recover arrears of taxes. It appeared from the facts of the case that, for 11 years past, Sir Henry had paid his taxes for his dwelling-house and property in Victoria Ward but that, in last December, the defendant, who is a special bailiff under the corporation, came and levied for arrears of taxes due by Mrs. Caroline Smith in the year 1850. Sir Henry paid the sum demanded under protest, after counter motion brought to test the validity of that measure. The learned judge over-ruled every objection taken by the defendant's counsel, and directed the jury to find for the plaintiff for $96 80, which they did. We understand that the plaintiff complains of a great many other illegal seizures made by the same defendant for alleged arrears of taxes, and it is his intention of proceeding in every case to recover back the money paid under protest. We believe that many other persons are about to take proceedings against the city corporation for similar acts of illegality on the part of their officers.—Montreal Witness.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.

The Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Courier writes:

"The subject of Reciprocity with Canada and the other North American British Provinces and possessions has been brought before Congress in a report by the Hon. E. Ward, of New York, on behalf of the House Committee on commerce, which has excited more attention among our legislators than I could have supposed to be possible in times when the war absorbs so much of men's thoughts and energies. It was useless at this time to recommend immediate abrogation of the treaty. The administration and its friends are, you may be sure, unwilling to arouse any hostile feeling on the part of other countries, and the course taken by the committee has given many warm friends to the cause of sound international relations on the Northern frontier of the United States. Some of those members of Congress, who took the most interest in the military defences of the frontier, are most ardent in a desire for an extension of commerce with Canada, deeming peace our best policy, and that a sense of benefits given and received on both sides, and the social and commercial relations which would arise, if legislation ceased to meddle with the laws of trade, would be a better system of defence on both sides than any system of defence that money and human life can establish or wit of man devise. The subject is regarded with much interest even by members of Congress from Maryland and Kentucky, and their constituents.

REMARKABLE HEROISM.

If to deserve success is better than oftentimes to gain it, then Lieutenant Maurice and the gallant crew of the ill-fated Cumberland merit the admiration and thanks of the whole loyal country. The sight of an invulnerable monster as the Merrimac bearing straight down upon a wooden vessel not in the least affected by a half a dozen heavy broadsides, would have unnerved many a crew. But it had no effect on the gallant sailors of the Cumberland. They kept up their rapid firing till the iron monster crashed her bows into the side of the Cumberland, knocking in a hole as large as the head of a hogshead. Even then, while the water was rushing in like a flood, and the vessel going down, and the Merrimac, at the distance of three hundred yards was pouring in murderous broadsides, the men fought till the last gun was submerged. The fight continued three quarters of an hour; and the firing of the Cumberland's guns were so accurate that when one of the Merrimac's crew crept out of a port to the outside of her plated roof, a ball instantly cut him in two! We do not believe that there is an action on record which shows more heroic fighting than this hopeless one on the part of the Cumberland. She lies in fifty-four feet of water, with the stars and stripes still flying from her topmast; but a grateful country will honor her commander and her decimated crew.

DIFFICULTIES OF AN AMERICAN EDITOR.

An American editor writes to a friend: "There are so many great obstacles in the way that I find it quite impossible to have my paper regularly. My printers are young natives, whom I had to teach myself.—They do as well as they can; but sometimes our press gets out of order, and it takes a day or two to find out what is the matter with it, and perhaps two days more to repair the mischief. The position of an editor out here is a dreadful one. It requires hardness of heart, and contempt of everybody's word and commandment. I have been twice nearly murdered, once brought up for libel, a hundred times threatened, and I am abused by some one or other every day. Now, it so happens that I rather like this sort of thing; and as I always carry defensive weapons, and have tolerably strong nerves, I am not particularly uneasy. This paper of mine is the determination of the moderates. They would scarcely see if they could, but the dawn of moderation are past.

ANECDOTES OF THE LATE PRINCE ALBERT.

It is said of Prince Albert that he had a very great aversion to expensive funerals, and that his own was conducted in that quiet unostentatious manner, which was so thoroughly in accordance with his ideas when living. In the domestic circle he was the most impartial of fathers. Finding the Prince of Wales at fault once among a party of lads with whom he had been at play, he took them among them and made him apologize for his rudeness, notwithstanding they were only the sons of sturdy yeomen. He delighted to assist the poor and would design buildings for them upon the most economical plans, and lend his aid in their construction. He was in the habit of relating with a good deal of merriment, an adventure he once had with a boy who had charge of cows which the Prince desired to take a look at. The boy not knowing his Royal Highness, threatened to set the dog on him. The Prince exclaimed that he was Prince Albert. "Oh!" said the humpkin, placing his thumb to his nose and extending his digits, "Wa-a-a-y,"—an intimation that he did not believe the story, and that his visitor must leave. In his household he threw off all official dignity. A disturbance at one time arose between himself and the Queen, at the end of which the Prince retired to his own room. Victoria, believing herself to be at fault, came to his door about an hour afterwards and knocked. "Who is there?" said the Prince. "It is the Queen," was the reply. "I do not open my door for the Queen," he answered. Victoria immediately said, in a subdued tone, "I is your wife," and the door was opened at once.

THE LICENSE QUESTION IN STRATFORD.

The people of Stratford appear to be in a quandry, respecting the number of tavern licenses to be granted in that municipality. At the last meeting of the Council it was resolved to grant fourteen licenses instead of twelve, the number granted last year—this step being taken upon the assumption that there was a sufficient increase in the population to justify it. The treasurer, however, differed from the Council, and after receiving the money for twelve licenses refused to take any more. As several other parties are desirous of taking out licenses, it was resolved by the Council to have a special enumeration taken, to ascertain whether an increase had taken place since last year, in order that the additional number of licenses might be granted. An enumerator was therefore appointed at $40, the work to be commenced forthwith.

THE ELEGANT POOR OF NEW YORK.

The New York World, speaking of the applications for food, on the part of the poor of that city, thus depicts one of the melancholy results of the War:

"But the saddest sight of all is to see American women, rather ladies, who preserve the appearance of affluence not long departed, applying for aid. Every day they come, wearing the faded shawls that were in accordance with the elegant spring fashion, and perhaps a well smoothed but soiled muff, whose faded silken strings and general appearance betoken better days. It is hard for these to beg. The strad sometimes for minutes at the entrance to the little alley that leads to the office, hesitating to enter among the elbowing throng of poor, sometimes ragged and sometimes filthy men and women, who are claiming each their share of charity."

GRAND TRUNK AID.

The following paragraph, which we copy from the Quebec Chronicle of Monday last shows conclusively the feeling of the country with reference to this question:—

The gentlemen of the Grand Trunk have less acuteness than they have had credit for, if they do not read aright the tone of the provincial press in reference to their demands upon the public treasury. We cannot discover a solitary journal—certainly not one that is ever heard of—which ventures to support the application to Parliament for assistance. Not one has said that another dollar should be advanced, under the pretence of replenishing the postal payment or in any other form, to relieve the undertaking from embarrassment; and he will be a bold man who, in defiance of an unanimous public opinion, thus unequivocally expressed, essays to obtain provincial money for the purpose. On all hands, the conviction prevails that the Grand Trunk should rest upon its resources, and that its proprietors, bond and share, must extricate it from the Slough of Despond in which it is at present fixed. It can be no more treated as a political institution, to be sustained at any cost of partizan considerations. It must now be handled—as it should have been long ago—as a business enterprise, subject to business vicissitudes, and to be redeemed from bankruptcy on business principles.

—A gentleman made his wife a present of a silver drinking cup with an angel at the bottom, and when he filled it for her she used to drain it to the bottom, and he asked her why she drank every drop. "Because, darky," she said, "I long to see the dear little angel." Upon which he had the angel taken out and a devil engraved on the bottom, and she drank it off just the same; and he asked her the reason. "Why," replied the wife, "because I won't leave the old devil a drop."

An Irishman entered a very long room, and one day walking down a narrow street, two or three very quaint ladies, with very ill grace, passed in their way and looked considerably at the gentleman's gown, when he, good humouredly, placed his finger on his lip, and pressing it to one side said, laughingly, "Now, ladies, you have room to pass!"

A COUNTRY GOING A-BEGGING.

From the Norfolk Reformer.

The Governments of England and Canada may ignore the fact or not, just as they please, but so sure as they have turned a cold shoulder on the Red River Settlement, will the people of that colony, if the present course be persisted in, be driven to the extremity of seeking an alliance with a foreign power. On this point there is no room for doubt. Time after time, the faithful opponent of public opinion in that section of country has sounded the warning note—gently at first, but now in thunder tones which all but the deaf may hear, and hearing ought not to disregard. The growth of American sentiment in Red River is a progressive growth. Whilst in Canada, our regard for the American people has been diminishing, in Red River it has been increasing. Three or four years ago, the settlers hated the very name of "Yankee," and few households would suffer their young men to visit the States, for fear their rigid morals might be undermined. Within the short period intervening, however, the change of sentiment has been most rapid. Americans, instead of being looked upon as unprincipled intruders, are coming to be regarded as friendly deliverers. Acknowledging Republican institutions as an evil to be avoided, instead of a good to be desired, the settlers—cut adrift alike by the mother country and the sister colony—are nevertheless prepared to cast in their lot with the people of the United States, at this the most unfortunate period in that nation's history, in preference to remaining in their present state of degrading political vassalage and entire isolation from the rest of the empire.

When men of undoubted patriotism and loyalty are forced by the current of public opinion to give expression to such views, as in high time, if trouble is to be prevented and the country retained, for the Province or Britain to go to their relief. So long as the unprincipled Coalition of Canada lasts—and we fervently hope, as we fondly believe, that its days are numbered—the Red Rivermen can expect no help from this quarter. Mr Cartier's celebrated conversation with Sir E. B. Lytton made that certain. The hon. baronet told Mr. Isbister in 1859 that "he had not simply offered the country to the Canadian Government; he had pressed it over and over again upon their acceptance, but without success." Mr. Cartier had satisfied him of the hopelessness of annexation to Canada. Our Premier "told him very frankly that as the head of the Lower Canada party, any proposal of the kind would meet with his determined opposition." Without, then, Mr. Cartier, who rejected the offer of a splendid country, is removed from office, the North-Western territory is lost to Canada. Failing the acceptance of Red River by Canada, Minnesota is ready to receive her with open arms, and it is an alarming sign that the people are settling down to the belief that annexation to the United States is their inevitable destiny.

Leaving altogether out of view the prospective value of the country, geographically and commercially, it is a matter of no small concern whether her present trade becomes tributary to Western Canada or to Minnesota. In 1857, the estimated value of furs exported from the country by private traders and trappers by way of the American route reached $120,000, and it was calculated that at least an equal sum in addition was spent that summer in the United States—but principally in the city of St. Paul, the capital of Minnesota—on the purchase of merchandize required for the Settlement. These estimates we believe to be below rather than over the mark, and since that time the trade was largely increased. Minnesota made a bold stroke, and enriched herself by monopolizing the benefits; Canada never stirred a finger, and to-day she is not, as she deserves not to be, a close-cost piece better off for her near proximity to the Red River country than she would have been had that country remained inaccessible save through Hudson's Bay.

The boast of what Canada has already done for New-Western extension are based on the veriest delusions. The exclamations which have cost the Province thousands of dollars have been about the slightest practical benefit, since no effort has been given to Messrs. Dawson and Hind's recommendation. The chartered privileges of the North-West Transit Company were abused instead of being used for the good of the country. And as for the mail which the Postmaster General pretended to send over to Fort Garry once or twice a month in summer, it was one of the bitterest jokes the ill used settlers had to enliven the dull routine of their daily life. Beyond making a few miles of road, leading to no place in particular, Canada has done literally nothing to render the west Red River country tributary to the Province.

More than once the people of Red River have manifested a desire to join their political fortunes with ours. We refused to have aught to do with them, and they turned imploringly to the parent country. There the Hudson Bay Company's influence appears to be more valued than their allegiance; and we can hardly be surprised, though we may deeply regret, that in the face of such treatment they are on the point of yielding to the seductive arguments of the Minnesotians. An empire is passing beyond our grasp, and we make no effort to save it.

As the train from England the other day stopped at Dumfries station, a stanchy Nithsdale yeoman entered one of the carriages, and shortly afterwards thus addressed himself to an English lady:—"Sir I'm verra much sorrow to see a man this stress."—English lady: "Sir?"—Yeoman: "I'm sayin' this is a very inclement day hereawa, especially upon the Saturday nicht."—English lady: "Sir, I really don't know what you are saying."—Yeoman: "I am saying the train is very late awa."—English lady: "Oh, yes, sir, indeed, very; indeed it is."—Old yeoman (with a chuckle): "Ye are sma, an' Scotch fill talk two languages, and gif ye dinna understan' the one ye're shure to understan' the ither."

THE GOVERNOR'S SPEECH.

Quebec, March 21.

His Excellency the Governor General at 3 p. m. proceeded in state to the Legislative Chamber, and having taken his seat on the Throne, commanded the attention of the Assembly. The members of that body, preceded by their speaker, J. E. Turcotte, speedily appeared at the Bar. The Hon. J. E. Turcotte informed his Excellency that the choice had fallen upon him to be their Speaker, and he prayed for the members the customary parliamentary privileges, after which His Excellency was pleased to deliver the following speech:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

Since the Legislature last met, Her Majesty and her subjects have suffered irreparable loss in the death of the Prince Consort. It is not necessary for me to remind you that the illustrious Prince, though born and in a great degree educated in a foreign country, was truly British in thought, feeling and action, while the spirit of the universal benevolence by which he was animated, caused him to devote intellectual abilities with which nature had endowed him, and the stores of a church information with which by his own industry he had filled his mind, to the promotion of every well-advised plan for the moral and material improvement of his fellow-creatures of all nations and creeds. I am sure you worthily estimate the virtues which marked the character of the departed Prince; that you appreciate the great bereavement which our sovereign has sustained both in her public and her domestic relations, and that you will join with me in laying at the foot of the Throne the respectful expression of our heartfelt sympathy and condolence.

Circumstances have occurred during the past autumn and winter, which gave me opportunity for exhibiting in a more striking and satisfactory manner the sentiments of reciprocal attachment which exist between the inhabitants of this Province, of every class and creed, and their fellow-subjects in the mother country. The feeling of loyalty showed by her North American subjects has been made matter of special notice by Her Most Gracious Majesty in her Speech from the Throne, on the opening of the Imperial Parliament; and such a recognition cannot fail to be most gratefully to you as the representatives of the people of Canada.

I have to congratulate you on the blessing which throughout the past year, and on the continuance of a satisfactory condition of the trade, notwithstanding the partial derangement to which it has been subjected by the events of the civil war now unhappily raging in the United States.

I have directed papers to be laid before you, showing the extent to which the Government of Canada has availed itself of the powers conferred upon it by the Act of the Imperial Parliament, 24 and 25 Vic., cap. 5, for the purpose of promoting the construction of the railway which will unite the Province of Canada with the Lower Provinces, and the measures which have been taken in consequence of the resolutions of the Legislature on the subject.

I have also directed papers to be laid before you, showing the steps which have been taken for the purpose of giving effect to the Address of the Legislature to Her Majesty, praying that the Intercolonial Railway might be constructed by the Imperial Government, and the reply which has been received to the Address.

I have directed papers to be laid before you, showing the measures

AND OF CRIME.

Died in the Provincial Penitentiary at Kingston, on the 26th February last, John [illegible] aged 24 years, confined in a felon's cell on the charge of having gained an honorable position and then left an enviable name and reputation behind. He was educated and well educated. He came to Scarbrooke in 1854, being then about twenty-four years of age, to take charge of our academy, and was principal of it for a year. He had previously kept the Academy at Melbourne, and there had bad companions. His brother Robert [illegible], Thomas Riddell, and some other worthless individuals, banded themselves together with determined effort to ruin the morals of the young. There is usually more ingenuity, and circumspection manifested by editors of the country press than by those in large cities, and a more healthy tone of mind and morals will be found to pervade them. They are more free from the reports of degrading vices and crimes, and are never opened with that feeling of emptiness and [illegible] which attaches to the common "flash" literature of the day.—Life Illustrated.

BOOT AND SHOE CLEANING MACHINE.

The proverb that "wonders shall never cease," and that this is the age of inventions," we saw confirmed on Wednesday, when we were shown the Boot and shoe cleaning machine invented and patented by Mr. Trought of Waterloo Street. The Machine does its work rapidly and in a cleanly manner—so much so, indeed, that we have been assured that, worked by a single person, it can clean over [illegible] pairs of boots of fifteen hours. The machine is wrought upon the principal of the turning-lathe, and has three circular brushes, which is kept going with the foot. By placing the shoe upon one wheel, and making a few revolutions, the dirt is removed; by holding the shoe in the same manner upon the second, the blacking is laid; and upon the third a polish is obtained.—There is little doubt that when the advantages of the machine are fully made known, the inventor will be rewarded for his ingenuity.—Glasgow Morning Herald.

LAMP CHIMNEYS.

The Scientific American says that the greatest expense and trouble connected with burning coal and petroleum oil arises from the frequent breaking of lamp chimneys. These are made of clear white glass, and are brittle to a proverb. They could be made of a stronger and cheaper glass, such as that used for making bottles. A patent has lately been taken out by Mr. Bailey, of Wolverhampton, England, for making such chimneys, and also lamp globes of a bottle glass moderately coloured to modify the intense glare of the flame. Oil merchants and refiners of coal oil should encourage such an improvement, as many coal oil would be saved and much light for the trouble experienced with the common chimney furnished for oil lamps.

SERVANT-GALORE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.—A letter from Victoria complains much of the want of domestic servants there. The writer says:—"the other day a lady, leaving her servant sitting over the drawing-room fire reading a book, said, "Mary, your rooms are not done; go and get them ready as soon as you can." "They ain't done, ain't they?" was the reply, "then I guess if you want 'em done you must go and do 'em yourself, for I ain't going to rise till I have finished this book."

"Bob, hear is your sweetheart getting along?"—"Pretty well; she says I needn't call any more."

AMONG the most important of modern Medical discoveries stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer. As a Family Medicine it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains from Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds Sore Throats, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbis, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost bites, &c.—The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single instance of dissatisfaction, where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its virtues and magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon it being a sovereign remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, incuring the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain Destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it.—Price only 25 cents per bottle All orders should be addressed to Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W.

THE FOUND WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S Neuralgia King!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE ROOT OF THE ailment, ARREST IT, KILLS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

DR. TAFFE'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

THE most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for the relief of all diseases of the Chest, such as Colds, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Asthma, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat, &c.

These Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who had tried other remedies in vain. Do not delay and all substitutions they may offer, but get the genuine article. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

ALBION HOTEL,

MONTREAL.

THE Proprietor of this well-known establishment, situated at the head of ST. PAUL-STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best travellers of both Provinces) become a great favorite, owing to their well-worthy of it by THE Business Hotel at Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made one commodious; there have been completed in the new wing a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now possesses good accommodation for the comfort of travellers. The whole of the beds have been refurnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor repeats that by continuing his personal management of the HOUSE, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it ever has been, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

A POETICAL DUN.

[The following lines, after the fashion of Longfellow's "Hiawatha," are worthy a place in our columns. Their authorship is unknown. We hope our readers will not be too highly wrought up by this effusion, although we recommend it to them as worth careful perusal:—

Should you ask us why this dunning,
Why these sad complaints and murmurs—
Murmurs loud about delinquents
Who have read the papers weekly,
Read what they have never paid for,
Read with pleasure and with profit,
Read of church affairs and prospects,
Read of news both home and foreign,
Read the essays and the poems,
Full of wisdom and instruction;
Read the table of the markets,
Carefully corrected weekly.

Should you ask us why this dunning,
We should answer, we should tell you
From the printer, from the mailer,
From the kind old paper-maker.
From the landlord, from the carrier,
From the man who takes the letters,
With a stamp from Uncle Samuel;
Uncle Sam the rowdies call him;
From them all there comes a message—
Message kind but firmly spoken,
"Please to pay us what you owe us."

Sad it is to hear such message,
When our funds are all exhausted,
When the last bank note has left us;
When the gold coin all has vanished;
Gone to pay the paper-maker,
Gone to pay the toiling printer,
Gone to pay the landlord tribute,
Gone to pay the faithful mailer,
Gone to pay old Uncle Samuel;
Uncle Sam the rowdies call him;
Gone to pay the Western papers,
Three and twenty hundred dollars.

Sad it is to turn our ledger,
Turn the leaves of this old ledger,
Turn and see what sums are due us,
Due for years of pleasant reading,
Due despite our patient waiting,
Due despite our constant dunning,
Due in sums from two to twenty.

Would you lift a burden from us?
Would you drive a spectre from us?
Would you taste a splendid slumber?
Would you have a quiet conscience?
Would you read a paper paid for?
Send us payment—send us payment,
Send us payment—send us payment,
Send the payment that you owe us!

A Woman's a Man for a' that.

What should we all have done, amid the dullness of last Wednesday evening, had it not been for the first appearance of the new bride, who, by the success which attended her debut in the Imperial ball room, might well be denominated the lion of the ball? The lady who became the cynosure of curious eyes on this occasion belongs neither to the diplomacy nor the aristocracy, but simply to one of the high functionaries of the press, and yet attracted more attention than those fairer and younger, and bearing the most illustrious names. Had you heard the exclamations which greeted her approach as she moved through the anxious groups on her husband's arm, you would have been astonished and perplexed at once.

The lady's walk, her air, her presence, and above all, her gestures, were examined and criticized in turn, and exclamations of that ignorant wonder which is so nettuses loud, and almost always offensive, in its expression, were heard on all sides. Great was our surprise, therefore, to behold a small, delicate figure, with pale worn features, and deep sunk eyes, which followed the rumour of astonishment at the boldness and coup age by which it appeared she had signalized herself and arrived at the position, considered in the French world of letters as a most enviable one, which she now occupies. On hearing the tale of her past life we, however, could not refuse to join in the same vulgar and the same ignorant surprise, and gathered together some few particulars which may amuse your readers.

It seems that Madame ——, the lady just united to the most influential member of the press, is celebrated under her maiden name throughout all Europe for her literary labors, and the erudite works which have issued from her p share been translated into every language. Her father was a savant of the good school, and had initiated her into the mysteries of the most abstruse of sciences, but scarcely into those of household economy of management, from the want of possessing which himself he left his daughter in the greatest destitution imaginable when he died. What can be accomplished in the like case—Sanscrit, Hebrew, Celtic, mathematics, comparative anatomy, ethics, and geometry, will not enable a young lady to arrive at the flourishing success in life to be obtained by pencil drawing, poonah-painting, and "pot-boiling," of our "salons." So the poor prodigy, after offering her talents in every direction without success, after disposing of her father's jewelled "plaques" of the Order of Merit, bestowed upon him by the King of Prussia, returning home one day to the garret where she had taken refuge on her benevolent, and sat down on her pallet to ruminate, in plain French, as to what was could be made of all her languages.—She had been that day to every mount in Paris. She had waded through mud and mire, and mounted flights upon flights of stairs, and—no objection—the same, the very same—had met her at every turn. Every savant in whose she addressed herself to obtain employment was enamoured of her learning—and each one pronounced her unpossible help of obtaining and teaching the humblest of science. She had been taught—she was an impostor, no more, no make-believe; but she was a woman!

As she revolved the different terms in which the objection had been expressed, these malignant interpretations of her, She suddenly started from her couch, and as the sudden inspiration seized her, torn off with certain marks the long tresses which seemed to form the locks of her head, and, as she put the fragments into the fire, exclaimed, "Ah! ah! clash enough had been her fortune, and which she deemed the sole remedy, at last, for her lonely fate, she threw herself on the floor, and in the paroxysm of rebellion, Wollstonecraft, Mary Astell, and indeed chiefly in the winter, they proved insufficient to exhaust her activity. The observations here made to were made with a small Montaigne scraper, constructed for her by her brother, with which, whenever his occasional absence, she say interruption to the regular course of observations permitted, she searched the heavens for comets, and that so effectively as on no less than eight several occasions to be rewarded by their discovery.—Women of Worth.

CIGARS AND NEWSPAPERS.

BY QUILL.

One fine day, nearly two years ago, I was taking a walk on one of the popular promenades in the city of ——, not quite a thousand miles from Peterborough, when I recollected that I lacked one of the number of subscribers that I had promised the proprietors of the Gem I would obtain and send them by the following day. I began to think in what manner I should obtain that one, and I finally resolved to ask the first person I should meet, with whom I was acquainted, to subscribe for it. I had scarcely formed this resolution when, to my great satisfaction, I saw coming towards me my old friend and school-mate Jas. Keene, now a promising young lawyer, who accosted me in his usual lively manner.

"Hollos, Doctor, is this you, my dear fellow? What's puzzling your brain now, eh? How do you do?"

"I am very well, thank you," I replied; "just the man of all others that I wished to see at this particular time; how are you my dear Keene?"

"Just the man you wanted to see? Well what can be the matter with you, son of Æsculapius, to require the services of a disciple of Blackstone, eh? What is the grievance, Hall?

"Well, to tell you the truth Keene, I promised some days ago to send twenty-five new subscribers by to-morrow to the proprietor of the Gem, and I have just this moment discovered that I have only twenty-four yet, and I want you to make the twenty-fifth."

"Well, upon my word, Hall, you have taken me quite aback! I am very sorry indeed that I cannot help you out of your difficulty. I really cannot afford to take any more papers than I do now."

"Why so, Keene? It won't cost you much; only fifty cents a-year. How many papers do you take, pray, that you cannot afford another one?"

"Well, let me see. There are three Quarterlies, and four Monthlies; three weeklies, and five dailies, besides a number of other papers that I get from my friends; and, to tell you the truth, I do not care a great deal about such papers as the Gem."

Seeing that I should not gain anything by the present argument I studied for a moment and then resolved to accomplish my object by stratagem. I walked on by his side for a few minutes, discussing passing events; the conversation about the paper being mutually abandoned, and I think forgotten by him. I determined to take him by surprise. He was smoking a cigar, and I remarked in an abstracted manner, "that's a famous cigar you are smoking, Keene.—Where did you purchase it?"

"I got it at Johnson's, in North street. He keeps the best in the city. I would have offered you one long ago only I knew you did not like them; won't you try just one."

"Thank you, Keene, I don't care about one just now; how much do they cost?"

"Only five cents each."

"I suppose you smoke a good many of them, they are so cheap."

"Well, I suppose about six a day on an average."

"Six a day, hem? How long have you smoked at that rate, eh?"

"Well I don't exactly know, but I suppose about five years."

"Now then, my dear sir, will you be so kind as to tell me why you have, as you must yourself acknowledge during the past five years worse than thrown away what would be to many a man quite a fortune, and yet when I ask you to give 50 cents a year for a good paper, come out and with the utmost gravity possible say you can't afford it! Why, the idea is perfectly preposterous."

"Be kind enough to explain yourself, my dear sir; I don't understand you."

"Gladly will I do so, Keene. In the first place you say you smoke six cigars a day, and in the second place that they cost you five cents each. Now it just amounts to this, that you smoke in two days more than would get you the Gem for one year. Your cigars just cost you 30 cents a day, $2.10 a week, or $102.20 a year; and this in five years amounts to the round sum of $546! You have just thrown away $546 and then come to me with your expressions of sorrow, &c., that you cannot afford fifty cents a year for a paper."

"Confound you Hall, you have caught me there. Hush, take your fifty cents and send me the Gem. Cost me the cigars, just to think that I have spent over $500 for them in so short a time; it does beat the devil. Say Hall, what put the idea into your head?"

"Well, I hardly know, but somebody or other I thought they must cost something, and I knew they did so generally so I thought I would find out what they cost, and calculate how much a year I was throwing away for nothing, and now I have gratified my curiosity.

"Yes, and done it at my expense. Well, I guess this is the last cigar I will smoke for one while, but, confound it, still I cannot resist the temptation to—hand it, ah do not delight."

"There it goes again, Keene, as delicious as ever."

"Well, I think you have done enough for one time, Hall, so you have got your dollar and fifty cents. Hand the cigars."

A FUNNY EDITOR.

The editor of the Kentucky Whig, published at Mount Sterling, having set out on a journey, the gentleman left in charge of the office thus announced to the readers of the journal his temporary incumbency of the robes editorial:

We are happy to announce that the editorship—the responsible editorship—the fighting editorship—has gone away to be gone three weeks. He has not, however, left his paper in the condition of a western exchange, which comes to us headed, "the editor gone—the devil at the helm"—but has left us in charge. Perhaps you don't know us.—Sorry for you. But bring a box of cigars and a bottle of old Bourbon, and we will allow you the honor of our acquaintance! We don't say so in the editorial sense.—We are not exactly; as Mrs. Malaprop says, "three in one," but there are two of us. The editor, knowing our propensities, has coupled us with another chap. "Set a thief to catch a thief." We commend his wisdom!

He has left us to fulfil all his duties. We shall, therefore, drink all the editorial whiskey, smoke all editorial cigars, and visit the editorial sweetheart at least three times a week. The public will perceive that we labor under no doubt as to our ability to perform the editorial functions.

If any enthusiastic admirer of the editor wants to present him with a suit of clothes, we would suggest that now would be an appropriate time. If anybody owes him, by settling now, he may be assured of a correct "balance" on the books, and subscribes a small discount, as we are out of change, and the editor has exhausted all his credit for "fixin'" refreshments.

Any bouquets or pound cakes prepared for the editor by the fair and gentle sex, and which would be likely to spoil before his return, may be sent to us, with the positive assurance that the editor shall—never never know anything about them. Should we hear of any that are not sent, we shall not fail to animadvert severely upon the circumstance in our next.

Finally, if any young ladies are in the habit of receiving calls from the editor, they will, by leaving their names at this office, be properly attended to during his absence.

P. S.—We don't know who keeps the best hats in Town, but we shall know if we should find a new seven-and-a-quarter lying on our table some day.

SCENE IN A POLICE COURT.

The prisoner in this case, whose name is Dicky Swivel, alias, "Stove Pipe Pete," was placed at the bar, and questioned by the Judge to the following effect;

Judge——"Bring the prisoner into the court."

Pete—"Here I am, bound to blaze, as the spirits of turpentine said when it was on fire."

"We will take a little of the fire out of you. How do you like?

"I ain't particular, as the oyster said when they asked him if he'd rather be roasted or fried."

"We don't want to hear what the oyster said or the spirits of turpentine either.—What do you follow?"

"Anything that comes in my way, as the locomotive said, when it run over a little nigger."

"We don't care anything about the locomotive. What is your business?"

"That's various, as the cat said when she stole the chicken off the table."

"If I hear any more absurd comparisons, I will give you twelve months."

"I'm done, as the beefsteak said to the cook."

"Now, sir, your punishment depends on the shortness and correctness of your answers. I suppose you live by going around the docks."

"No, sir, I don't go around the docks without a boat, and I ain't got none."

"Answer me, sir; how do you get your daily bread?"

"Sometimes at the baker's and sometimes I eat crackers."

"No more of your stupid nonsense; how do you support yourself?"

"Sometimes on my legs, and sometimes on a chair."

"How do you keep yourself alive?"

"By breathing, sir."

"I order you to answer this question correctly; how do you do?"

"Pretty well, I thank you Judge. How are you?"

"I shall have to commit you."

"Well, you've committed yourself that's some consolation."

A BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.

HEAVY DAMAGES FOR PLAINTIFF.

The Cleveland Plaindealer gives the following history of a breach of promise case, which has just been settled in the Cleveland Courts:

"The case of Henrietta D. Collins vs. Rufus Paine, for breach of marriage engagement, which has just been settled in the plaintiff's favor. The evidence disclosed that Collins is a wealthy shoe dealer of Lima, this county, Ohio, and that in 1860 he became acquainted with the plaintiff, a young widow of twenty, at Fleeting Snow-in, Philadelphia, he being sixty years old, and proposed marriage to her, stating that he was worth from $100,000 to $150,000. The proposals were accepted, and they returned to Philadelphia, where they were married by Rev. Mr. Paine, brother of the respondent, and returned to Lima, where they lived together for the space of about two months, when Collins left for Cleveland, on business connected with the estate of his wife, and after circumstances, remarks of the suspicion in her mind that something was wrong, and she wrote to her mother that her conduct rendered her unhappy. The mother procured the Quaker Society of Philadelphia to write to that of Lima and received an answer that he was no Quaker at all, but an infamous old scoundrel, and had a wife and three children living within a mile of his house; that he had been in the habit of keeping house women about him, and the neighbours supposed this one to be of like character. The mother—Mrs. Hoge—proceeded immediately to Lima, and dashed on wife No. 1, who stated that she had been married to Paine more than 20 years, that he had lived with her as a wife until within two or three years, and that these were their children. The mother forthwith took away her daughter and came to Cleveland for legal advice, when it was decided that the daughter should remain here until redress could be had; and service was obtained upon Paine in this county, and also a petition for a divorce.—In January last, after the suit was commenced, this deluded and injured woman died of grief, and the suit was continued by her sister as administratrix—a very interesting girl of 18, named Sarah Louise. The evidence was conclusive as to the pure character of the plaintiff, and of her amiable and correct deportment. The defence set up was that no marriage had ever taken place between Paine and Narcissa Aldrich, the woman that he had lived with for 20 years and every way recognized as a wife—and that he was capable and did perform the marriage contract with Henrietta D. Collins. In this attempt to render himself still more infamous and to degrade the woman he had so long lived with, and to bastardize his children, he was repulsed by a verdict worthy of a jury of the county of Cuyahoga.

THE BLACKBIRD.

When a blackbird once learns tune, he never forgets it, nor any part of it. I once knew a bird that could whistle "Polly Hopkins" with wonderful accuracy. His owner sold him, at the same time making the purchaser acquainted with the bird's favorite tune. As soon as the gentleman got him home, he at once hung up the blackbird, and going to the piano, struck up "Polly Hopkins." The bird's new master, however, introduced parts into the tune that he had never heard before; so, after listening awhile, he began hissing, fluttering his wings and otherwise signifying his distaste of the whole performance. Much surprised, the gentleman left off playing, and then the blackbird opened its throat, and favored his new master with his version of "Polly Hopkins," nor would he ever listen with patience to any other version. The same blackbird, after staying in service of the above mentioned gentleman for two years, was adopted by a serious family, where "Polly Hopkins," and all such profanity, were sedulously avoided. Whenever poor "Joe" (the Blackbird's name,) attempted to strike up the old tune, a cloth was thrown over the cage, and he was silenced. The family consisted of an old lady and her two daughters, and every night, at seven o'clock, prayers were read, and the "Evening Hymn" sung; and Joe, who was an obedient bird, and anxious to conform to habits of the house, speedily learned the tune, and regularly whistled it while the old lady and her daughters sang it. This went on for six or seven years, when the mother died, and the daughters separated, and Joe now an aged blackbird, fell into new hands; but to his dying day he never gave up the "Evening Hymn." Punctually as the clock struck seven he tuned up, and went straight through with it with the gravity of a parish clerk.—Boston's Home Pets.

THE ANGELIC DOCTOR.

Our friend and contributor, Dr Cumming, has delivered a lecture at Manchester on the old subject. He sticks to it that 1867 will see the world end in some way, and will at least, be the end of all chronology; and if we exist, it will be in an unchronological period. We have not the least idea what this sort of living will be, or whether it will hurt much; but one thing is quite certain, namely, that if there is no more time, preachers will not be able to waste time in talking intolerable nonsense. Further, Dr Cumming declares that, whatever change may be wrought in us, he, for one, does not desire to be an angel. Dr Cumming, for shame, Sir! Meek Modesty is a mark of bad breeding. And you did not know that you are an angel already! Ask the ladies of your flock, pe ould dissembler! Flap yer wings, ye ould deluder, and stop that sort of thing!—Punch.

COAXING UP AN EXPRESSION.

A bevy of "players" anxious to secure each other's shillings ere the substance faded, stopped into the Ambrotype Car of our friend Williams, one day last week to get for their "pictures." The lady gave precedence to her weak, wild, she said, and got to be both fish and real natural." He brushed up the raw head of hair, gave a twist or two to his handkerchief, tested the spot of the best collar looked about X, and then commenced his operator's chair where he mentioned the physiognomical characteristics of a poor mortal in a dentist's hands, and about to part with one of its ivories. "Now look pretty!" begged the lady coaxing at him one of her most languishing glances. The picture was taken, and when produced, it astonished the girl, as the experiment is, "just to see what effect they'd get over the operation;" and as this was not as easy as the last sitter's, Williams particularly wooing for commemoration, she insisted that "he should make it look pretty." He obliged and astonished that to the chair.

The next fellow who came in was a dudeen fellow, with a "pug" nose and a "pug" dog. "Now look pretty!" was the request, and the dog was put on the lap of the sitter, and the nose of the dog was put on the nose of the sitter, and the dog looked pretty, but the sitter looked as if he would like to bite the dog. "Now look pretty!" was the request, and the dog looked pretty, but the sitter looked as if he would like to bite the dog. "Now look pretty!" was the request, and the dog looked pretty, but the sitter looked as if he would like to bite the dog.

Reporters generally do not smile. They set up to be high caste and themselves that they don't find experience until the thirst is closed.

Go to strangers for charity, to acquaintances for credit, and to relatives for nothing, and you will often succeed.

It has been said that the three sweetest words in the English language are—home, home and heaven. About these cling the most touching associations, and with them are connected the sublimest aspirations.

SHALL WE CHANGE OUR OPINIONS.

The other day we overheard a pompous and very self-satisfied looking gentleman exclaim in a rather loud tone of voice, to a weak nerved looking individual: "I am no weather-cock, sir! What I have once I believe always. I never change my opinions. When you see me once you see me always." We set that pompous man down as one born out of due season. He belongs to the age of the Ptolmies and should have been mummified three thousand years ago. According to his own confession he knows no more to-day than when he was a boy.—There are several more of this kind of deluded gentlemen among us, who never learn anything since they left the primary school. They are always right and every body is wrong. They are snags in the river of life, and will neither move on themselves nor permit, if they can help it, any body else to move.

Dr. Johnson once said,—"When a man changes his opinion he only acknowledges that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday."

We humbly bow to the great man's decision. He who on Tuesday believes on all subjects precisely as he did on Monday, has lost a day. The sun may have stood still in Joshua's time, but it doesn't do anything of the sort in our day. Everything moves onward and upward. Change, change, change, is the programme of the times.

If Watt and Fulton had been unchangeable, we might never have known the luxury of ocean and river steamers.

If Huskisson and Stephenson had not been weather-cocks, we might still be travelling in stage-coaches.

If Daguerre had learned only what he was first taught, we might yet have been charged thirty or forty dollars for an ordinary miniature.

TAKING HIM DOWN A PEG.

The other day a group of newly arrived British soldiers stood on the sidewalk opposite the "Royal" at Hamilton, when a real son of Brother Jonathan standing near by and observing several of the soldiers having decorations on their breasts—medals, clasps, and ribbons—slapped up to them, and with that inquisitiveness which characterizes his countrymen, struck up a conversation, and began to put a series of interrogations, the following being those which most amused us:—

Jonathan—"I just come out from England, eh?"

Soldier—(tipping his hat) "Yes sir."

Jonathan—"I 'calculate you have a good many decorations on your breast. Where did you win them?"

Soldier—"At Balaclava, Sebastopol, Inkerman, and in India and China, sir."

Jonathan—"No doubt you feel proud of them, don't you?"

Soldier—"Yes sir."

Jonathan—"I expect you calculated to go right to fighting when you came to America, didn't you?"

Soldier—"Yes sir."

Jonathan—"I reckon you thought you would get another medal for licking those Yankees, didn't you?"

Soldier—"Oh! no sir. We might get a clasp, or a ribbon, or some such thing, sir, for beating the Yankees, but we could not get a medal, sir. I am quite sure."

At this stage of the conversation, Brother Jonathan turned on his heel and entered the "Royal," evidently quietly let down in his own estimation.

3. Then all the second letters of each word spells the second word.

4. Then all the third; and so on through the fourth and fifth.

5. Then commencing with the last letter of each word spells the last word.

6. Then the next to the last of each word, and so on through.

10,000 men, which will be reinforced as the exigencies of the service may require. Though his new district is rough and rugged, forbidding the use of heavy artillery or cavalry save within narrow limits, it affords ample scope for intelligence, energy, and patriotic daring, and its opportunities will not pass unimproved.

From the day of his assignment as a Major-General of Volunteers to the command of the department of the Mississippi, Gen. Fremont has been honored with the deadliest hate, not only of avowed and manly traitors, but of all who in the loyal States sympathized with the Southern rebels and at heart desired their success.—Tens of thousands who would regret to see the country divided and shorn of power or position, are still so infatuated with affection for our National cancer, or rather so anxious to renew their profitable alliance with those who control and influence it, that they deprecate any vindication of the National authority which shall utterly discomfit and prostrate the rebels. They would have the rebellion gently but firmly pressed on every side in overwhelming force, its armies compelled to give ground without fighting, its resources exhausted or plainly outmatched, until its leaders, convinced that they cannot fulfil their original purpose, shall be willing to accept instead a "re-construction"—that is, such new concessions to and guarantees for Slavery as shall enable them to turn to a semblance of loyalty with the port and influence of conquerors—of men who, having gone to war for their "rights," and obtained them, though not in the precise fashion that they had originally contemplated. The champions of such a "reconstruction" instinctively recognized in Gen. Fremont their implacable adversary. Even before his famous Proclamation, proferring freedom to the slaves of all rebels in arms against the authority and forces of the Union, they so regarded him; but the appearance of that manifesto confirmed and embittered their hostility. Had he been as wise and as provident as Washington their malignity would not have been abated.

Gen. Fremont was relieved of his Western command and required to report himself promptly at Washington. The order reached him at Springfield, to which point he had chased the flying columns of Sterling Price and McCulloch, delivering seven eighths of Missouri from rebel devastations. Experienced officers had confidently asserted his inability to proceed further than Warsaw and the Osage, for want of transportation, and because of the deep mire of the prairie roads. He calmly refuted their prophecies, and was close on the track of the rebel chiefs when the order of recall reached him. He believed that he could have compelled them to fight immediately; it is certain that they must either have met him in battle or been ignominiously chased out of the State. Had he beaten them or chased them out without fighting, he was fully determined to follow them to the Mississippi or to Texas. The rains were over; the Autumn skies were bright and genial; the roads were now in good order. But a clamor had been raised against him which seemed to require his recall, and the order was given. Many predicted that he would disregard it, and press on at the head of his devoted and enthusiastic army. He quietly turned over his command to the officer designated to receive it, entreated all to render implicit obedience to their new chief, and returned to St. Louis and to Washington.

For months he silently awaited the injustice in which he never lost faith; he was not tried, for no charges were preferred against him; but the appointment by Congress of a Joint Committee of Inquiry into the Conduct of the War, at length afforded him the coveted opportunity. He was called before that Committee, whereof the eminent Senator Wade of Ohio was Chairman, and thoroughly examined with regard to the incidents of his brief but eventful command. The Committe were not left to grope blindly; for an Investigating Committee of the House had spent some time at St. Louis in Gen. Fremont's absence, and had placed on record all the one-sided testimony that could be raked up to his prejudice. With the testimony before them, the Joint Committee went carefully over the whole ground, and the result was a decided and hearty vindication of Gen. Fremont, and a strong recommendation to the President that he be restored to command. That recommendation has been complied with, to the great satisfaction of nearly all the friends of the Administration and of others who concur with them in ardently desiring that the overthrow of the rebellion shall be unqualified and exemplary.

It is a cheering truth that, through all his hours of darkness and depression, when alienated of position and power, when influential politicians and a leading press which had formerly been foremost in his support were leagued in his depreciation, and when the Pro-Slavery organs and oracles were baying in full chorus on his track, the popular heart never wavered, but beat warmly and trustfully for J. C. Fremont. No rebukeand of detraction, no seeking unanimity in denunciation, could shake the popular conviction that, though he is liable to mistakes, like all fallible mortals, his impulses are noble and just, and his heart true to his Country, to Humanity, and to Freedom. And in the new sphere of duty now opening before him, the prayers of millions will invoke blessings on the head of the heroic Pathfinder, while leading across the Alleghanies the brave and true men who advanced to crush out red-handed treason and restore the benignant sway of Order and Liberty.

QUEBEC CORRESPONDENCE

Of the Cornwall Freeholder.

The first Session of the Seventh Provincial Parliament was duly opened for the dispatch of business on Friday last, by a speech from the Throne strikingly non-committal in its character. The attendant circumstances were of the usual kind, but depended upon the occasion, out-doors, by the presence of a great number of the volunteer companies recently called into existence, including two troops of cavalry, acting as an escort to the Governor General on his going to and returning from the Parliament House, all highly creditable in their appearance and discipline. And, in-doors, by the unusual magnificence of all the appointments of the Council Chamber, and the blooming beauty of the Governor General's family, along with a few others of the same essential kind, and Sir Fenwick Williams, with the steel brilliant staff that has graced the victorious presentations of the shining chest of valor twice in each year, which added new and memorable interest to the opening ceremony. Lord Monck, Colonel Gray, the private Military secretary, delivered the speech in a manner not well pitched voice, which must have carried pleasantness to every ear in the commodious Council Chamber, as it did, every syllable but of little importance, to the remotest corner of the crowded room in the gallery, and on the floor of the Council Chamber, in which I was seated that the Secretary of the Province of Canada, Mr. French was particularly quiet, showing him to be a person of considerable discretion, and perhaps some glimpse of hope. But it is for what it may herald and not for what it is.

Mr. Russell's correspondence in the Times is again dated from Washington, enters down [illegible] the wealth of pro-South McClellan's advance. He praises the constancy and tenacity of the Confederates. He says the Northern troops were getting weary of the war, and clamorous for furloughs.

The Magistrates of Sunderland issued a warrant for the apprehension of Frederick Colborne Curtis, said to be a General in the Federal army, who two years ago left his wife and children, chargable on the Parish of Sunderland.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE JURA.

Portland, March 31.

The steamship Jura has arrived. She left Liverpool at 1.20 p. m., on the 20th, and Londonderry 21st. She brings 174 passengers.

President Lincoln's communication marriage had attracted much attention in England. Little time yet for newspaper comment.

The Liverpool Post says there can be no doubt but it will have an unmistakable effect on Europe, and that the effect will be unfavorable to the Northern cause.

The London Times, in an editorial on the subject says it is the most important news since the split. The President's avowed object is to recover to the Union the border States. The proposal is important, not for its intrinsic likelihood of acceptance, but simply because it is a proposition, and is the first bid made towards putting an end to the war. We may hope others may follow, and that the North may gradually raise its offers until something acceptible has been put forth. The ruling party of the South to President Lincoln has been a dissolution of the Confederate Union of Slave constitution, to leave all the Cotton and Tobacco that may be in danger of falling into the hands of the invaders. To every point of view improvement of the Present state affords great scope for speculation, and perhaps some glimpse of hope. But it is for what it may herald and not for what it is.

BUTTER.

Although there is an improvement, within the last year or two, in the manufacture and preparation of Butter for market, there is still room for improvement. We might also produce a quality of butter from this section equal to what is made in the Eastern Townships of Lower Canada and the neighborhood of Brockville and Smith's Falls, if not equal to Jefferson County, State of New York. Our grazing is not inferior to theirs, and it only wants more care, with very little more labor, to warrant a certainty of obtaining one penny or two-pence per lb. over what is now procured for that can be made. This is a loss to the County which there is no excuse for. It is a pity to waste good material by negligent, or improper management. A merchant in Montreal remarks:—

"Many lots of butter now coming to hand would be ruined by a single week's strong weather, either in transit or in store, in consequence of want of care in curing and packing, and the want of the very necessary clean rag on top, and salt over it. Packers have very little idea how much they are out of pocket by neglecting little things in packing butter; they lose in weight, in price, and in time, as a good lot sells at once, and a poor lot has to wait patiently for a bare market, ere buyer who wants to fill an order regardless of quality. Different colours in the same packages should be avoided, and the packer should remember he is putting up butter, and not kneading dough. On drawing out the taster, a buyer likes to see butter sharp, bright, firm, regular, and rather high in color, leaving the back of the taster clear, and without milk. Different colors and too much working in packing will not assist in procuring this.—Avoid boring and use fine Liverpool salt; coarse salt only injures the price."

THE MOTIFS WING.

Touch with a camel's hair brush any part of the wing, so as to remove scales, dab the brush on a pane of glass, put it under the microscope, and then see how each particle of the almost imperceptible and impalpable coloured dust which clothes the wings becomes manifest as an elegantly formed scale sculptured with designs of singular beauty and regularity, formed of at least two, if not three separate membranes, and waved, toothed, or fringed at the extremity, according to its position on the wing. Just consider how many hundreds of thousands of scales are needed to cover a surface so great, and the inconceivable care which is required, not only in making them but in setting them in rows more regular than the slates on a house top, each overlapping the other, and arranged so as to defend the delicate membrane of the wing from moisture. You cannot wet a moth's wing with water, for it runs off in drops as if the wings were covered with oil.—St. James' Magazine.

HORRIBLE MURDER AT SARNIA.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A horrible murder was perpetrated near Sarnia, on Monday evening. Four men had been drinking at a saloon in Sarnia. A quarrel arising from some dispute in regard to politics, the men went outside to settle their difference by a fight. The saloon-keeper followed them out and succeeded in separating them, when one of them, named Burke, immediately started for his boarding place, a tavern about a mile distant from the village. On reaching it, he went to his room, and taking from his carpet-bag a dirk knife, came down stairs and stated to the inmates of the house that he would cut somebody up with it. Those present endeavoured, unsuccessfully, to prevent him from leaving the house. Going out he waited until the men with whom he had the quarrel in the village came along on their return home, when he rushed upon them and commenced cutting and slashing indiscriminately, in the most savage manner. One man received a thrust which pierced his hands, but was otherwise uninjured. The murdered man received two fearful stabs, one in the neck and a second in the left breast, the knife penetrating to the heart. He staggered a few steps into the house, and immediately fell dead upon the treshold. The murderer was promptly arrested, without resistence, and placed in confinement. He is comparatively unknown in the vicinity where he lived, having only taken up his residence there last autumn. At the time he arrived in Sarnia he was dressed in the United States uniform, and it is supposed by some that he is a deserter from the army.

—A Richmond correspondent of the Charleston Courier throws considerable light upon the whiskey question in Virginia. He says that "within six months two hundred additional distilleries have been established in Virginia, and that they are buying up all the corn, their profits being so enormous that they can afford to pay the highest price for it." He next describes the peculiar virtues of this corn whiskey upon the human system:—"It carbonizes (or burns into a crust) the mucous membrane of the windpipe, sets the brain on fire, and sends a cold tremor through the system." A soldier taking half a dozen nips is drunk for a week, and a second or third repetition of this experiment drives the breath out of his body."

—The Rochester Democrat says that the schooner Maple Leaf at Charlotte, was washed from her moorings on Wednesday night, and blew out to sea. Captain Westmacott was the only man on board. Many fears are entertained for his safety.

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA. In all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering from these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

Poetry.

MY HAME FAR O'ER THE WAVE.

BY THE LATE MRS. J. WEBB.

In life's bright sunny morn,
When joy came at ilka ca',
I little cared how fleng or lood
Misfortune's blasts might blaw;
I wove a garland for my hair,
O' the gowan and wild rose,
At my auld hame far o'er the wave,
Where the bonnie heather grows.

That garland has been withered lang;
My heart is marred and cauld;
Hope lends nae glimmering ray to guide
The wanderer to the fauld.
Yet, oft at midnight's murky hour,
When sunk in deep repose,
And fancy wafts me o'er the wave
Where the bonnie heather grows.

Again I see the hawthorn tree,
I hear the lark's wild sang;
Again I rove, wi' spirits light,
My native glens amang.
The burnie wimples at my feet;
Content its essence throws
Around my hame far o'er the wave
Where the bonnie heather grows.

'Tis but a dream. The foaming wave
Rolls darkly far between
The land where fate has cast my lot
And the bonnie glens nae green.
And memory's a' that's left me, now,
Of the hours of sweet repose
That once were mine in life's young morn,
Where the bonnie heather grows.

LECTURE ON "PRACTICAL TEACHING."

Who should we in this land say I am an Englishman, I an Irishman, and I a Scotchman, when in reality we are all of the same race, and our ancestors besides nothing to boast of.

The Islands of the West were, in the days of the Romans, nothing but forest and mountain, moor, marsh, bog or loch. London signifies a Mound in a marsh, and when Cæsar saw it, it was really such, the marsh extending from above London to the sea, upwards of 70 miles. Dublin signifies the Black Pool, and Edinburgh Watertown, being surrounded by lochs at the North and a marsh on the East and West. So that our ancestors literally wandered,

Over Moor, over Mire;
Through Bog, through Brier.

Nor were the people better than the country. The Britons were savages like the red Indians, nearly naked, tattooed, offering human sacrifices and eating human flesh, in the Pillard Temples in the dark forest. The Saxons, the Danes, and the Normans were all of similar origin and character, fierce and savage heathens.

What then made Britain what it is?—Education. Education made the people and the place, made the plan of their habitation glorious, towards which now the nations in their darkest days look for light.

But who made the Education? It was God: who sent his Son, who gave us the Holy Spirit, who sustained his Church, and at the reformation began in modern times, that enlightenment which shall one day illuminate the world.

The importance of Education here appears; for that which made Britain what it is, can make Canada, if the people are only wise enough to improve their privileges and opportunities, a still greater, and better name, and that you may see that this may be done I purpose setting before you, under the name of "Practical Teaching" the successive stages of progress through which the Schools of Scotland passed, from the rudest to the highest state, and in doing this I shall only have given you a specimen of the same progress in every land, for this is every where the same.

The first school to which I refer is that of Kilkenny, where Dr. Chalmers spent about 11 years of his Ministry, and where my father was educated. It was a rough stone building, unlathed, about eight feet high, and roofed with thatch and turf; the floor was earth with many holes worn by the feet, where the water stood in wet weather, from which the children caught a complaint that disappeared after the flooring became impervial. His yearly salary was so small that he had to eke it out with a loom, which he kept going, while the scholars stood round it and read in their turn. This was in the end of the 18th century, and was the Common School of earlier times.

The next school is Dairsie. This was slightly better built, and been lighted with about four lights, on each side, of which stood at one double table, the desk at the Fireplace and a fire-table for the "little ones" learning their A, B, C. Above the Bible lessons, Testament lessons, and writing-books were over it was the time to study, and about Mr. Young usually himself on his throne, overlooking, and with the usual taskmaster's hard on hand (B—y—stool—Z—Z—rod), and occasionally on the rostrum. The classes met at the tables working problems both, one with the other, the teacher over the whole. The scholars met the Bible lessons and the school examination in the most elegant. Most time the Bible lessons were learned by heart, and the scholars they examined in the Shorter and Larger Catechisms, and the Proverbs, and Psalms, and Paraphrases, and Confession of Faith, and Church History, and Geography with maps, grammar, composition, book-keeping, land measuring, Latin and French, which were all thoroughly taught, especially the arithmetic, in which we attained such facility as to do almost two hundred figures a minute, and thought ourselves equal to any scholars in the world. The school was of hewn stone, lathed and plastered inside, high roofed, and boarded floor, the tables round the wall all sloping down to accomodate a hundred, in space for fifty. The teaching of this school has not been much exceeded; the board, maps, globes, theodolite, and chain forms, &c.

Upwards of twenty scholars went from this school to Cupar Academy, of which I was one. The buildings here were larger, and not on two sides of a square. The teachers were superior scholars and all came to higher eminence—Hay, Smith, Scott—and here we were taught in a more digested style and scale, but not much differently from the former manner, except that now we had a teacher for each branch,—arithmetic, English, writing, and classics, while sewing, &c., was taught by a lady to the girls. The Academy was then in the height of its fame. But the teachers were too independent for the parents, and they were dismissed by paying them so much money. The teachers got better places, but the Academy fell, never to rise for more than 20 years,—nor yet, so far as I know, the town hals were very conceited, they disdained to be seen with the country boys in the street, though their superiors in school. But their pride had a fall. One of the proudest died in a ditch, and of the others only one or two got along respectably in after life. True it is "a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame."

The only other school to be mentioned is the St. Andrew's Madras College. Before game came into me St. Andrews was a strong city—the capital of Scotland, at least ecclesiastically—and very regularly built for the times, consisting of four or five parallel streets with cross wynds. On South street, broad and handsome, guarded at either end by a Port, or fortified gate—and near the West end is the Madras College, the first school in Scotland, capable of accomodating two or three thousand scholars. The building is all of hewn stone and very solid, is only one story high on three sides of the square, which has a portico inside without windows, so as to prevent both breaking and noise. The front none has two storeys with bow windows and carved figures. In the upper flat is the classical hall with its adjoining class rooms at the ends; the other three sides were English right opposite; and arithmetic and writing at the ends. The teachers were the best in Scotland,—and Carmichael, Crichton and Millar in particular, were equal to any Professors. The first two had handsome houses, and with salary, fees and boarders had upward of £1,000 a year, with a position not surpassed for dignity in the world. For with one thousand set others, half of them from all parts of the world, what situation could be more honorable.

The teachers were all great men, but the admission of the College was the English school, taught by Crichton. The order was admirable. In one room some six hundred scholars, under monitors as teachers, and an assistant to keep order, were divided into some fifteen or eighteen classes, and these were heard by a teacher every hour, ten minutes being allowed to hear the reading, spelling and meaning, which went on so quickly that it is amazing how it was ever kept up; and yet so perfect was the discipline that I have frequently seen Mr. Crichton exhibiting one class on its visitors, while all the others were going round and round, with sound scarcely louder than a hive of bees. The progress was great, the attainments scarcely surpassed, but the discipline was killing—not that there was much punishment, but the awful energy of the teacher bore his scholars off their very feet, as it did all around him. He was literally killing himself, and that out of the most benevolent but not well considered zeal, for learning is nothing when the health is undermined. Here also, after a time, the envy of the parents at the teacher's prosperity, produced a revolution in the school; the teachers all got better situations, in point of comfort and honor, but the Institution fell, and at last accounts about four or five hundred scholars were attending it.

Here therefore I close my remarks, to draw a few useful lessons from the foregoing observations, for what to Canadians are Kilmarny, Dairsie, Cupar or St. Andrews, but empty names, unless what was done there can be applied to our own circumstances.

First then we may learn that it is better for children to learn a few things well, than a great many things imperfectly. The child in Dairsie School learned to read in six months, in the Madras it took twelve months to learn the alphabet, the child's mind being here drenched with stupefying showers, instead of being, as in the former, only lightly touched with sprinkling dew.

2. The evil of changing schools or teachers unnecessarily. Attendance in the Establishment of growth. Dawson and Logie scholars took the desk in their classes at Cupar and St. Andrews,—most encouraging progression continued to flourish under many changes of masters, either at Cupar, each St. Andrews fell through making the teachers dependent on the parents.

3. The value of using a book, however inferior to your own system or method of teaching, which carries the teacher's and pupil in sympathy with the teacher, so that the knowledge acquired sanctions so quickly as it comes, that the many books on the same subject is a mistake and folly as it does to have a dozen Watches and Clocks going—each differing from the other, and little of the same time. The greatest scholars I ever knew studied in the days of the old Parochial schools. Dr. Hamilton, Professor Gregory, Professor Tennant, and Lord Gardenstone were educated at the old Parochial schools of Old Aberdeen, and Dr. Hamilton at the last century—which plainly shows that it is with the Church that finished the education in other days than the present.

THE LATE NAVAL BATTLE.

(College of New York Professor.)

March 15, 1862.

The Monitor left the Navy Yard, New York, Thursday, March 6th. The vessel had been for several days under repairs and ready for a start, but delay after delay occurred, much to the disappointment of all on board. When on Thursday the order was given to start, both officers and men were very much delighted.

The only friend the Monitor had at the Navy Yard was the glorious and patriotic Commodore Paulding; all others looked upon her as an intruder. Not the slightest assistance, except such as will yield to imperative orders, was rendered this "ugly experiment." At last, however, the Monitor started; she steamed slowly down the Bay, and when nearly abreast of Fort Hamilton, the tug boat Seth Low, which had been detailed for the purpose, made fast to us by a long and strong hawser. It was not necessary under ordinary circumstances, that the iron clad Monitor should be assisted by a tow boat, but under the circumstances it was eminently judicious, and as it turned out afterwards, it was very fortunate for both the vessels and the country that one accompanied her. All those who have observed the Monitor will have noticed that she is but eighteen inches from the level of the water when ready for sea, and that her smoke and blower pipes are not very high.

The vessel proceeded safely and comfortably until the afternoon of Sunday, March 9, when the weather, which had been for some hours threatening, broke into a severe gale; this the vessel itself did not mind at all, but unfortunately the pipe which led to the blowers came down so terrific, entirely destroying the draught, and driving the gas in large quantities into the fire and engine room. This proved nearly fatal to Assistant Engineer Campbell, and Chief Engineer, Isaac Newton; both these gentlemen were taken from the fire room insensible. The Chief Engineer, Isaac Newton, appreciating the urgency of the case, after being restored by a few gulps of fresh air, very injudiciously returned, to endeavor to do what was possible to remedy the evil. He fell, overcome by the noxious gases, and was removed by a fireman. Chief Engineer Stimers now took charge, and after some hard work, the fan in the steamer blower was connected by hand power, and soon the engineers were relieved. At about nine o'clock on Sunday night the iron Monitor steamed through the fleet of ships, except such as will yield to imperative orders, was received this "ugly experiment." At last, however, the Monitor started; she steamed slowly down the Bay, and when nearly abreast of Fort Hamilton, the tug boat Seth Low, which had been detailed for the purpose, made fast to us by a long and strong hawser. At about nine o'clock on Sunday night the iron Monitor steamed through the fleet of ships, and was quickly out of sight. When I began to teach at 17 in Kemback, my scholars felt school a relief and pleasure from the severe discipline of home, and I then was their best friend. But when I closed my teachings in Davidson's Mains the scholars though they obeyed and learned more easily had not the same relish for school, and regarded me as a tyrant, because at home they could do as they liked. Home discipline after all then is the true nursery for men and women,—the school is but the workshop of learning—and therefore I conclude with the following prayer from the Journal of Education:—

God bless our public schools,
Their pupils, teachers bless,
Be this our prayer—
Where'er through all the land,
From lakes to ocean strand,
Our provinces expand,
O plant them there.

God bless our common schools—
Shoul foes against them rise
Defend them then,
Make them to honor thee,
And may they ever be Safeguards of liberty,
Nurseries of men.

God bless our public schools,
The throngs of pupils bless
As on they move—
And as they issue forth,
Let them be men of worth—
The working ones of earth—
Then one above.

POLITENESS.

There are nothing more difficult to attain, or necessary to possess, than perfect good breeding, which is equally inconsistent with stiff formality, an impertinent forwardness, and awkward bashfulness. A little ceremony is sometimes necessary; a certain degree of firmness is absolutely so, and awkward modesty is extremely embarrassing. In mixed companies, wherever is ashamed to take part in them, is for the time at least, supposed to be upon a footing of equality with the rest, and consequently every one claims, and very justly, every mark of civility and good breeding. Even in silence, bad carelessness and negligence are absolutely forbidden. There is nothing so little forgiven as a seeming inattention to the person who is speaking to you. We have seen many persons, who while you are speaking to them instead of looking at and attending to you, fix their eyes upon the ceiling, or some other part of the room, look out at the window lift a book or newspaper, and read it. Nothing discovers a little, futile, frivolous mind, more than this, and nothing is so offensively ill-bred. Be assured that the profoundest learning, without good breeding, is unwelcome and tiresome pedantry. A man who is not well-bred, is unfit for good society and is unwelcome in it. Make then, good-breeding, the great object of your thoughts and actions. Observe carefully the behaviour and manner of those who are distinguished for their good breeding. Imitate and endeavour to excel, that you may at least equal them. Observe how it adorns merit, and how often it covers the want of it.

"HOOP DE-DOODEN-DO."

The most amusing incident of the day transpired yesterday afternoon in front of this office. A sweet, blooming Miss, of about seventeen summers, accompanied by a young gentleman, (no doubt her husband in prospective,) were lovingly walking side by side, when at the point above named, the young lady was seized with a sudden faintness, and grasped the arm of her companion for support. The latter supposing the fair one to be sick, was about summoning help, when the lady, in a soft voice uttered "No don't Andy—its only my hoops falling off." The next moment revealed the fact that the expander had broken from its original place and was quitting its fair owner. The difficulties becoming great, the young lady assumed a bold stand and stepped from the unruly assailing, and, with best composure, proceeded on up Baltimore street—the loose lying upon the pavement, and hundreds of ladies and gentlemens passing. Great speculation was indulged in—some supposing that the contents of the loop had suddenly sunk into the earth, while others advanced the idea that the sweeper had given up in disgust. After much amusement in silence indulged in, the naughty coquettish pink dress by Europe-ans, who strutted away with the prize amid the laughter of a crowd of gentlemen.—Baltimore Clipper.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

For the information of those contemplating a journey to the fruitful gold region, we give below the following extracts from the London News and Montreal Witness, both reliable papers.

From the London (C. W.) News.

Towards the end of last month, Mr Caird, in this place in Parliament, asked the under Secretary of State for the Colonies, whether he could confirm the reports which had recently appeared regarding gold discoveries in British Columbia. Mr Fortescue in his reply said:

"With respect to the gold discoveries in British Columbia, a parliamentary paper was nearly ready for communication to the house, which would give the latest information which the government had received on the subject. It fully confirmed, though it did not add much to the excellent accounts which appeared in the Times. The governor assured them that the almost fabulous accounts of the richness of the gold fields of British Columbia and of the Cariboo discoveries were not exaggerated."

Nothing to all appearances could be more satisfactory, and those who have gone far West in search of the precious ore, one would think, can hardly fail to accumulate wealth as the result of their toil. But there appears to be two sides of the Cariboo story as there are of most stories that arises in the world, and it is of the first moment for every intending traveller to the tempting, to hear both before he starts. There is a letter in the last Freeholder from D.A. Muthern, a native of Cornwall, which contains some affirmations that tend to cloud the brilliant prospect of the new mines. It is dated California, Jan. 25th, 1862. The publication of the document in a respectable journal warrants us to assume that the author of it is a reliable witness, and hence we quote his words the more readily. Thus he writes:

"I do not wish to see them young men in Cornwall who propose to visit the mines led astray by false reports in Newspapers, got up principally by steamboat proprietors, Express agents and stage owners, who desire to make money, regardless of the sufferings entailed on those who may be deluded by the exciting cry of gold.—No doubt there are some good claims at the Cariboo mines; and if a man is lucky enough to strike a rich claim he will make a pile. But the chances are not more than ten in one thousand. I have talked with miners that have been there, men that were truthful and honest, and they say there are hundreds upon hundreds there who cannot get board for their work. And when a man does get a claim it has to be a good one or he will not make anything because it is so far North that a miner cannot work over four months in the year. Provisions are enormously high just now.—You may judge for yourself when I tell you I received a letter from a young man there, one that I worked with a year and a half, on whom I can depend, who tells me he was offered fifteen dollars a day but would not take it because it would not board him. Now sir, when they read in the papers at home of fifteen dollars a day for wages they are excited, when in reality it will not board them. I do not wish to discourage any one from going to the Cariboo mines. If they are bound for mining I would rather they would go there because it is a British possession, and I like anything or anybody that is British. No person now thinks of starting with less than $600, so one from home ought not to start with less than $600. A tradesman at the mines is no better off than one that has no trade, unless he is a blacksmith. That is the best business here or in any other mining locality. Miners are mostly poor men, and others have reaped the benefit of their toil. They have denied themselves home, society, and everything that could make life valuable. Many who have had a mine'd tell you they would not for the diggings and restraint, they would consider the States Prison life but little worse. Incarcerated all day long in holes, leading from the bottom of wells, bored in the recesses of mountains; for both places liable to be crushed to death or buried alive; working for months and years, the result of all this patient toil is oftentimes utter disappointment and ruin. I am certain that hundreds will return from Cariboo next summer, bitterly cursing the day they ever started there.

Considering the conflicting testimony on the subject of the mines we cannot but think it hazardous for young men to start on a long journey without some more complete information. But accounts turn out rather over-done; the one too bright and the other too dismal. So many have already left Canada who must sooner or later test the matter by stern experience, it cannot be long till the actual truth and the fair probabilities of success are exactly determined. The cautious will be apt to wait till they have received direct communications from friends who have gone to solve the problem for themselves.

To the Editor of the Montreal Witness

MR. EDITOR,—The writer of this letter was a resident of Victoria, Vancouver's Island, during two summers and one winter, or from May 1856 till August 1857; having been five years previous in California.—He therefore presumes he may give an opinion that you need not be afraid of young men becoming ruined if they go to British Columbia, if they will only take wives with them, and they may demur on account of additional expenses; but this may be limited to the passage money to Victoria, and there leave the wife, who, if industrious and modest, will not find the least difficulty in self-support, and, perhaps, do better than the husband in the mines. For if there be a great demand for female help, washing is well paid for, the price being $3 per dozen; it is mostly done by Chinamen.

On account of the shortness of the mining season, very few can get suddenly rich; so I would discourage all from large expectations. But to the settler, Vancouver's and other Islands and the mainland are very inviting. The face of the country is picturesque—the climate mild. Plenty of timber and coal, with abundance of fish, particularly salmon, &c. And to all having a wish to go up to possess the land I would say go by all means. But do not forget the wife for society which I have seen and lived amongst that have an excess of the male sex are an abomination, they are detestable—Men become like to the savages around them, especially when they are wallowing in the filth of Chinese and Indian rottenness. So I would say to those going and wishing to live in a privileged society, take man's greatest civilizer, "gentle woman."

Yours respectfully,
HONEST MINER.

THE ACTION OF THE GREAT WESTERN POWERS OF EUROPE.

The New York Tribune accuses the Herald of making many efforts "to league the great Powers of Western Europe" for the destruction of this Government and people. If the people and Government be true to themselves, we do not believe all the Powers of Europe in league could accomplish this. But we submit to the American people that the little newspaper writing can do to sow ill-blood between the nations is being done with as much zeal in the Tribune as in any other paper; and with regard to one nation of Western Europe—Great Britain—the efforts of the Tribune to irritate and insult are not inferior in number while they surpass in malignity the basest efforts of the Herald. So far as Great Britain is concerned, we are satisfied that nothing but insult the most direct at the hands of the Government of the United States would force her to assume an attitude towards this people which would lead to the advantage of the slave-holding "Confederacy." That Mr. Lincoln would accept the responsibility and the opprobrium of gratuitously insulting Great Britain is an idea not to be entertained. The ravings of the Herald are beneath contempt. It is not from such papers Europe forms its opinion of the United. It is only from the general spirit of the press that the spirit of the people is inferred. The Tribune corporately, and its responsible editor personally, might well change the tone common to their former years, if they be anxious to influence American and European public opinion in the interests of peace and good-will. Scottish American Journal.

A DEFAULTING SHERIFF.

Sheriff Fortune, of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, is a defaulter to the Counties to the amount of nearly $10,000. We learn from the Belleville Flag of the 20th, that the Council met on the 11th inst., when the matter was brought up and discussed, and the explanations of the Sheriff were listened to. He proposes to collect the money by retaining his office and paying of the receipts accruing therefrom the sum of $2000 per quarter.

To those who are acquainted with the circumstances connected with Mr. Fortune's appointment to the Sheriffalty the defaulting can be easily accounted for. It will be remembered that Mr. Fortune, a man not much beyond middle age, and in good health, "resigned" the office. Why Mr. Fortune resigned a good thing not said a prominent politician; but how it happened and what made the necessary short time of office should thing the more were still a matter of enquiry in the town of Amherstburg. The steamship Etna arrived at Liverpool on the 21st ult.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The proceedings in Parliament on the 20th were unimportant.

Mr. Layard, in the House of Commons, undertook to deny assertions relative to the Trent affair to Committee, but thought it was inconsistent with the dignity of the Italian Government for an English Minister to lay papers relative to the affair before Parliament.

On the 20th Mr. Baxter opposed the expenditure on fortifications in the Colonies, except at great Naval Stations.

Sir G. C. Lewis thought that the defence of the Colonies was partly a colonial and partly a military question; at the present moment there were two great nations which had subject to their rule as large a portion of the globe as they could well govern—namely Great Britain and the United States. America had adopted the principle of centralization. England took a different course.

After further debate, Mr. Baxter withdrew his opposition.

The Times, in an editorial on President Lincoln's message, says it can hardly be looked for as anything more than an invitation to discuss the subject in Congress.—It is clear that if Slavery is to cease, even in the Border States, the change must be accomplished by other means than those to which the people, which seems, at present, are totally inapplicable to the whole Union.

The Times fears the proposed slogan of compromise will be difficult of access, nor does it believe it will shake the resolution of the South. As a proposition, however, which may lead to the cessation of the frightful conflict, the Times thinks it worthy of discussion. The President truly says the expenses of the war would buy up all the slaves in any given State. If this has any meaning, it is that the money now devoted to keeping up the army might be more advantageously devoted to the extinction of slavery in those regions which are incontestibly in its power. If they are content to keep the Slave States which have not seceded and to try the plan of emancipation and compensation on them, they may, if really in earnest, accomplish after a time, a great work; but with the expenditure of two millions a day, and with nothing but shin plasters for money, the plan of attaching wavering slave owners of compensation must follow the fate of so many other attempts at compromise.

The Daily News thinks the proposition fair, moderate and magnanimous. It says the scheme affords at least a good basis for compromise, practicable and amicable debate; only the public by whom it has to be discussed is scarcely capable of the order needed for that deliberation.

The Morning Star also approves of the proposition.

The Herald thinks that both sides will regard it as dishonoring to compromise.

The Morning Post treats it as a puerile and vain scheme. It can only be accounted for as being the last resource of a government which feels it is engaged in a struggle which, if continued, must involve it in ruin, and which it would make any sacrifice short of submission to arrest.

The London Globe regards the proposition as a political strategy in aid of Gen. McClellan, which is certainly well timed for checking the Border States to the North. It also regards the step as a symptom of deep misgiving in the Washington Cabinet touching the impolicy of pursuing the war beyond the limits required to establish boundaries and arrange the relations of Federals and Confederates.

The Atlantic Mail Company, Galway Line, had addressed a letter to the Treasury asserting the ability of the Company to carry out the contract in a satisfactory manner.

Lord Palmerston had promised to receive the deputation on the 21st March. The following were elected directors in place of those retiring in rotation:—Geo. Peabody, Francis B. Betton and John M. Brett; New York, Cyrus W. Field and Wm. C. Dodge; Halifax, Thomas C. Kinnear. The deputation then waited on Lord Palmerston on Friday.—Lord Palmerston promised to bring the subject before the Government, and the interview is said to be very satisfactory.

EXTRAORDINARY ROBBERY OF A REGISTERED LETTER OF THE VALUE OF £2,000, AT THE GENERAL POST OFFICE.

(From the London Star.)

During the last few days considerable anxiety has been created amongst the bankers and merchants in the city, by the discovery of a robbery of a registered letter containing notes and cheques of the value, it is reported, of £2,000, the whole of which has been realized in gold at the Bank of England. Upon waiting on the secretary of the post office, at St. Martin's-le-Grand, our reporter was informed of the following facts:—It appears that on Friday, the 7th of March, a letter was registered at Waterford, addressed to Messrs. Leaf & Co., Old Change, London, and duly forwarded to the metropolis. Easterly reached St. Martin's-le-Grand and the authorities have adopted a plan of, requiring the postmen to sign a receipt when registered letters are handed over to them for delivery to the parties to whom they are addressed. On the occasion in question the clerk of the registered letter department called the postmen by name to the pigeon-hole of the office. Somebody answered, who at the time was believed to be the proper party, and after signing the usual form of receipt, the registered letter in question was given to him to deliver. Nothing more was heard of the matter until the middle of the week, when a communication was received from Messrs. Leaf, inquiring the reason why the registered letter in question had not been delivered. The clerk of the registered letter department was at once referred to, and he produced the postman's receipt to show that he had duly handed over the letter for delivery. The postman of the walk was then sent for, and on attending he was interrogated why he had not delivered the letter to the firm. He at once denied ever having the letter, and on the receipt being produced he stated that it was not his signature, and that it was a forgery. The officials at the post office at once instituted the fullest inquiry with a view of ascertaining who had got the letter; but, we believe, that nothing satisfactory was elicited, except that the letter had been fraudulently obtained by means of a deep laid scheme, committed either by some one connected with the post office or by a party who had a knowledge of the registered letter issue department, and of the way the business was transacted. It is stated that, on Messrs. Leaf finding that the letter was missing, they at once gave the usual notice to the bankers to stop the cheques and notes. Unfortunately, however, the warning was too late. The cheques had been paid, and the notes had been exchanged for gold at the Bank of England. So the matter at present stands. Another registered letter containing, it is said, £2,000, is reported to have disappeared under similar mysterious circumstances. It is not long since a registered letter from Lincoln to one of the bankers in Lombard street was abstracted; and these frequent losses have occasioned some uneasiness in the city, inasmuch as the post office do not hold themselves responsible for the contents of registered letters.

COAL OIL EXPLOSION AT QUEBEC.

A coal oil explosion, which luckily did not produce any serious results, occurred on Wednesday evening, at Mr. Nazaire Turcotte's premises, Crown Street, St. Roch's. Mr. Turcotte sent two young men into the cellar for the purpose of transferring the contents of a coal oil barrel into another cask. The task was nearly completed when a small quantity of oil, remaining in the almost empty barrel, ignited. An explosion immediately followed, and the barrel was blown into fragments. The young man who was in the act had his face somewhat bruised by the splinters and also burned; but, we believe, not seriously. The flames had already communicated to the other cask, when a person, attracted to the spot by the noise of the explosion, fortunately had the presence of mind to pitch it out of the cellar into the street. The flames in the cellar were thus extinguished before any serious damage was done to the premises.

LORD MONCK'S KINDNESS.

The Quebec correspondent of the Montreal Reformer says:—

"The goodness of man is often like to little things. That of the Governor-General down not in all he does. The natural goodness of his heart was apparent last week in the Council Chamber. After delivering his Speech to the assembled wisdom of the land, and in the presence of one of the most brilliant assemblies that ever attended the opening of Parliament, he was entering, attended by all the great officers of State, when he noticed a pretty child in the arms of a lady standing near the door. The child attracted his Excellency's attention, and the Governor stopped the whole train of carriage to caress it. The act did not go unnoticed, but added to His Excellency's popularity, especially with the ladies."

THE CARRIBOO MINES.

The Eldorado Expedition says:—Considerable excitement is being created among the mining citizens, in regard to the flattering reports recently coming from the gold fields in the vicinity of Fort Wallah-Wallah, Washington Territory. We were lately permitted to read a letter from there written containing very favorable accounts of the richness of the deposits of that locality. Many of the miners have left Walla-Walla for the scene, and are taking out the precious metal in large quantities. Provisions are very high there, and the miners are obliged to pay from 50 cents to $1 per pound for flour. Many of the miners are returning to Victoria, and will probably go to Fraser River in the spring.

For British Columbia.—Mr. John Hetherington, and Mr. William Waller, two old and well known citizens of this town, along with Mr. Palmer and Mr. Howard, of Peterboro', left for New York, en route for the diggings, yesterday. FARM FOR SALE.

BE

A TERRIFIC CAT FIGHT.

[illegible] dark, [illegible] and [illegible] fell, [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] rent. His adage was Nature's [illegible] neighboring shed his fighting knights [illegible] that cause to squeak [illegible] Depot in search of food and strange adventure. Grim war he courted; and the terrific tail, all spine [illegible] of formidable curve, and [illegible] and [illegible] proved Agent [illegible] thrice [illegible] fold of [illegible] fighting. With eyes aglow, and screams [illegible] of war, and steps [illegible] silent as the [illegible] of dew, young Norval crept along the [illegible], and gained a moment through the darkness down, with tail sung, triumphantly; then, with an [illegible] preparation and a growl,—perhaps an oath, in direct [illegible] blood,—he [illegible] back and hocked his body like a letter S, or rather like a letter U inverted stood in [illegible] expectancy. 'Twas well. With fiery both glaring and ears all askew, and open mouth, in which two rows of fangs stood forth in sharp and dread conformity—slow up he [illegible] from out the dark below, a head appeared. A dread'ful tocsin of determined strife [illegible] young Norval uttered; then, with face unblanched, and moustache standing straight before his nose, and tail flung wildly in the passing breeze, stepped back in ruthless [illegible] to the foe. Approached the other, and with preparation dire, each cat surveyed the vantage of the field. Around they walked, with tails uplifted, and backs high in air, while from their mouths, in accents [illegible] [illegible] rent, dropped brief but awful sentences of hate. Thrice 'round the roof they went in circle, each with eye upon the foe intently bent; then sidewise moving, as is wont with cats, gave one long drawn, terrific, savage yow! and hustled in! Thar for thew! A mist of hair hung o'er the battle field. High 'bove the din of passing waggon rose the dreadful tumult of the struggling cats. So gloamed their eyes in frenzy, as one who saw the conflict from a window near, naught else was plain but the fiery stars, that moved in orbits most eccentric. An hour they struggled in tempestuous might; then fainter grew the squall of war, an H all aroad was hushed. Then went I forth with lantern, and the field surveyed. What saw I? Six claws—one ear—of teeth, perhaps a handful, and save fur, naught else except a solitary tail. That tail was Norval's. By a ring I knew't. The ear was—but we'll let the matter pass. The tail will do without the ear.—Cincinnatti Gazette.

AMUSING STORY.

M. Larchet, a French traveller in England, supplies this amusing anecdote for the information of the lovers of truth:—"Some years since a rich citizen of London died, and left Miss B——, who did not know him, a fortune amounting up to several millions. No one would be able to imagine the motive of this unexpected munificence. "I beg," he wrote, "Miss B—— to accept the gift of my entire fortune, too small to express the inexpressible sensation which for three years the contemplation of her adorable face has given me. Fearing some error or mystification, Miss B—— inquired of the lawyers, who came to get her signature for the acceptance of the legacy, if the testator was yet interred? "No," replied they. "Then conduct me to him!" Here the astonishment became general. "It is he?" cried Miss B——, on uncovering the face of the deceased. "It is the man who for three years paraded me with his compliments and his verses in honor of my nose! At Hyde Park, at Covent Garden, he was always before me, and incessantly staring!" Miss B—— deigned to accept the millions."

NEW AND TRUE.

It is indeed a fact worthy of remark and one that seems never to have been noticed, that throughout the whole animal creation, in every country and clime of the earth, the most useful animals that eat vegitable food, work. The all powerful elephant, and the patient, untiring camel, in the torrid zone; the horse, the ox, or the donkey, in the temperate; and the reen deer in the frigid zone, obtain all their muscular power from nature's simplest productions—the vegetable kingdom. But all the flesh-eating animals know the rest of the animated creation is constant dread of them. They seldom eat vegetable food until some other animal has eaten it first, and made it into flesh. Their own flesh, is unfit for other animals to eat, having been itself made out of flesh, and is most foul and offensive. Great strength, fleetness of foot, usefulness, cleanliness and docility, are then always characteristics of vegetable-eaters.

DEATH OF MRS. WEBB.—Our readers will remember a pleasant little piece of poetry tendered to the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, relating to his lecture on Burns. The authoress is no more, and shall never again with mortal eyes behold the land of her birth, which she loved so well. Mrs. Webb (nee Miss Graham) was related to the famous old house of Netherby. Possessing a large share of the poetic fervity, her mode of expression was a happy combination of the humorous and the pathetic.

☞ During the publication of the banns of matrimony in the parish church at Arbroth, Scotland, a middle-aged woman rose and said, "I protest against that in the name of the Lord." If inquiry that she had, or thought she had, the best claim on the affections of the gentleman mentioned in the banns.

THE FOUND WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it REMOVES AT THE SEAT OF THE ALL-ECT, ARRESTS IT, EXHAUSTS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

THE most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for the relief of all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat, &c.

These Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all clergymen and all constitutions they are admirably adapted. Cheap and portable, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day relieve the most severe occasional hoarseness, and their regular use for a few days will, and at times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly sharpening its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional Vocalists.

LIGHTNING RODS

JUST ARRIVED FROM ENGLAND, WITH

SPRATTS' RENOWNED

PLATINA TIPPED POINTS!!

AND ENLARGED

INSULATORS & ATTACHMENTS.

THIS ROD is prepared in England with especial reference to its great conducting powers; is highly approved and recommended by the best authorities. The white non-corroding surface prevents rust, and greatly increases its conducting power, completely obviating the great objections to the old rod. Professor Croft had a Spiral Copper Rod removed from the University Buildings, Toronto, and substituted this, on account of the perfect conducting power of the surface, and not being liable to rust. One real advantage gained by the fine conducting qualities of this rod, with Spratt's point, arises from the fact that it constantly receives and silently conducts to the earth, the positive electricity of the surrounding atmosphere generated by an approaching thunder cloud surcharged with his element of destruction and death, thereby drawing off, during any lessening the fountain, easing the cloud of its constant accumulation, allowing it to pass over our heads in safety, which might otherwise have burst upon us all its fury. But it is felt in this by reason of too great accumulation of electricity, and the discharge takes place, it conducts all safely to the ground, being a preventative in most cases and a cure in an emergency. We have erected them on the Crystal Palace, and Custom House, at Hamilton, as well as many of the best buildings in this city. By importing largely for cash, we are enabled to erect them at a trifling advance upon the Copper and Spel. Common Iron Rods, such as are being offered by parties from the States—we do not erect, as we consider them nearly useless. Good Rods, properly erected, protect 25 feet from the point.

PIPER & KINDALL,

Toronto, Sept. 15, 1860.

I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT I HAVE SUPerintended the erection of Galvanized Iron Rods on the University Buildings, at Toronto, preferring the Galvanized Iron to ordinary Iron Rods, on account of the perfect conducting power of the surface, and from their not being liable to rust.

The advantage resulting from these qualities is more than commensurate with the increased cost.

The agents for the firm of Piper & Kindall, Toronto, have put up for me two of their Galvanized Lightning Rods so highly recommended by Professor Croft. I consider them preferable to all others. The improved Attachments and Insulators, with Spratt's Platina Tipped Point must give them great additional security.

Poetry.

THE LIFE OF TRUST.

Oh! it is hard to work for God,
To rise and take his part
Upon the battle-field of earth,
And not sometimes lose heart!

He hides himself so wondrously,
As though there were no God;
He is last seen when all the powers
Of ill are most abroad.

Or he deserts us at the hour
The fight is almost lost;
And seems to leave us to ourselves
Just when we need him most.

Ill masters good: good seems to change
To ill with greatest ease;
And, worst of all, the good with good
Is at cross purposes.

It is not so, but so it looks;
And we lose courage then;
And doubts will come if God hath kept
His promises to men.

Ah! God is other than we think;
His ways are far above,
Far above reason's height, and reached
Only by child-like love.

The look, the fashion of God's ways
Love's life-long study are;
She can be bold, and guess, and act,
When reason would not dare.

She hath a prudence of her own;
Her plots is firm and free;
Yet there is cautious science, too,
In her simplicity.

Workman of God! oh lose no heart,
But learn what God is like;
And in the darkest battle field
Thou shalt know where to strike.

Oh, blessed is he to whom is given,
The instinct that can tell
That God is on the field when he Is most invisible.

And blessed is he who can divine
Where real light doth lie,
And dares to take the side that seems
Wrong to man's limited eye!

Oh, learn to scorn the praise of men!
Oh, learn to love with God!
For Jesus won the world through shame,
And beckons thee His road.

God's glory is a wondrous thing,
Most strange in all its ways;
And of all things on earth, least like
What men agree to praise.

Muse on his justice, dim, unused
Muse, and take better heart;
Back with thine sagel to the field;
Good luck shall crown thy part!

God's justice is a bed where we
Our anxious hearts may lay,
And, weary with ourselves, may sleep
Our discontent away.

For right is right, since God is God!
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin.

Miscellaneous.

THE WILL OF SIR JAS. WYLIE.

In the year 1790 or 1791, a young Scotsman named Wylie, who had just completed his studies as a medical student at Edinburg, left his native country in pursuit of fame and fortune elsewhere. Sweden can hardly be a land of promise for doctors, for poverty and health there go hand in hand; but Sweden was his choice. It was an exchange of oat-cake for rye bread; and nobody can wonder that young Wylie remained at Gottenburg for but a short period. Thence he proceeded to Riga, and at the medical college of this place he passed a successful examination. Soon afterwards he obtained an appointment in the Russian military service, and became chief surgeon to a division of the Russian army under Colonel Fanshawe. With his force he was present at the capture of Cracow and Warsaw, and no doubt saw a good deal of hard service in the great wars at the early part of the century. Gradually he rose to high favor with his Russian Government, and became the trusted medical attendant of the Imperial family. In 1814 he visited London with the Czar Alexander and the Allied Sovereigns, being then private physician to his Majesty, and chief of the medical department of the Empire, and at the instance of the Czar he was created a baronet. Even by that time Sir James, as we must call him, had, through the liberality of the Imperial family and Government, risen to great affluence. He was unmarried, and remained a bachelor down to his death; nor does he seem to have corresponded frequently with his relations in this country, many of whom resided, as they or their descendants still reside, in Dunfee and the neighborhood. He had four brothers, one of whom only, Walter, now survives. In 1814, whilst Sir James was in England, he invited his elder brother William (since dead), to go to London with his family, and then made them some valuable presents, leaving, on his departure, £500 for his five nieces. After his return to Russia he also frequently sent presents to his brother William and family—amongst other things his portrait, two valuable gold coins, and a gold inlaid sterling-piece—These facts, which subsequent events render of some importance, are deposed to by Miss Neish, of Dundee, one of Mr. William Wylie's daughters. Mr. Alexander Edward, of Dundee, who married another daughter, states that during a visit to St. Petersburg, with Mrs. Alexander, in June, 1839, Sir James behaved towards them with great kindness and courtesy, and manifested on all occasions the greatest friendship and affection towards his relations in Scotland. Among other presents, he gave to Mr. Edward a valuable chronometer watch, the gift of the late Emperor Alexander, and to Mr. Edward's eldest brother a gold seal, both of which had been given to him by the late Emperor Alexander. Afterwards, the Duke sent to Mrs. Edwards, at different times, a valuable Persian chest, a pocket bible (the gift to him of the mother), his portrait, and a casket which had been struck on the celebration of a jubilee held in St. Petersburg on his fiftieth year's service under the Russian Government. It appears that he was at all times settled from writing, and almost invariably communicated with his relations and friends in Scotland and elsewhere verbally, by persons passing to and fro. But whilst Mr. Edward was at St. Petersburg, Sir James appears to have intended to purchase an estate in Scotland, though not with the intention of ever permanently taking up his abode there. He instructed Mr. Edward to purchase an eligible property, placing at his disposal for that purpose the sum of £50,000, which he had invested in the English Three Per Cents. At one time he was actually in treaty for the purchase of an estate known as "Wester Ogil," or "Glen Ogil," inquiring particularly "in what parish it is," and "what the distance is from Kirriemuir, Montrose, Forfar, and Breenin—also the distance from the railroad depot," so that his Scotch reminiscences and likings had survived this long expatriation. Any residence of his, however, in Scotland, he said, would be probably only with a view of enjoying a month or two's sport in an interesting district. He had no wish, he said, "to possess a large mansion, knowing, from experience, that such is cause of considerable annoyance and anxiety." But the intended purchases were not carried out, and he never became possessed of any real estate in Scotland. As already mentioned, one of the four brothers of Sir James still survives. In 1814, this gentleman, Mr. Walter Wylie, now of Tullialan, Perthshire, ship owner, was at Rotterdam, when his brother arrived here with the Emperor On that occasion Sir James presented him to his Majesty, and afterwards gave him a chronometer watch. Almost every year afterwards, when Mr. Walter happened to be at St. Petersburg with his vessel, the two brothers visited and dined with each other, the physician often sending presents home to his relatives in Scotland, and in 1826 giving his brother £300. The Rev. Dr. John Wylie, of Carluke, Lanarkshire, a nephew of Sir James, who saw his uncle in London, in 1814, was requested by the latter to be his private secretary, and to return with him to Russia, but declined; and in 1847, Dr. Wylie also, while on a visit to St Petersburg, received from his uncle various valuable presents and tokens of regard.

Notwithstanding these demonstrations of affection for his relations, it is evident that by his intercourse with the members of the Imperial Court, and other influential persons in St. Petersburg, Sir James had become thoroughly imbued with the ideas, tastes and habits of a native Russian. He died at St. Petersburg in February, 1854, being then 86 years old, for he was born in Kincardine in 1768. At the time of his death, he was possessed of real and personal property in Russia supposed to be worth a million sterling; so that in Russia the curer of bodies evidently has no unprofitable profession. There was also in his name, in the English Three Per Cents, the sum of £67,897. This money is the occasion of a suit, which, after being carried through three English Courts, now awaits final judgment in the House of Lords. The deceased, in February, 1852, made a will, which was in the Russian language, beginning: "In the name of the Holy Trinity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen! I, the undersigned, actual Privy Councillor James Wylie, son of William, being of sane mind and clear memory, make this will, by which, in case of my death, I dispose of all my movable and immovable property, honestly acquired by myself, in the following manner." The testator then directed that certain landed estates should be sold, with the peasants.

"Excepting only those of my serfs, who, for their faithful and zealous services to my person, shall be set free," and "the money proceeds of all the above, as also the whole of my capital which shall remain with me after my death in ready money, and in bank billets belonging to me, shall be divided into ten equal parts. Two of these I destine to be employed in arranging a decent funeral and erecting a monument to me, and also in acts of charity in my commemoration, at the discretion of the executors. Of the remaining eight parts, I intend making afterwards a detailed disposal; but should I, from any cause whatever, not dispose of all the capital assigned for those eight parts or of any parts or fractions thereof, the sum that would remain there undisturbed I humbly lay at the feet of his Imperial Majesty, the Most Gracious Monarch and Emperor of all the Russias; and I would venture to express the wish that this sum may be employed in commemoration of my most august benefactors, the monarchs of glorious memory, the Emperors Paul Petrovitch and Alexander Paoloritch, and the Grand Duke Michael Paoloritch, for some establishment of public or charitable benefit which may bear my name. • • • And as all my movable and immoral property is mine own, and honestly acquired by myself so nobody has a right to interfere with my dispositions, and content the same under any pretence whatever; and, likewise, no one has a right to interfere with or contest the dispositions and proceedings of my executors. Having reached the decline of years, and drawing near the term of human existence, I am ready to meet my dying hour, resigned to the will of Providence, with a calm mind and a clear conscience. Resigning to mind the course of my past life, I can say from my own convictions without any pride, that in the sphere of my activity I behaved and fulfilled my duties conscientiously and honestly, not without advantage to Russia. More than sixty years I was in the service of four monarchs of Russia, and many successive brothers upon me I fulfilled with zeal active and steady devotedness. I labored unremittingly for the organization of the medical department, and for the education of physicians in Russia on my improved quite-new system; and the thought that my endeavours have not been unsuccessful is one of consolation in the last days of my life. I deeply feel all the favors with which I have been loaded by my most august benefactors, and the high confidence they bestowed upon me; and this feeling I preserve reverently in my heart to the last moment of my life. I beseech the Almighty that he may safe Russia, her wise monarch, and his Imperial family. Almighty God, grant my prayer! And when my last hour shall come, receive indulgently my soul!" The testator afterwards, namely, on the 10th of February, 1854, "completed and explained" the foregoing will, directing that the eight parts of his capital, whereof mention has been made, should be employed in commemoration of the late Grand Duke Michael Paolovitch, for the erection of a hospital in St. Petersburg, called "The Hospital of the Saint Archangel Michael, founded by the Baronet Wylie."

The testator, in the course of his will, appointed two Russian gentlemen as his executors. They do not seem to have been aware of the investment in English stock made by the deceased; and, on the other hand, his brother, believing that Sir James had died intestate, took out letters of administration in the English Courts. A bill was afterwards filed to administer the estate of the deceased, under the direction of the Court of Chancery, and, in the course of the inquries then directed, the existence of a will transpired. This will was afterwards proved in England by the Russian executors, and the question then arose between the executors and the testator's next of kin whether the will just set forth referred only to property belonging to the testator in Russia, or whether it also disposed of property in England. The next of kin contended that, as to the sum invested in the English funds, Sir James Wylie, though he might have intended to dispose of it by his will, had not, in fact, done so, and that, as to his property he had died intestate, in which case the £68,000 would, of course, be divided among them, according to the statute of distribution. The persons, who, according to the law of Russia, would be entitled to the residuary personal estate, in case of an entire or partial intestacy, were twenty-five in number, and amongst them were Mr. Walter Wylie, the surviving brother before mentioned; Mrs. James Neish, of Dundee; Rev. Dr. John Wylie, of Carluke, Lanarkshire; Mrs. Alexander Edward, of Dundee; Miss Janet Meiklejohn Wylie, of Dundee; Miss Ann Wylie, of Row Angle, Dundee; the Rev. Francis Wylie, of Elgin; Mr. George Wylie, of St. Andrews, Fife; Mrs. Alexander Luke, of Colcess, Perthshire; and Mrs. Haldane Wylie, of Kincardine. A singular commentary on the freedom of opinion enjoyed in Russia occurred in the course of the case. Mr. John Boyd Baxter of Dundee, declares that he, through his agent at St. Petersburg laid a case for opinion before two sworn advocates of that city, of great repudiation for their skill and learning in the laws of Russia; but when these gentlemen found that the late Emperor of Russia was mentioned in the will, and that the present Czar was or might be interested in it, they declined giving any written opinion upon the case, their opinion being in favor of the next of kin, and, therefore, unfavorable to the possible interests of the Emperor. Mr. Baxter swears that he verily believes that his Russian agents, as well as the Russian advocates, would have run the risk of injury, and been subject to annoyance by the Russian authorities, if their names were disclosed in any opinion inimical to the supposed interests of the Emperor; and he added his belief "that an impartial opinion cannot be obtained from Russian lawyers on the import of the will in question, if in such opinion they have to refer to the said will or the contents thereof, or to disclose their knowledge" that the Emperor is in any way interested in the testator's estate. What is called an A. B. case—a suppositious case, that is, in which names are given—was stated, and the opinion of the Russian advocates was obtained favourable to the next of kin, though in Russia, as in England learned gentlemen appear to have been found who entertained, upon a case stated by the other side, an entirely opposite opinion.

Sir C. Cresswell, Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, and the Lords Justices have successfully held that the executors have no claim upon the English fund.—And the House of Lords having heard the argument in the case, will shortly give the decision upon the point, upon an appeal promoted by the Russian executors, whose names are Twan Wassilyewitch Enohine, Wassily Cergeyewitch Sabaroff, and Alexander Petrowitch Ewfaseff.

DECISION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

House of Lords.—Thursday, April 3.—There Lordships have decided in favor of Sir James Wylie's Scotch next of kin, and dismissed the appeal of the Russian executors, with costs. The English Consols will therefore fall to be divided according to the Russian law of intestate succession—the testator being a domiciled Russian.

THE FARMER IS KING.

"Cotton is king," said a Senator. "Nay," said another, "Gold is king." Nay, say we, the Farmer is king! A monarch is prepared for his throne by his careful education. But who is nurtured with such an education as the farmer? He is nursed in the strong embrace of prolific, many-handed Nature. Our mother Nature keeps the wisest school. Great Nature—rude yet gentle; stern yet kindly; terrible yet loving; frugal, yet bountiful. We almost believe that no man can be God's great upon, unless nurtured in the strong embrace of our great mother on the bosom of the earth.

All men should, some time in their lives, live out in the midst of Nature and till the soil. He who has been born and reared and who lives on a city, sheltered the principles of compounding with Nature, is, upon natural grounds, like a man, never half a whole man. He lacks the stern poetic lessons of this school. Nothing else approaches it. "An upright carpenter is good, if excellent a true man. An undressed farmer is a painter I, for preacher. What can the husbandman receive his food direct from heaven—its rains, and dews, and sunshine; it smiles over him in the blue and spangled vault, sun and moon and stars let all around him in the wavy grass and grain, the many tinted flowers; in the voices of the wind and the bending trees; underneath him, in prolific, fresh-turned soil—and at all be a monster, out of tune with outer and inner Nature! Who lives so far from temptation? Who lives so nigh his Creator? enwrapped all about with his arms—fed from his dazzling, munificent hand. He sleeps between the leaves of God's pictured book—the Universe.

"He loved husbandry," is the encomium that inspiration pays to one of the best kings of Israel, and who had one of the longest and most prosperous of reigns.—"Uzziah, the King," says the sacred writer "digged many wells, for he had so much cattle; husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in Carmel, for he loved husbandry." If this could have been said of his successor the Jews had not been parted and scattered, as at this day, among the nations. As long as it can be said of the sovereigns of any state, "they loved husbandry," the Empire is safe. Small farms grow true patriots. The wealth of the nation must be a common wealth. It is the nature of power to seek to increase itself. When monarchs increase in power it is in bald words the growth of tyranny. Not so with King Farmer. His tyranny is over barrenness. He sinkes, and lo! the sterile earth groans; but it is with abundance. He brings his enemies to the faggot and the stake; but they are the thistle the dock, the daisy, and the briar. He overruns and subdues the territories of his foes; but they are the swamp and the quagmire. He plows up the very foundations of the strongholds of his destroyers; but they are the deadly malaria, the stinging insect and the fanged and poisonous reptile. The earth is his slave; but it is the slavery of love for it buds and blossoms before him, and the trees clap their hands for joy for him. He claims his servants to do his will; but they are the elements, the huge and willing ox, and the majestic horse, impatient to do his bidding and champing for the word that bids him go.

When the monarch Farmer raises himself on high and stretches his sceptre abroad cities spring up under its shadow. The sound of the spindle, the loom, the anvil, and the ponderous foundry and the mill are heard. The hum of industrious multitudes come up like the voice of many waters; white-winged ships fly over the unstable main; men cast aside their hides and fig leaves and are clothed in imperial garments, and women are arrayed in fabric as fine as gossamer and many-tinted as the sunset cloud. Penury, pestilence, and famine, he keeps bound in his prison house. Labor stands in the door of his magazines, and in his stalwart hand he holds the scales of human life, and artists, and armies; of school, church, and state; food and raiment, abundance and luxury. He deals out the progress of human kind. The farmer is king—the monarch of men.

THE CHRISTIAN'S LIGHT.

The Bible calls the good man's life a light, and it is the nature of right to flow out spontaneously in all directions, and fill the world unconsciously with its beams. So the Christian shines, it would say, not so much because he will, as because he is a luminous object. Not that the active influence of Christians is made of no account in the figure, but only that this symbol of light has its propriety in the fact that their unconscious influence is the chief influence, and has the precedence in its power over the world. And yet there are many who will be ready to think that light is a very tame and feeble instrument, because it is noiseless. An earthquake, for example, is to them a much more vigorous and effective agency. Hear how it comes thundering through the solid foundations of nature. It rocks a whole continent. The noblest works of man—cities, monuments, and temples—are in a moment levelled to the ground, or swallowed down the opening gulfs of fire. Little do they think that the light of every morning, the soft, and genial, and silent light, is an agent many times more powerful. But let the light of the morning cease and return no more, let the hour of morning come and bring with it no dawn; the cuteries of a horror stricken world fill the air, and make, as it were, the darkness audible. The beasts go wild and frantic at the loss of the sun. The vegetable growths turn pale and die. A chill creeps on, and frosty winds begin to howl across the freezing earth. Colder, and yet colder is the night. The vital blood, at length of all creatures, stops congealed. Down goes the frost towards the earth's centre. The heart of the sea is frozen; nay the earthquakes are themselves frozen in, under their fiery caverns. The very globe itself, too, and all the fellow planets that have lost their sun, are become mere balls of ice, swinging silent in the darkness. Such is the light which revisits us in the silence of the morning. It makes no shock or sear. It would not startle an infant in his cradle. And yet it perpetually new-creates the world, rescuing it, each morning as a prey, from night and chaos. So the Christian is a light, even "the light of the world," and we must not think that, because he shines inconspicuously or silently, as a more luminous object, he is therefore powerless. The greatest powers are ever those which lie back of the little stirs and commotions of nature; and I verily believe that the insensible influences of good men are on much more potent than what I have called their voluntary or active, as the grand silent powers of nature are of greater consequence than her little disturbances and tumults. The love of holiness in heaven is deeper than many outbreaks, and they lose sight of it altogether. The unfathomable seas made by good men on the land in many instances, deep until their holiness is inherent in it, in fact, but a function, and, in most cases, but a very small function, of the good or gift that flows from off their divine Lord. Let us go further. How many persons do you meet, the irresistible influence of whose manners and character is so decided as either to thwart their polygamy influence; so that, whatever they attempt to do, in the way of controlling others, they are sure to carry the exact opposite of what they intend! And it will generally be found that, where men undertake by argument or persuasion to exert a power, in the face of qualities that make them odious or detestable, or only not entitled to respect, their insensible influence will be too strong for them. The total effect of the life is then of a kind directly opposite to the voluntary endeavor; which, of course, does not add so much as a fraction to it.—Dr. Bushnell.

"I DANCED MY CONVICTIONS AWAY."

What probability is there of serious impressions being entailed for any length of time by those who frequent the giddy dancing-school, the soul-enervating ball-room, the demoralizing circus or the theatre? The practice of attending upon such places is generally formed, and the taste for them acquired while under the eye of the parent; and a judicious exercise of authority would generally suffice to turn the mind to more wholesome and legitimate sources of entertainment. Many a one who has fallen a victim to parental indifference, has bitterly lamented that he was not more carefully guarded on this point; and in some instances, perhaps in many, dying souls have attributed their perdition to the mistaken kindness which indulged their youthful follies. Says a venerable divine: "I was called in the early part of my ministry to stand beside the bed of a beautiful young mother, whose life was fast ebbing away. Anguish, deep, hopeless anguish, was rivetted on her countenance. I asked her if she was willing that I should pray with her. Her reply was: 'I have no objections, but prayers will be of no avail now; it is too late, too late; I must die. I am lost! lost forever!' I prayed earnestly for her, but her hard heart was untouched; there was in it no fountain of love to its Maker, and it was 'too late.' She had been, at a very early period of life, seriously impressed; 'but,' said she, 'my mother sent me to dancing-school, and I danced all my serious convictions away.' As she lived, so did she die—without Christ in the world."

It may seem a trifling matter to allow a child for once to mingle in the society of the wicked and profane, or to taste the tempting wine, or to visit scenes of unchristian amusements; but let the parent reflect that it is more difficult to prevent the second step than the first, and that the child whose principles are not yet matured, and whose impulses have not yet been modified by experience, will quickly acquire those habits which may yet master him, body and soul, and ruin his prospects for eternity.

"The boy is moist and soft; now, now make haste
And form the pitcher, for the wheel turns fast."
And the pitcher, once formed, may be more easily broke than altered."

QUESTIONING A SCOTSMAN AT THE DIGGINGS.

The correspondent of the Age, at the Teapeka, tried to get some information about the workings at Gabriel's Gully. He thus narrates his first attempt: "'Good day,' said I to a decent-looking middle-aged man, who was seated on the edge of his paddock, resting himself for a few minutes. 'Guil day,' was the courteous reply. 'And how are the diggings simping?' I inquired. 'Oh, just aboot the auld thing.' 'Some have done remarkably well, I understand.' 'No that muel.' 'I hope you have been doing well yourself?' 'Folk'll no mak' anything by complainin'.' 'I like the look of that wash-dirt of yours, and should suppose it to yield at least a penny-weight to the bucket?' 'That's hard to tell till it is washed.' 'But, judging from your former washings, couldn't you form an estimate of its probable yield?' 'I dinna fash my head aboot it.' 'Do you generally find the loose and easily-broken-up state on the gravelly clay immediately above the slate to be the richest?' 'That's a question.' 'I suppose you occasionally meet with patches that are very rich, especially in the dips or falls, while the wash-dirt immediately adjoining may be very poor?' 'Some of it is pair aneuch.' 'If it is a fair question, what may be about the average yield of your wash-dirt?' 'What may be your reason for speerin'?' 'I have come from Victoria for the purpose of obtaining information as to the character of the Teapeka diggings, and am desirous of sending back a correct report.' 'Ye'll be connekit wi' the newspapers.' 'Yes.' 'The newspaper business maun pay gey an' weel aboot Victoria when editors can afford to send men to New Zealand to collect the news. Catch the editors o'oor Otago papers playin' at sic a game as that. Ye're the second I've seen here on the same errand. But I maun awa to my wark, as stan'in' here claverin 'll no mak' the pot boil.'"

CANADA WEST FARMERS' MUTUAL STOCK INSURANCE COMPANY.

(From the Canada Insurance Gazette.)

In 1861 we took occasion to comment upon the Ninth Annual Report of this Company, which we could not but notice the sound management under which it appeared to us to have thrived, and to express our anticipations of good results for the future. The Tenth Report is now before us, and gives us great pleasure to renew our congratulation. Before considering its details, we perused every Annual Report of this Company from the commencement of its career in 1851, and observe as one prominent aim of the Directors in the conservative principle of every well regulated Mutual Company, viz., the keeping a good balance on hand to meet losses promptly, without looking down to assessment for the immediate means for the same. When the Directors found after seven years experience that seven per cent. on the premium notes was sufficient to meet the losses and expenses, they reduced the rate to that amount, and when, in the first Year, amounted to £236, doubled to upwards of £2000 in one year, they wisely determined to keep in hand a larger sum than heretofore. What says the experience of the years that have followed? Losses in 1859, '60 and 61, £773, £1,602, and £3,425. The Directors must be better proof of the prudence they have manifested than these annual results, and the policyholders, when they are called on either to make the payment of half per cent., one per cent., or the amount assessed on them for a loss, would do well to place every reliance in the judgment of the Directors of their Company, remembering that when they (the Directors) determine on a certain course of action, their own pecuniary interests being bound up with those of the other policy holder's, they are doing their best for the general good. We particularly advert to the fact of a Directory receiving $338 only for a years attendance and the supervision of the Company's affairs, as a proof that however conservative (or ben ling up, so to write) the action of a Directory may seem, yet, as personal gain is not the object of the Director, whoever aims at making the cash box of a Mutual Company answer as easily and readily as that of a Stock or Proprietory Company, has taken the right course for successfully carrying on a Company based on the Mutual principle.

We cite the following favorable points in the present Report:—4,010 policies during the year, being 1,465 more than those of the last year; losses, $13,702, all within a fraction $300 paid; the expenses slightly increased, but only so as consistent with the increase of the year's business, the Agent earning a fee from the Company upon every application obtained through his agency; and the cash in hand (in 1860 $3,436) now standing at the respectable figure of $8,538.

We observe that the directors, estimating 1 per cent. on the amount insured being about the sum which may be expected to be required to pay for a three years insurance, very properly shows the actual result of the Company's business since its commencement in support of their views; now, all that we can say is, that the Farmer who is not satisfied with so low a payment as 6s 8d per cent. per annum for insurance, can be no judge of the actual cost of insurance, carries his parsimony beyond his prudence, and has no right to the benefits which safe insurance is intended to secure.

We cannot close these remarks without observing that Mr. J. R. Walton, of Peterborough, again heads the list of Agents, shewing, 1187 policies obtained through his agency during the past year. Gentlemen Directors, if this supremacy among the agents continues much longer, you will have to forego your system of economy, and think seriously of applying to the silversmith.

THE AGE OF IRON.

The English papers are filled with discussions about iron-plated vessels.

HOW THE "WARRIOR" PLATES WERE SMASHED.

The Times contains an account of experiments at Shoeburyness on Tuesday with a gun of large size and great calibre, which showed at every discharge that our best and hitherto considered invulnerable forms of iron sides were, so to speak, almost as easily penetrated by a shot, as if the target had been of timber! After all our labour and all our expense; after having made beyond comparison the finest and strongest iron frigates in the world, we now find that opposite a large muzzle loading gun the best of our iron sides can be as easily riddled and sunk as wooden sailing vessels. This discovery, only made on Tuesday afternoon last, is due to the keen and wholesome rivalry between the War office and the Admiralty, the former striving to devise irresistible artillery, and the latter to build invulnerable ships. There has been an immense variety of experiments on every conceivable form of target, and upon every possible combination of iron and wood, iron and India rubber, iron and wire, iron and hemp, and every section of the American Monitor has been erected and fired at Shoeburyness, and proved to be as vulnerable almost as timber, and that no chance may be neglected, a target is being made of railway bars, dovetailed and rivited together, in the same ingenious manner as the coating of the Merrimac, and this also will be tried in a few days, and, beyond a doubt, with much the same results that attended the Monitor target. During a recent experiment, a target, exactly of the same material and strength as the Warrior's broadside, was subjected during the whole of one day and part of the second to a most tremendous fire, but the concentrated volleys flew off in a hail of iron splinters. The target's grew almost red-hot in parts, but no missile passed beyond its iron armour. The Warrior, therefore, and iron-ships were justly deemed invulnerable. Sir W. Armstrong has a letter in to day's Times explaining the principle which has rendered the last experiment successful in penetrating and smashing iron plates. The smooth bore gun has been made by Sir W. Armstrong, length fourteen feet, weight twelve tons, and it was tried against the Warrior target on Tuesday, in the presence of the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Somerset, and other high officials of the Admiralty and War Office. The first shot was 156 lbs., was fired at a distance of 200 yards, with a charge of 40 lbs. of powder. This ripped all double; the iron mass was shattered into crumbs of metal, and the teak splinters driven literally as small as pins. An increased charge was next tried, and the shot passed not only through the plates and teak, and through the inner skin, buried itself in the massive timbers that supported the target. These two shots were quite conclusive as to the powder of the gun. Sir W. Armstrong says that a gun of 12 tons weight, fired with a charge of 50 lbs. of powder, will break through the side of the Warrior or the strongest ship afloat. The Times remarks that no weapon of offence or defence seems fair to us now so effective as a large armour-clad and very small steam-ram.

WEALTH NOBLY USED.

Mr. Peabody, the eminent American Banker in London, who recently gave $750,000, for the amelioration of the condition of the London poor, disclosed in his letter to the trustees of the fund, the fact that this and other princely gifts which he has made are the fruits of a purpose cherished for many years. It deserves to be recorded, as an example, especially to young men, who are just entering upon the pursuit of wealth. "From a comparatively early period of my commercial life," says Mr. Peabody, "I had resolved in my own mind, that should my labors be blessed with success, I would devote a portion of the property thus acquired to promote the intellectual, moral and physical welfare and comfort of my fellow-men, whatever, from circumstances or location, their claims upon me would be the strongest.

"A kind providence has continued me in prosperity, and consequently, in furtherance of my resolution, I in the year 1852 founded an institute and library for the benefit of the people of the place of my birth, in the town of Danvers, in the State of Massachusetts, the result of which has proved in every respect beneficial to the locality and gratifying to myself.

"After an absence of twenty years I visited my native land in 1857, and founded in the city of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, (where more than twenty years of my life have been passed,) an institute upon a much more extended scale, devoted to science and the arts, with a free library, coinciding with the character of the institution. The corner-stone was laid in 1858, and the building is now completed, but its dedication has been postponed in consequence of the unhappy sectional differences prevailing in the United States.

"It is now twenty-five years since I commenced my residence and business in London as a stranger, or in a strange land, for in all my commercial and social intercourse with my British friends during that long period, I have constantly received courtesy, kindness, and confidence. Under a sense of gratitude for these blessings of a kind Providence, encouraged by early associations, and stimulated by my views in well of duty as of inclination, to follow the path which I had heretofore marked out for my guidance, I have been prompted for several years past repeatedly to state to some of my confidential friends my intention at no distant period, if my life was spared, to make a donation for the poor of London."

MAKING A VIRTUE OF A NECESSITY.—Mr. Allan Ker was a man of singular simplicity mingled with considerable shrewdness, a great deal of sterling worth. An anecdote is told of him which was very characteristic. A person came to him in great perplexity. His daughter wanted to marry a man whom he did not at all choose to have as a son-in-law. What was he to do, for the pair were quite dogged? Mr. Ker ascertained, by a few pointed queries, that their fixed determination had been most unequivocally announced, they would marry; and, moreover, that the young man, though distasteful to the papa, was really a respectable and well doing personage. "Well, then," said he, giving his deliverance after a full hearing of the case, "just let them marry, or they'll do't in spite of ye put her in a barrel, he'll kiss her thro' the bung."

DEATH OF A $10,000,000 ENGLISH MISER.

(Correspondence of the N. Y. Express.)

LONDON, March 11, 1862.

I have been so much struck to-day with a case of post mortem justice, that I cannot refrain from narrating it in the hope that some living miser may lay the lesson to heart. The subject of the following obituary was the son of a poor wood-grateful memorial of his whole occupation or character. Making money and keeping it was his occupation. He heaped up riches which he neither enjoyed himself or allowed to others, and knows not who will scatter them. In a few words, he was a man of great wealth but no heart, and his epitaph might be written—'He was born; he lived; he died; he was buried.'"

This large fortune will fall into the hands of a few nieces; and London will be all the richer for the mean man's death. It was only a few days since that he said to a lady who called to enlist his sympathies to a benevolent cause, that "it was against his principles ever to give anything to charity." Won't he feel small when called upon to "give an account of his stewardship?"

NEW CHAPTER IN LITERATURE.

Much mystery has attached to the celibacy of Washington Irving. While upon other points of peculiarity of his character and career his familiar friends have taken pains to inform the wide circle of his admirers, an aggravating reticence has always met the questionings of those who were curious as to why matrimony made no part of his experience. There were occasional and very vague references made to a "long ago" love—so dimly distant in the past as to have the air of tradition—and the manner of mentioning which made Irving appear the model of constancy, if not the hero of a romance. But the circumstance of his bachelorhood remained a simple, unexplained fact—the theme of many wanderings, the warp and woof of much imagening—nay, more, the substructure of a thousand sweet sympathies on gushing from other hearts whose lores had not been lost but gone before. It is doubtful if a secret of the sort—all things considered—was ever before so carefully and completely kept. For once the impertinent were held at bay, the prying were balked, and the sympathetic, even, discouraged. The set time for its disclosure had not come, and, surely, when his intimates and relatives were debarred from the remotest reference to the subject in the hallowed home circle of the literary bachelor, it was but proper that the truth should burst forth upon the world, if at all, in Irving's own selected time, and in his own pathetic language.

It was while engaged in writing his 'History of New York," that Irving, then a young man of 26, was called to mourn the somewhat sudden death of Matilda Hoffman, whom he had hoped to call his wife. This young lady was the second daughter of Josiah Ogden Hoffman, and the sister of those two talented men, Charles Fenno Hoffman, the poet, and Odgen Hoffman, the eloquent jurist. In her father's office Washington Irving had essayed to study law, and with every prospect, if industrious and studious of a partnership with Mr. Hoffman, as well as a matrimonial alliance with Matilda. These high hopes were disappointed by the decease of the young lady on the 26th of April, 1809, in the 18th year of her age.

There is a pathos about Irving's recital of the circumstances of her death, and of his own feelings, "She was taken ill with a cold. Nothing was thought of it at first; but she grew rapidly worse and fell into a consumption. I cannot tell you what I suffered. * * * * I saw her fade rapidly away—beautiful, and more beautiful and more angelical to the very last. I was often by her bedside; and in a wandering state of mind she would talk to me with a sweet, natural, and effecting eloquence that was overpowering. I saw more of the beauty of her mind in that delirious state than I had ever known before. Her malady was rapid in its career, and hurried her off in two months. Her dying struggles were painful and protracted. For three days and nights I did not leave the house, and scarcely slept. I was by her when she died; all the family were assembled around her, some praying, others weeping, for she was adored by them all. I was the last one she looked upon. * * * I cannot tell you what a horrid state of mind I was in for a long time. I seemed to care for nothing; the world was a blank to me. I abandoned all thoughts of law. I went into the country, but could not bear solitude, yet could not enjoy society. There was a dismal horror continually in my mind that made me fear to be alone. I had often to get up in the night and seek the bedroom of my brother, as if the having a human being by me would relieve me from the frightful gloom of my thoughts. Months elapsed before my mind would resume any tone; but the despondency I had suffered for a long time in the course of this attachment, and the anguish that attended its catastrophe, seemed to give a turn to my whole character, and to throw some clouds into my disposition, which have ever since hung about it. * * *

I seemed to drift about without aim or object, at the mercy of every breeze; my heart wanted anchorage. I was naturally susceptible, and tried to form other attachments, but my heart would not hold on; it would continually recur to what it had lost; and whenever there was a pause in the hurry of novelty and excitement, I would sink into dismal dejection. For years I could not talk on the subject of this hopeless regret; I could not even mention her name; but her image was continually before me, and I dreamt of her incessantly."

She was the language in which Irving poured fourth his sorrws and sad memories, in a letter written many years ago to a lady who wondered at his celibacy, and expressed the wish to know why he never married. Can words more graphically describe the shipwreck of hope, or more tenderly depict the chivalric devotion of a faithful lover? How sweetly, too, does Irving portray with his artist-pen, the lineaments of his loved one. He says, in the same letter: The more I think of her, the more I had reason to admire her. Her mind seemed to unfold itself leaf by leaf, and every time to discover new sweetness. Nobody knew her as well as I, for she was generally timid and silent; but I in a manner studied her excellence. Never did I meet with more intuitive rectitude of mind, more native delicacy, more exquisite propriety in word, thought, and action, than in this young creature. I am not exaggerating: what I say was acknowledged by all who knew her. Her brilliant little sister used to say the people began by admiring her. I felt at times rebuked by her superior delicacy and purity, and as I was a coarse, unworthy being in comparison."

Irving seldom or never alluded to this sad event, nor was the name of Matilda ever spoken in his presence. Thirty years after her death, Irving was visiting Mr. Hoffman, and a grand-daughter, in drawing out some sheets of music to be performed upon the piano, accidentally brought with them a piece of embroidery which dropped upon the floor. "Washington," said Mr. Hoffman, "this is a piece of poor Matilda's workmanship." His biographer describes the effect as electric. "He had been conversing in the sprightliest mood before," says Pierre M. Irving, "and he sunk at once into utter silence, and in a few moments got up and left the house." Do any of the pages that record the "Icons of the poets" glisten with a purer, brighter halo than is thrown around the name and character and memory of Matilda Hoffman by the life-long constancy and the graceful tributes of one whose name, destined to a deathless renown, may not henceforth be disunited from that of the early lost and dearly loved, whose death made Washington Irving what he was and what the world admires?

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, THE 1st MAY, 1862.

TO OUR PATRONS.

The undersigned having purchased the Examiner office, begs to notify to his friends and the public generally, that he intends to carry on the paper and the printing establishment in all its branches. Having made arrangements for the Editorial department of the Examiner, he is happy to have to announce that the paper will continue to be as heretofore, a thorough Reform Journal. Not however, after the fashion of these pseudo Reformers who delight in styling themselves "Moderates," "Liberals," "Conservatives," and such like, all of which we have no sympathy with. The principles the Examiner will advocate are those of the good old Reformers of yore, who battled for and won many of the priviledges we now enjoy.

This party exists largely in this county, and it is to it that the Examiner is attached, and it is from this party the present Publisher appeals for that support which is needed in carrying on so necessary an auxiliary as an organ. Having reduced the price of the paper to One Dollar per year, he solicits and anticipates a large accession of subscribers, and trusts that the friends of the paper will exert themselves in procuring an addition to the subscription list.

Having purchased a new Press and a large quantity of ornamental and other type, the subscriber will be in a position to give satisfaction in all kinds of job work, and he solicits a share of patronage from parties having work to do. Office in the new block of Messrs. Nicholls & Hall, on Water Street, up stairs.

Terms of the Examiner. One Dollar per year, payable in advance; when not so paid two dollars will be charged, and no subscription unpaid will be allowed to run over one year. Advance payments always preferred. Parties who have pre paid to the former proprietor will receive their papers to the end of their year. Those in arrears will settle with Mr. Renfrew to the 1st of May, after which time the subscription will be due to the subscriber.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM,
Publisher

OUR POSITION.

The circumstance of the ownership of the Examiner passing into new hands, demands an announcement from the Proprietor to his readers and patrons, as to the principles intended to be upheld, defended, and enforced in the paper, in order that no misunderstanding may exist, as to its real objects and aims. This has already been partly alluded to in the paragraph above but we intend to be more minute in what follows, and shall take occasion while we point more fully to what we aspire to and aim in doing, to call the attention of our friends to their duty in enabling us to carry out these intentions.

The Examiner as many of our readers, are aware, is the successor of the Despatch, which was the successor of the Chronicle, the first Reform paper published in these Counties. The Despatch through the stormy period consequent upon the accession to power of the Baldwin-Lafontaine administration, did good service in the cause of Reform.

The Examiner since its commencement has continued to advocate the principles of its predecessors—and in its present hands, it will still continue to be a reliable Reform Journal. As however, the fusion of parties is so common in these days, and as Tories and Conservatives are calling themselves Reformers we shall briefly define what we understand to be the distinctive features in the political creed of the party to which we belong, and ever have belonged.

The most prominent article entertained and advocated by Reformers was the principle of religious equality. While the Clergy Reserve question agitated the Province, that principle was denied or ignored by the Tories or Conservatives, and the fierce struggle carried on to secure this principle culminated in the rebellion of 1837 and '38—the result of which secured to the people of Canada their rights, heretofore withheld by the dominant party then in power. Another cardinal article was the principle of responsible government, whereby the conduct of public affairs was sought to be carried on in accordance with the understood wishes of the people as manifested by their representatives in Parliament. This too was considered by the Tory party a liberty too great to allow, and it was by them steadily opposed. The Reform party struggled hard before that measure, and like the previous one it was granted after the rebellion, and is now a craft in the principles of Government.

The enemies of the people who so long carried every measure as they liked, irrespective of right, were named the "Family Compact," called so from their monopolising the offices of value and power, and the family connection existing among them. This despotic oligarchy was broken up after the disturbances referred to, and by degrees we came to enjoy a constitution the exact copy and transcript of that of Britain. The Tories yielded their hold only when driven from it by the Reformers who only sought their birth rights, which their political opponents had invariably denied them. The Reformers have also insisted upon a non sectarian system of education, both common and superior, the liberty and ability to exercise the elective franchise, and retrenchment and economy in the public administration of affairs. Having battled hard and long for these they have the satisfaction of seeing all, save the last item, and many more advantageous and popular measures become the law of the land.

The Government for eight years past has been composed chiefly of Conservatives, with a few recreant Reformers. At present the only one of the latter class in the Cabinet is the Postmaster General, who dubbed himself during his late canvass as a Liberal Conservative, or a Conservative Liberal. The Tories and the Conservatives are invariably the supporters of the present government, and these with backsliding Reformers constitute the "moderate" party—a party certainly easily satisfied, if satisfied with the Cartier-McDonald administration.

As Reformers we cannot yield our approval of a Government who have trampled upon constitutional rights, who have recklessly and continuously plunged the country in enormous debt, and who persistently oppose measures demanded by a large section of the country. We state then distinctly that we are opposed to the Government now in power, for their sins of commission and omission, at the same time we do not endorse the popular axiom that the ins per se are vicious, and the outs virtuous. An open, manly, reasonable opposition to the wrong doing of any administration as well as an approval of its good deeds, are alike the duty of the faithful journalist. But we regret to have to say that few journals in Canada but prefer party to right. Either a Government is upheld for its faults as well as virtues, or condemned for its faults irrespective of its virtues. However short we may come of avoiding the errors and pursuing the proper course we point at, it shall be the aim of the Examiner to oppose corruption and wrong doing, and to approve of good measures by whomsoever performed. "Measures, not men," is our motto, and we shall strive to avoid our practice belying our profession.

The great object of all legitimate legislation, and journalism should be the benefit of the people, and those who make laws, or who seek to control public opinion apart from this mistake their calling, and should seek some other employment. In our expressions on public matters we shall endeavour to keep this object in view.

In our intercourse with our contemporaries we shall endeavour to cultivate a spirit of fairness and candour. At the same time public men as such, and public measures, may be severely criticised where the public good seems to require it. We shall by a careful attention to our selections seek to improve the intelligence and morality of our readers, and strive to make the Examiner a family paper.

Having reduced the price of the paper to the lowest possible figure, and with honest intentions to improve the Examiner in every way, we do not think we ask too much of the great Reform party of Peterborough and Victoria to yield us a generous support, thus enabling us to continue our labors for the general good. A party so large and influential could ill afford to be without a medium of communication, and we feel satisfied our friends on reflection will be convinced of their duty in assisting us by their attempts to increase our circulation, so that we can continue the paper with justice to ourselves and satisfaction to the party to which it is attached. We had intended to have added some observations on the objects and design of a newspaper from a contemporary but we shall defer these to another opportunity. Meantime we invite the sympathy of our friends reminding them that being by our profession denied any governmental assistance we will have to depend entirely upon them for the support we require for our continuance. We leave the matter in their hands, and shall go on as best we can, laboring to make the Examiner a welcome visitor to every nook of these Counties.

☞ We have received a copy of the new Militia Bill—a rather lengthy affair. We have not waded through it, but we observe by a letter in the Quebec Chronicle, from a "U. C. Volunteer Officer," that it is one not likely to give general satisfaction in the Western part of the Province. It is stated by the writer that the present Bill does not recognize the recent volunteer movement in the way it should have done. In place of incorporating the various companies, formed and drilled, into the Militia of the Province, the volunteers to enjoy the benefits of this bill must run the risk of being balloted for, or rather must be drawn as any one else. The regulations of this bill against the Government are severe indeed, and reminds us of a certain young man of our acquaintance who is in the habit of "pitching in" fearfully at his friends at times, and may be it is the identical lad himself as he in Quebec just now, and withal a "U. C. Volunteer Officer."

THE INTEREST BILL.

Mr. Archambault has introduced a Bill into Parliament for establishing a rate of interest on money, lent or forborne, not higher than six per cent. Almost every session, for a number of years back, the subject of interest has been brought up, and after very warm debates the Legislature have established next to free trade in money as in any thing else. Since the restriction has been taken off from the rate of interest allowed, the anticipations of the friends of the measure have been realised. Capital has found its way into the Province, and loans can be obtained readily by giving sufficient security. The opposition to the present law came chiefly from Lower Canada. If the proposed measure passes, it will have the effect of withdrawing capital from the country, and the opposers must not complain if money becomes scarce. The borrowers of money often complain of a high rate of interest for the use of money, but if one could transform such men into capitalists they would at once go for "free trade" in money as in all things else. So true is the old saying "circumstances alter cases."

NOTICES OF MOTIONS.

We find the following among the notices of motions made in the Legislative Assembly, on the 25th ult.:

Mr. Haultain,—On Monday next,—An Address to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that he will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House, a return of the Report made during the past year on the condition of the Volunteer Field Batteries, by the Officer commanding the Royal Artillery in this Province.

Mr. Haultain,—On Monday next,—Address to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that he will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House, a return of the Volunteer Infantry, Cavalry, and Engineers at present recognized by the Government, stating their numbers and were raised; also, a return of the reports of their condition, as made by the Officer appointed for their inspection, up to the present time.

THE MIDLAND DIVISION.

There are now two candidates for this Division, Mr. William McMaster and Mr. John W. Gamble. The latter is brought out by the Conservative party, and is a man very unlikely to succeed, having been beaten in the Division in which he lives, and withal it is said he is unable to qualify for the Division he now intends contesting.

Mr. McMaster who is brought out by the Opposition is a wealthy merchant, a sound reliable practical man, and his election will be an advantage to the country.—We have no doubt but that he will be elected by a large majority.

COLEMAN'S MONTREAL HOUSE

To our merchants and others visiting Montreal we can with pleasure and confidence recommend the Montreal House, fronting Custom House Square, Mr. Coleman, proprietor. It is located in one of the most beautiful parts of the City, and is, we must say, one of the finest establishments in the Province.

THE FARMERS' MUTUAL.

We recommend our readers to perse the article on our first page on the Farmers' mutual and stock Insurance Company. The compliment to the energetic agent in this place, Mr. J. R. Watton, is well-deserved. Mr. W.'s office is on the corner of George and Simcoe Stree's.

The Spring Freshets have been very disastrous in many parts of the country. At St. Hyacinthe and the country through which the Richelieu passes, there has been a vast destruction to bridges, dams, mills, and other property. On the Rideau and Grand River, Brockville, Perth, St. Thomas, many serious losses occurred by the floods. In fact everywhere where a creek or small river runs, so sudden was the thaw this season that injury more or less has been sustained. Our own Town has suffered from the immense quantity of water pouring down the creek running through the Town. Messrs. O'Brian and Poole have each had a considerable damage done to their property.

Cabinet Ware-Rooms.—We with pleasure notice the advertisement of Mr. Poole, which will be found in another column. Besides being a business man long and favorably known here, he has the reputation of selling articles in his trade that cannot be surpassed by any manufacturer. We cannot see the necessity for purchasers to buy in the large cities, while articles of the same quality may be bought at home more cheaply.

The Stewart House.—Peterboro is about to have added what is thought by many to be much needed: another first-class Hotel. When we name the intended manager, Mr. Ralph Francis, the travelling public have a guaranty that the Stewart House will be conducted with satisfaction. See advertisement.

CAPT. COLES' PROPOSITIONS.

Captain Coles in a letter to the Times says:—

"I propose to build two distinct classes of vessels, one to replace our wooden frigates and liners for sea going purposes, and the other, a totally different and smaller vessel (or steamer raft) for coast and local defence. I have already stated what I would do with our useless three-deckers—how I propose to build and organise a coast flotilla of steamer rafts. I now wish to state further what I wrote in a letter last October to the Admiralty—viz., that I will undertake to prove that on my principle a vessel shall be built nearly one hundred feet shorter than the Warrior, and in all respect equal to her, with one exception; that I will guarantee to disable and capture in an hour; she shall draw four feet less water, require only half the crew, and desire the country for building at least $100,000 less. I am ready to fall or stand on these assertions."

Mr. Spaulding's "gyration" by the way was not for the immediate abrogation of the treaty, as seems to be in some places understood, but that it should be abrogated as speedily as possible in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

OUR QUEBEC CORRESPONDENT.

We give below our Quebec correspondence. Though written to have been inserted earlier in this Paper it will lose nothing of its interest by a later insertion.—Our readers will, we are persuaded, read it with pleasure. Containing as it does so many common sense and just views on the great question of the day, and also the pleasing intelligence conveyed in it that so many representatives from Lower Canada are ready and willing to help Western Canada if she is but true to herself, on the all-absorbing question of Representation by Population:

QUEBEC, April 18.

Much has been said by the Ministerial party in this Province against the course pursued by the Opposition, in not having allowed the Address to the speech from the Throne, to pass without division or comment. No doubt any course that would be likely to endanger the existence of the present Ministry must necessarily create not a little nervous irritability amongst many of their supporters, at the thought of losing the subsidies and spoils that have long been employed in hushing the more scrupulous of them into silence, or else in securing excuse or support from those more needy and unscrupulous. And there is much that is painful and humiliating in witnessing men of general integrity obtaining the support of large numbers, by a distinct condemnation of the extravagant and unconstitutional acts of our present Rulers, who nevertheless speak with hesitancy and palliation, when their words or their vote would give the slightest efficacy to their previously-expressed condemnation. This appears to have become so common,—to speak one way and to vote another,—that the men at present in power can afford to go on with impunity, condemned one month, palliated the next, and supported the third, until public men have become the object of almost universal suspicion. There is little doubt that this unhappy state of things is at the bottom of much of the obloquy that has been heaped upon those who in Parliament constantly maintained the position and carried out the principles which they had assumed out of Parliament.

Let us now consider the condition of this Province, and its bearings upon the point in question. Much may certainly be said in favour of passing without amendment, an answer to the Speech from the Throne.—That this has been the course pursued for some years past by the British Parliament, ought to be sufficient to give it the most favorable consideration at the hands of Canadian legislators. But if these would imitate the spirit, whilst they profess to respect so highly the form, pursued by British statesmen, there would be fewer reasons perhaps for a departure therefrom. The more thoroughly our Canadian ministers and public men are imbued with the high-toned, honorable and patriotic spirit pervading that class in Britain, the sooner we shall be relieved from the painful exhibitions of political debasement that occur amongst us.

But at the same time, whilst we ought to retain the highest regard for British practice, even where no principle is involved we must not do so to the exclusion of our reason and intelligence, but in the exercise of these, determine how far our circumstances agree with or differ from those of our fellow-countrymen in the old world. There we know an almost unparalleled contentment amongst all classes, so much so that in spite of the efforts of certain demagogues, they cannot persuade the people to demand any extension of their political rights, nor any change in the present order of things. The constitutional course persistently pursued by the Royal Lady that so worthily wields the sceptre of the greatest Empire that the world has ever seen, has not only produced an all-pervading loyalty and attachment to her person and family, but has enhanced the value of that Constitution manifold in the estimation of her people. Her ministers also, under the influence of such an example, have continued to exercise their high functions within the limits assigned them by constitutional practice, and, with God's blessing, to the well-being of the Nation.

Very different, however, is our own condition. Western Canada striding on in wealth and population is demanding an increase of representation in the united Legislature, more proportionate to her superiority over the Eastern section, whilst the latter is apparently as strenuously resisting the just demand. The Ministers of the Crown also, instead of scrupulously working the Constitution, which is on its trial in a young community, acts in opposition to the expressed wishes of the people, violating the practice generally followed as well in the Colony as in the Mother Country, for purely personal and party purposes, and thereby bringing our government into disrepute.

Very different then are the present circumstances of Britain and those of the Province of Canada, and because of this great difference between us, a departure on our part from a practice, not always followed, nor involving any principle, seems only just and reasonable.

The Speech from the Throne was meagre and common place in the extreme, indicative neither of our present condition nor of our past progress, and if it had passed without comment or opposition, would have conveyed a very wrong impression of our real condition. May we not safely affirm that it was the bounden duty of the representatives of the people to take the first opportunity afforded to them by the Constitution, to convey to the Representative of our Gracious Sovereign, so recently come amongst us, some intimation of the grave circumstances into which the opposite interests of the two sections of the Province have brought us. The difficulties of our position, which must seem ready to admit, appear to mark as within the bounds of the strictest propriety, the course pursued by the Opposition. They endeavoured to convey an expression of their regret, firstly because no allusion had been made to the real circumstances of the Province, and secondly because there not even a wish had been expressed that some mode of settlement might be derived. From this point of view the speech clearly indicated the incompetence or unwillingness, or both, of the present Administration to deal with the grave questions before the Country, and for it they were justly censured by a large majority from Upper Canada. The debates arising from the several amendments to the Address, prove conclusively that if Upper Canada were true to herself, as regards a readjustment of the representation, the object obtain, and that at no distant day, the settlement of justice she is now demanding, will be retained, principally by a subsidized press, that no Ministry could be formed that would entertain the question. Until the attempt be made, no positive conclusion can be come to, but the real friends of Upper Canada will see much that is hopeful in the present aspect of the House.

The two French parties are watching one another narrowly, and each is evidently endeavoring to entrap the other into some expression of opinion relative to this question that would bring them under the ban of the priesthood, and give a handle to their opponents by which to destroy their political influence among them. Those capable of forming a correct judgment on the subject are of opinion that were an administration formed favorable to the settlement of the question of Representation, there are several far-seeing and liberally-minded Lower Canadians who would, having the support of the Government at their back, risk the chances of defeat. Another important fact is discernible from the tone and character of the debate, viz: that the representatives of the English-speaking part of the population of Lower Canada are not hostile to the demands of their Upper Canadian fellow-countrymen. They have nothing to dread from just rights being exercised by all, and so they declare themselves. They do not deny the reasonableness of the claims of Upper Canada, but from the unfaithfulness of some of her representatives they are obliged to speak with studied caution, generally avoiding the main element of the question, and raising some inapplicable objections that may be urged against the theory of representation by numbers.—Upper Canadians need to be reminded and instructed that their demands for a readjustment and extension of representation is in no manner or degree dependent upon the merits or demerits of the theory of representation by population. This was suggested as the most convenient mode of adjustment, necessarily subject to much modification in its application. When our opponents base their rejection of our demands upon the incorrectness in theory of the proposed remedy, by all means waive that particular remedy and include wealth and intelligence and energy as elements to be considered, and who can doubt but that our demands would far exceed those at present made. The true state of the case appears to be this,—the French Canadians will allow no elements to enter into their view of the question but the French language and the Roman Catholic religion. By all means secure to them their natural and guaranteed rights and privileges, and let them build walls as high as the clouds if they please to keep themselves separated from their fellow-subjects, but it is ridiculous to suppose that because a man speaks English, he is in a British Colony to occupy an inferior position as regards political and governmental rights to another who happens to speak the French language.—The injustice thus inflicted and sought to be perpetuated by the Cartier-Macdonald Administration calls forth remark even from a Lower Canadian. The member for Rouville (the Hon. Mr. Drummond) in the course of toe debate stated "The demand of 300,000 people in Upper Canada for additional representation could not be long resisted. He knew that Lower Canada was not disposed to abuse the power which they enjoyed under the present Constitution of the Union, but he believed, as was in point of fact the case, that designing men from Upper Canada would take advantage of this peculiar position of things, to rule the country against the well-understood wishes of at least one section of the country. It was necessary that a remedy for this state of things should be found."

Mr Drummond prefers a federation, dividing Canada into Eastern, Central, and Western, but whilst leaving the mode of adjustment for after-consideration, he urges an important truth, ever to be borne in mind that "The ministry of the day ought to propound some plan of settlement, and if their plan did not meet the approval of the people, let them give way to other men more capable, possessed of more creative power, and better versed in the views and feelings of the people, who could devise some plan that would give satisfaction to all sections of the country."

The talented member for Montreal West, (Mr. McGee) represents 44,000 of the inhabitants of Lower Canada, admitted the just claims of the west, and declared his readiness to support the settlement, when Upper Canada shows herself in earnest about it. He rebukes with equal force as justice, the unfaithfulness of many of the Upper Canada members. Alluding to some remarks from the turn-coat member for Lincoln [Mr. Rykert] Mr. McGee says: "He could tell the honorable member for Lincoln and other western members who were shilly-shallying with these constitutional questions, that if no man, however liberal, however bold, was found in Lower Canada to stake his political existence on the early settlement of the representation question, it was just because the members most interested—the members pledged to effect that settlement—set them such an example of unanimity and inconstancy. If the Western members stood firm they could effect a settlement—a national and equitable settlement of the representation question—in a single session, but when they were not true to themselves and their electors, how could they expect Lower Canadian liberal members to risk anything for such an unstable connection? The people of the west ought not to be deceived—if this question was not settled soon and satisfactorily, the fault was not in the first place with Lower Canadians, but with their own [Upper Canada] chosen representatives." The member for Montreal centre (Hon. Mr. Rose) cautiously but decidedly admits the justice of the claims of Upper Canada, but hardly thinks the time for adjustment has arrived. Why has not the time arrived? Simply because of the miserable course pursued by Upper Canada herself. The member for Huntingdon, Lower Canada, (Mr. Somerville) boldly votes for representation by population, and was returned by acclamation in his County at the last election, although threatened by Mr. Cartier, with political extermination.

The members for Shefford, Compton and Missisquoi (Messrs. Huntington, Pope and McFalloran) evidently shew a desire to entertain the question, and doubtless would be prepared to support a ministry that would grapple with it, and that would be prepared at an early day to propose some solution of the difficulty, and stand or fall as the majority of the people should accept or reject it. Now is the time for Upper Canada to stand firm, though many prove sadly recreant to her interests—and are the real cause of the increased and increasing debt and taxation imposed upon the country. The most far sighted cannot see beyond the present hour, whilst there is much to indicate that Canada should husband her resources—and that causes of dissatisfaction should be removed. The time for doing so as regards representation has come. The census has been taken, the superiority in numbers of Upper Canada is an established fact, the inequality of representation has prevailed for about eleven parlors in the two sections, and much that is prejudicial to the interests of the whole undoubtedly exists. Under these considerations, the course pursued by the Opposition with reference to the address, is capable of being defended on wise, patriotic and statesmanlike grounds.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS FOR 1861.

From the Globe.

Deficit, $2,579,498 11

At last we have received a copy of the Blue Book containing the Public Accounts for the fiscal year from 1st January to 31st December, 1861. As we anticipated, the statement of Mr. Galt that the deficiency of the year was only $1,476,868 turns out to be a pure delusion, and in direct opposition to the figures found in the published volume before us. The true deficiency for the year was the enormous sum of $2,579,498 11! That there may be no cavil as to the fact, we publish in full the several items of Revenue and Expenditure embraced in the transactions of the year:—

Deficit in 1861	2,569,498 64

Had Mr. Galt carried out his whole financial plan as developed in his speech of last session, this enormous deficit must have been still greater. He then anticipated paying $800,000 on account of the Seigniorial indemnity, and that the Ottawa buildings should be pressed with all speed. Had he carried out these intentions and included within the transactions of the year various items of interest that have been omitted, the deficit for 1861 would have been three million and a half of dollars. As it is, the deficit is sufficiently startling, and the prospect for the present year is all the more alarming on account of these omissions. What with the new Ottawa expenditures, the Seignoral indemnity, and the threatened Militia Bill, the expenditures for 1862 are likely to cap the climax of this work of folly.

In the last five years the following large deficits have accrued on the ordinary transaction of the Province:—

In 1857, a deficit of	$3,628,424
In 1858, a deficit of	3,654,567
In 1859, a deficit of	1,484,836
In 1860, a deficit of	4,772,048
In 1861, a deficit of	2,579,498
	$16,119,373
Less—Premium paid in 1860 on surrender of six per cent Debentures in exchange for five per cents	1,219,353
	$14,900,020

Here is a debt of fifteen millions of dollars accumulated in five years, simply to meet the ordinary expenditure of the Province; and involving an annual burden on the people for all time to come of no less than $750,000! A more insane policy could not possibly be imagined. Not a shilling of this money was spent on productive works; every penny of it has been sunk in carrying on the machinery of Government from year to year. And the most alarming feature of the matter is that the mad extravagance still goes on. Nothing, apparently, will arouse the country and the Legislature to the folly of the career we are running, until a collapse takes place in London and we are borrow no more.

White-washing Extraordinary.—The Rev. James Williams, the well-known and philanthropic missionary, so long resident in the South Sea Islands, taught their natives to manufacture lime from the coral of their shores. The powerful effect produced upon them, and the extraordinary use to which the applied it, he thus facetiously describes:

"After having laughed at the process of burning, which they believed to be to cook the coral for food, what was their astonishment, when in the morning they found his cottage glittering in the sun, white as snow! They danced, they sang, they shouted, and screamed with joy. The whole island was in a commotion given up to wonder and curiosity, and the imaginable scenes which ensued after they got possession of the tub and brush, baffled description. The high-bred immediately voted it a cosmetic and lavender, and superlatively happy did many a courtly coquette consider herself, could she but exhume her charms by a dash of the white brush. And now party spirit ran high, as it will do in more civilized countries, as to who was and to who was not best entitled to preference. One party urged their superior rank; one had the brush and was determined to keep it; and a third tried to overturn the whole, that they might obtain some of the sweepings. They did not even scruple to rob each other of the little share that some had been so happy as to secure. But soon new lime was prepared, and not a hut, a domestic utensil, a war club, or a garment, but was as white as snow; not an inhabitant but had a skin painted with the most grotesque figures; not a pig but what was similarly whitened; and even mothers might be seen in every direction, comparing with extravagant gestures, and yelling with delight at the superior beauty of their infants."

STRENGTH OF THE IRON NAVY OF ENGLAND.

From the London Times, April 9.

In addition to the iron frigate Achilles, 50, 6,097 tons, 1,250 horse power, building at Chatham dockyard, the following squadron of iron vessels are under construction by private firms for the Admiralty, several of which are in a very advanced state, viz:

The Agincourt, 50, 6,621 tons, 1,250 horse power, building at Birkenhead.

The Northumberland, 50, 6,621 tons, 1,250 horse power.

The Valiant, 32, 4,063 tons, 800 horse power, building at Millwall.

The Minotaur, 50 6,621, 1,250 horse power.

The Orontes, 3, 2,812 tons, 500 horse power, building at Blackwall.

The Hector, 32, 4,063 tons, 800 horse power, building at Glasgow.

The following iron-plated frigates are now building at the several Royal dockyards, the whole of which are intended to be afloat during the present year viz:

The Caledonia, 50, 6,045 tons, 800 horse power, at Woolwich.

The Ocean, 50 4,045 tons, 1,000 horse power, at Devonport.

The Prince Consort, 50, 4,045 tons, 1,000 horse power, at Pembroke.

The Royal Oak, 50, 3,716 tons, 1,000 horse power at Chatham.

The Royal Alfred, 50, 3,716 tons, 800 horse power, at Portsmouth.

In addition to the above, there are no fewer than thirty-one line-of-battle ships and other screw steamers now on the stocks at the several dockyards, most of which are admirably adapted for conversion into shield ships, on Capt. Coles' principle. Of these the Bulwark, 91, at Chatham; the Repulse, 91, at Woolwich; the Robust, 91, at Pembroke, are all in a very advanced state, requiring only a comparatively small outlay to plate them with iron. There are also three first-class fifty-one gun frigates building—viz: the Belvidera, at Chatham; the Tweed, at Pembroke, and the Dryad, at Portsmouth—which are admirably adapted for conversion into armour-plated ships.—They would not require the removal of any decks, as would be the case of line-of-battle ships, but would only have to be lengthened and strengthened to enable them to bear the increased weight which would be placed on them. Of the other vessels in progress, several are intended to carry twenty-two guns and upwards. If completed as iron-cased ste

...part of my prediction this afternoon—held me accountable for it—whenever Andrew Johnson, the Acting (Governor) shall issue a proclamation for holding an election upon the naked issue of the State remaining in the Confederacy or going back into the Union—when the bayonets and side-arms of rebel soldiers are out of the way, the men are not intimidated, but allowed to go to the ballot box and vote without surveillance—I tell you, Tennessee will vote herself back into the Union by a round majority of fifty thousand votes. I told him to fall a notch or two, and I would endorse him."

THE ARMAMENT OF THE "MERRIMAC."

Capt. Ehkely, the inventor of the gun to which his name is affixed, writes to the London Times:—

"It may interest your readers to know that the Merrimac carried 7½-inch rifled cannon, which throw balls weighing 120 pounds, the charge of powder being 21 pounds. The guns of the Monitor were seven inches in diameter, but threw round shot weighing 180 pounds, and the powder charge was only twelve pounds. An ordinary 68 pounder would have done twice the damage at short range. Indeed, even the Merrimac's guns seem to have done more harm to the Monitor, although the solid shot pierced both sides of the Congress and Cumberland. I venture to think, therefore, that the advocates of 360-pounders are in error in supposing that guns of that size can injure an iron-plated vessel.

"To defend a harbour against a Merrimac or Monitor I should myself like either a steam ram carrying no cannon and no masts, or else a lighter and faster ship, carrying only one or two guns, whose shot could crush in the side of an armour plated ship afloat. I cannot believe any shot of less than 700 pounds (and that to be fired with at least 80 pounds of gunpowder) can do this. As Sir William Armstrong is not likely to produce a 700-pounder for some time—the moveable breech-piece would weigh 1,000 pounds—England has no chance that I can see but to provide herself with steam rams, or make arrangements to ransom her seaports."

NAPOLEON'S DESIGNS ON MEXICO.

The Paris correspondent of the N. Y. Herald says:

The most important event to communicate this week is the decision taken by the Emperor Napoleon's government as regards Mexico. France, in spite of the agreement entered into by the representatives of the allied governments, with the Mexican authorities, will not withdraw from the occupation of that sorely tried republic. England, disgusted with the shabby role she was playing as second to France, will leave the Mexican territory. Spain wished to do so likewise, and in fact, a peaceful solution seemed assured. But all this is now ended—the Emperor deposes his representative in Mexico, sends (I assured you he would in my last letter) more troops to that country, and will go on to the capital whether England and Spain do or not. The fact is, France will never give up her hold upon Mexico until forced to by the United States. Napoleon has a plan of his own about the ceding of a new Mexican kingdom to some European Prince, with the view of warding off unpleasant complication here; and he will help to that plan in spite of England's remonstrance, Spain's desire to withdraw from the strife, and America's loudly expressed annoyance. A speedy end to the rebellion would, however, sadly interfere with his present views. The United States, unfurnished by a war, would be too powerful to offend. In such a contingency Louis Napoleon might withdraw; but he hopes the war will last long enough to let him get well seated in Mexico. The withdrawal of England from the affair will, I fear, augment the chances of a recognition of the Davis government here, unless it meets with some signal reverse, such as the defeat of its late Manassas grand army. France is urging upon Spain a new treaty as regards the Mexican expedition, and no doubt Spain will agree to Napoleon's views. If she does not, he will at all hazards occupy the country alone—that is, if he can accomplish this by force of arms. He will, I am assured, send a hundred thousand troops if necessary. He is determined upon the occupation of Mexico. Many of his eminent advisers here think this a great mistake; but Napoleon listens to no counsels, and obstinately follows out his own ideas. In this he resembles the first Emperor. The people here are opposed to the Mexican expedition. The press, with the exception of the government organ, is opposed to it. Prince Napoleon, and in fact all of the Emperor's most sensible counsellers, are opposed to it; but spite of all Napoleon will preserve. Believe me, I dwell upon the matter because I fear it bodes no good to the United States, and that the development of the Emperor's plans will injure the future prospects of the great republic, unless it speedily puts down that wicked, causeless civil war.

THE FRESHET.

The prescott Telegraph says:—"In this County most of the bridges have been swept away; we understand that all of them that cross the Nation river have been destoyed. That at Spencerville is completely gone, together with a building belonging to Mr. Langdon. Lawrence's bridge on the Prescott and Kemptville Macadamized Road, has likewise been swept away. Near Maitland, Mr. Lemmon's mill has been injured, and the water has undermined and removed several rods of the G. T. R. track. The track of this road has also been washed away in many places above and below this station, the trains are consequently much delayed; in fact there can hardly be said to be any railway travelling at all, either by the Grand Trunk or the Ottawa and Prescott road. The bridge at Adams' mill is gone; but the mill is safe. Grant's mill has been injured, and the bridge swept away. In South Mountain, Ganey's grist mill is destroyed, and Pin mew mill carried a mile from where it stood.

THE LIVES LOST.

In addition to the disasters caused by the late, mentioned in our last, the Three Rivers Inquirer, of Saturday says:—"We are sorry to learn that two persons were carried away by the ice on the river Batiscan, at the Bridge, opposite the church, last night, and that two persons lost their lives. We have not been able to learn any particulars. The bridge was removed this morning, and the Company has left to build an hospital."

The [illegible] Building did not only damage the steamers lying in the water quarters as [illegible]; in coming down it also, we regret, to learn, destroyed the valuable mills, wharves, &c., of Messrs de St. Croix, and the flour mills and saw mills of Messrs. DeBlois and Pelletier at Three Rivers. The St. Croix's flour mills were so destructive; they carried away the flour and saw mills of Mr. Genereux, as well as a tannery and a house. At St. Damase, in the same County, St. Hyacinthe, the bridge over the river was undermined, and fell in. Like distress befell the residents along the Black River, and in the neighbouring parishes of St. Aimer. Mr. Lanier's mill in the 5th range of the Parish of Ste. Rosalie, was destroyed by the overflow of the Yamaska river the morning that the dam of Mr. Desmarais' mill, at St. Hyacinthe gave way. The Courier of this latter town publishes a statement, by which it appears that, in four of the wards of the town, 461 persons were on Monday without food or shelter, and obliged to appeal to the charity of the public sustenance. The same journal estimates the damage caused by the flood in that neighbourhood at from $20,000 to $30,000. Yesterday the floods was rapidly subsiding, and in many places the inhabitants were resuming possesion of their houses.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

THE MID-NIGHT REPORT.

ARRIVAL OF THE NORTH AMERICAN.

Interview between the Anti-Slavery Society and the American Minister.

PRINCE DE JOINVILLE ON IRON-CLAD VESSELS.

St. John's N. F., April 28.

The steamship North American from Liverpool, April 17th, via Londonderry, 18th inst., passed Cape Race at 11 o'clock p. m., yesterday, Sunday. She was boarded by the news yacht of the Associated Press, and a summary of her news obtained.

The steamship Nova-Scotian from Portland 5th instant, arrived at Londonderry on the 10th. The Edinburgh from New York, 5th instant, arrived on the 11th inst. The Anglo-Saxon from Portland, March 29th, arrived on the 16th instant. She broke her shaft on the 11th instant, and got a single engine to work on the 14th, and reached Liverpool via the south of Ireland.

The Great Eastern had got off the grid-iron at Melford in safety.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A deputation from the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society waited on Mr. Adams, the American Minister, on the 16th, and presented an address, in which the hope is expressed that the restoration of the Union would be founded upon the abolition of the true cause of strife. The reply of Mr. Adams is described as having been very satisfactory to the deputation; but the Times thinks it indicates the policy of the Northern publications, which is to have the liberty to deal according to circumstances with the slavery question.

TURKEY.

An obstinate fight occurred between the Turks and Montenegrins near Narvich. The latter were repulsed. There was considerable loss on boath sides.

INDIA.

Additional telegrams from Bombay, March 27, announce that Lord Elgin had arrived, and was installed Viceroy of India.

March 13.

Mogul Bey had been hanged in front of the Palace of Delhi.

A wide spread Mahrratta conspiracy had been discovered and suppressed at Hyderabad in the Decar by Saraa Jung.

The President of Semdia had abolished the export duty on cotton in Gwalior.

CHINA.

The Hong Kong correspondent of the London Times, writing in March, reports that a Confederate privateer, in the Chinese seas, had been fallen in with by H. M. ship Plover on the coast of Borneo. If there at all she must have been on the look out for American ships, outward bound, being on their route by the Palma passage, against the north-east Monsoon. The correspondent says this is particularly unfortunate for American shipping, as the Federal Government has not a single war vessel of any description in these waters, except the Saginaw, and she is rotten.

LONDON MONEY MARKET

The funds continue steady with scarcely any demand for discount at the Bank and on the Stock Exchange; short loans are offered at one per cent. Gold continues to flow to the Bank, with no demand for export. There is nothing definite as yet as to the Russian loan, but it is asserted that the arrangements were concluded, not with the Barings but with the Rothschilds.

LATEST VIA LONDONDERRY.

London, April 18.

The political and general news is unimportant.

The question of armour-plated ships and floating batteries continue the prominent topic.

It is vaguely rumored that England has lately made a diplomatic recommendation to France in favour of the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome.

Encouraging advices as to cotton growing in Jamaica and Peru have reached England.

The British Government has given preliminary notice to the Royal Mail Company of the West India line to terminate the existing mail contract at the expiration of the present term.

It is again questioned whether the Emperor will go to the London Exhibition, and it is asserted that if he does it will be strictly incog.

Garibaldi has gone to Brescia. It is reported that his nomination as Commander-in-chief of the National Guards has been decided upon.

The Portuguese Government exempts from export duty for 10 years all cotton on the Portuguese African possessions.

It is reported that the Emperor of Russia has appointed a committee to consider a continual regime for Russia.

The Calcutta mails of March 8th were forwarded by the Bremen to New York.

Liverpool, April 18.

The Breadstuffs market is firm, with a still advancing tendency. Provisions quiet but steady.

London, April 18.

Consols for money 93¼ to 94.

HOW TO CUT GLASS WITH A PIECE OF IRON.—Draw with a pencil, on paper, any pattern to which you would have the glass conform; place the pattern under the glass, holding both together in the left hand, (for the glass must not rest on any plain surface,) then take a common spike, or some smaller piece of iron, heat the point of it to redness, and apply it to the edge of the glass; draw the iron slowly forward, and the edge of the glass will immediately crack; continue moving the heat slowly over the glass, tracing the pattern, and the cleik of the glass will follow at the distance of about half an inch, in every direction, according to the motion of the iron. In any countries be found requisite; however, especially in forming corners, to apply a wet finger to the opposite side of the glass. Tumblers or other glass may be cut or divided very handsomely, by similar means. The iron must be re-heated as often as the crevice in the glass ceases to flow.—Scientific American.

COTTON COMING.—[From the Louisville Democrat of the 8th.]—The Glendale arrived here yesterday, from Pittsburgh Landing, Tennessee river, with some two hundred bales of cotton, shipped by the planters to the brokers in this city. One of our houses received 108 bales, another 75, and a third a smaller number, making about two hundred bales. This cotton is shipped by the planters for their own benefit, and is not confiscated cotton. Some of the planters of that region, now here, represent that large quantities of cotton have been burned, but not by the planters. It is done by the rebels at the command of the military authorities. It is only a few days since that some planters from the interior applied to Gen. Grant for assistance in saving their cotton from destruction at the hands of the rebels, and he sent a force of five hundred men, with a large transportation train, and brought no small amount within our lines, where it was safe. Talk about the planters burning their cotton! All such tales are nothing else but lies.

THE HUGE FORTIFICATIONS OF AUSTRIA RENDERED USELESS.

(Pesth (April 2) Correspondence of the London Post)

For some time past the activity of the Austrian Government has been almost entirely absorbed in the construction of fortresses along the coasts of Dalmatia, Istria and Venice, so as to render the landing of troops, if not, absolutely impossible, at least extremely difficult. experiments have been made with the fulminating and ordinary powder to find effective means of sinking vessels which should approach the Venetian or Croato-Hungarian coasts. The expenditure for navy becomes naturally heavier. Italy has a respectable fleet, and therefore Austria must have one. A Government organ recently stated, with an air of satisfaction, the number of vessels and guns that can be brought to oppose any attempt at landing. The coasts are stated to be unapproachable, owing to the fortifications and batteries erected in all important points; and then there are four screw frigates, including the Novara, and a total of 800 guns in the Adriatic. The mercantile marine now amounts to 350,000 tons, and would be able to lend important aid to the Government. The Emperor of the Archduke have returned from their tours of inspection, with the assurance that nothing has been neglected which could render the coast impregnable; but at the very moment when the Emperor was so satisfied with the means of his defsnece, the news of the facts of the Merrimac and Monitor came to baffle all his defensive combinations. Plated war steamers are now the great desideratum, but to have them money is required, and M. Plener finds that commodity difficult to obtain. Italy has seven iron-plated frigates and eleven screw frigates. Her merchant vessels amount to 350,000 tons, and may at any moment be used as transports. Austria has devised it expedient to protect her coasts with bomb-proof fortifications, but the introduction of iron-plated steamers has rendered almost useless the expensive works along the shores of the Adriatic.

IRON CUPOLA TOWERS IN ENGLAND FOR AMERICA

In the autumn of last year the federal (United States) Government sent an order to this country for the construction of four iron towers similar to that now on board the Monitor. The commission was accepted, and would have been faithfully executed if the Trent affair had not occurred, and so prevented the shipment of all warlike stores, and among them these particular castles. The contractor is now saddled with the produce of his labour, as, in the meantime, the Americans supplied themselves on the spot, and he now contemplates offering them to the water we are provided with Coles' cupolas, which weigh only seventy-two tons to Ericsson's two hundred tons—no little difference in weight for a ship to carry.—(London Army and Navy Gazette, April 5th).

PUNCH SOLVES A PROBLEM.—The engagement between the Merrimac and the Monitor having settled the question of Iron-clad Batteries versus Wooden-Walls, Mr. Punch's inventive faculties have been at work on behalf of sailors; and, perhaps, with an inkling of the smashing results of great experiments at Shoeburyness, he has depicted in his cartoon for April 12, a number of man-of-war's men, enjoying themselves in regular sailor fashion,—one of whom is supposed to be singing a description of the "British Tar of the Future," as follows:—

Can't you see how we're armed; iron plates over all;
Shot-and-shell-proof from sternpost to stem?
Not a man of us now by a broadside can fall:
And for small arms, we've no fear of them.
With sheathing well shielded both forward and aft,
On the furnace fresh fuel we stack,
Then running stem on sink the enemy's craft,
While in safety sits Iron-clad Jack.

Why I heard our ships blacksmith explaining one night
That the strength of our sheathing was such
That, shiver my rivets! says he when we fight,
Not a shot can our timbers are touch.
Should a foe brave in sight to our guns we may fly,
Nor of splinter or shot feel a dread:
Pound away as he will, boys, we'll never say die!
For we're proof 'gainst steel, iron and lead.
We've no woodwork to riddle slow or aloft,
No canvas to shaft or to tack;
Not an inch the ship that is shaky or soft,
Shot and shell proof is Iron-clad Jack!

SOME GOOD IN REPROOF.—A YANKEE NOTION.—The Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Courier says:—

The discussion on the tax bill brought out many allusions, to your frontier subject of "Reciprocity," and it has received more attention than at any other time in its passage. In its present condition, it is increasingly unpopular in Congress, but it was blamed for some things for which it should have been thanked; of these the omission of a tax on flour is one. The staple of life—the simplest, plainest necessary for the support of the poorest man, could never be taxed, and it would have been taxed but for reciprocity. This reminds me of a time, while in the State of Wyoming county, N. Y., a preacher was lecturing against whisky. He said the British lost the battle of Bunker's Hill through it. An old toper on the back bench cried out, "Glory! glory! glory!" "Glory be to whisky!" was an answer to an enquiring look said, "It saved our country, did'nt it, preacher?" So I say. "Reciprocity" has kept us from taxing the staple food of the poor man and his children.

WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

We have news this morning by the Persia which reports breadstuffs dearer, and in good demand. Flour is quoted firm at 6d to 1s per bbl. advance, and wheat in demand at full prices. The receipt of this news has stiffened our market, and though the news has not been known an hour, there are several enquiries for round lots of superfine, while holders are quite inclined to be holders a little longer. We hope and believe this is the beginning of better prospects for the spring trade.

FLOUR—The market is quite excited today, and our quotations are necessarily those of the last two or three days. Extras are sold in small quantities at from $5 35c to $5 40. Fancy $5 10. No. 1 superfine has been selling at $4 50 to $4 60 with poor demand; to-day no body wants to sell and every body wants to buy. We expect a considerable advance during the week.—No. 2 is also scarce and in good demand for lower ports. Sales at $4 40 to $4 45. Fine $4 15.

BAG FLOUR is improving, and sales are made at $2 45 to $2 50 for fair samples, and for prime Scotch $2 55 to $2 60 is paid.

WHEAT—Very little coming in and buyers are steering until navigation opens.—Sales have been made at 97½c for U. C. Spring; to-day $1 is asked.

PEAS—Very quiet, sales are made at 70c to 72½c on the spot, very little inquiry for May delivery.

OATMEAL—Quiet, no sales.

PORK—There have been several sales for lower port orders this week. Mess is offered at $12 50; sales are made at $12. Prime Mess is offering at $10 50 and taken. Prime, $9 50 to $9 75. Hams, 7½c to 8½c.

BUTTER—The stock of all kinds is taken at once at 16c to 17c.

ASHES—Are very quiet, though firm in price. Sales are made at $6 75 for Pots, and $6 70 for Pearls.

To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the disease. Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Scrofulous complaints, and that by which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of afflicted fellow-sufferers. How completely this compound will do it has been proved by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—
SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASES, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, SICK HEADACHE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.
This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many troubling complaints are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life discontented, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.
Sarsaparilla has, and deservedly, such the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, purely because the dealers, alone, has not, all the virtue that is claimed for it, but rather the many preparations pretending to be sarsaparilla are utterly worthless, containing but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.
During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall restore to the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have good reason believing it has virtues which are invisible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the medicine should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.

JUDSON'S
Mountain Herb Pills.

AGENTS, we present you with a perfect Museum of Nature, a chief of a tribe of the strange Aztec Nation, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full assortment of him and his medicine in your Agency. The Pills are composed entirely of Herbs and Roots, and are perfectly harmless in their operation.

The Inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills" has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent several years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "Mountain Herb Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures when, put will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life; and when any derged or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is not more delightful to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food properly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficience of bile. The action of the heart is weakened; and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter, hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity at the fountain-head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some dirt, for instance, in a pure spring, from which one or two rivulets led to a few cottages the whole course of the stream becomes disgusted and disordered. So entirely does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and when the obstruction is removed, the injury of his cause does not. These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body; they may therefore, correctly be called

A CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, &c. The Anti-Bilious medicine acts from the blood, the bilious cause of disease, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and sweet, clearing and renovating the vital organs.

Persons indeed, as it is so, that we are what in phrase within your reach, a medicine like the "Mountain Herb Pills," that will pass directly to the affected parts, through the blood and fluids of the body, and cause the sufferer to brighten with the flush of beauty and health.

Judson's Pills are the Best Remedy in existence for the following Complaints:

Blood Complaints,	Debility,	Stomach Weakness,
Coughs,	Fever and Ague,	Liver Complaints,
Colds,	Female Complaints,	Scrofula or Kings Evil,
Chest Diseases	Measles,	Fits,
Costiveness,	Jaundice,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,	Stone and Gravel,
Diarrhœa,	Piles,	Worms of all kinds,
Dysentery,	Inflammation of the Bowels,

&c. &c. &c.

The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very romantic, way among the Mountains of Mexico, by the Indians, and the Almanac of our Agent, and you will read with delight, the very interesting account in section of the "GREAT MEDICINE" of the Aztecs.

Observe—The Mountain Herb Pills are put up in a square box, with a picture of the Indian on the lid, and his Wrapper. Each box contains 40 pills, and sells for 25 cents per box. All genuine, have the signature of R. L. JUDSON & CO. on each box.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulate the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE HEART OF the ailment, ARRESTS IT, KILLS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

PROSPECTS OF THE
"Scottish American Journal."

A FIRST CLASS FAMILY NEWSPAPER

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF SCOTSMEN IN AMERICA, AND TO THE DISSEMINATION OF SCOTTISH LITERATURE AND NEWS.

FIFTH YEAR.

ON January 2nd 1863, was commenced a new volume (V.) of the Scottish American Journal; and in order that the numbers issued before the first and last days of each year will constitute a complete volume, of convenient size for binding; and each number will contain a most entertaining and instructive repertory of reading matter, calculated to interest all readers of Scottish birth. The Scottish American Journal, though decidedly international in its constant efforts to promote peace and prosperity between the people of Great Britain and America, is yet emphatically Scottish in its copious records of all events occurring in Scotland that can be regarded of the least interest to natives of that country residing in America; and to this "news from home" is added, weekly, a summary of general intelligence from England, Ireland, and other parts of the world.

A distinguishing feature of the Scottish American Journal is its regular re-publication—serbatim et literatim—of the "leading articles" of the prominent British newspapers and of periodicals upon the most important topics of the day. This feature is a unique one, and has been found very acceptable in the people of British North America, as it supplies a long needed desideratum in the Provinces. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from our columns and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper published in America. A concise weekly summary is also given of the principal items of American news, and a similar narrative of events transpiring in the various British Provinces, the latter feature supplying a deficiency which was felt by several of the Provinces' intelligencers as to what was transpiring in other parts of the British possessions.

In the forthcoming volume of the Scottish American Journal increased space will be devoted to the literary department in the publication of serial tales and sketches, vividly illustrating the customs, habits, sentiments and general characteristics of the people of Scotland each tale emanating from the pen of an author of celebrity. As here-to-fore, particular care will be exercised in the choice of original poetry, composed by writers of acknowledged genius and purity of thought, resident here or abroad. The first number of the new volume will contain the commencement of a deeply interesting tale, entitled

THE LIEUTENANT & HIS SON.

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and will be appreciated by

The Examiner.

Poetry.

PAPA, WHAT ARE NEWSPAPERS?

Organs that gentlemen play, my boy,
To answer the taste of the day, my boy,
Whate'er it may be,
They hit on the key,
And pipe in full concert away, my boy.

News from all countries and climes, my boy,
Advertisements, smart, and rhymes, my boy,
Fitted up with all sorts
Of flying reports,
And published at regular times, my boy.

Articles able and wise my boy—
At least in the Editor's eyes, my boy,
And logic so grand,
That few understand,
To what in the world it applies, my boy.

Statistics, reflections, reviews, my boy,
Little scrape to instruct and amuse, my boy,
And lengthy debate
Upon matters of state,
For wise-headed folks to peruse my boy.

The funds as they were and they are my boy,
The quibbles and quirks of the bar my boy,
And every week
A clever critique
On some theatrical star my boy.

The age of Jupiter's moons my boy,
The stealing of somebody's spoons my boy:
The state of the crops,
The style of the fops,
And the wits of the public balloons, my boy.

List of physical ills, my boy,
Blanketed with some body's pills, my boy,
Till you ask with surprise,
Why any one dies,
Or what's the disorder that kills, my boy.

Who has got married, and to whom, my boy,
Who were cut off in their bloom, my boy,
Who has had birth,
On this sorrow stained earth,
And who totters fast to the tomb, my boy.

The price of cattle and grain, my boy,
Directions to dig and to drain, my boy:
But 't would take me too long
To tell you in song,
A quarter of all they contain, my boy.

Miscellaneous.

THE WIDOW'S ONLY SON.

"Mother, I will be everything to you that I can be; I promise you that."

The boy hid his head. A look of high resolve made the young brow manlike in expression. Not yet had ten summers deepened the gold on those fair locks. The earnest blue eyes looked fondly in the fade! face that bent over him. There was a world of love in his soul—a love that was not only lip deep, but was proved by acts of self-denial.

They were poor—that mother and son—oh! how poor they were! You could almost see how poverty had drifted over everything about them—drifted whitely on the pine chairs and table—drifted over the humble quilt that had grown so faded—drifted over their clothes, and through them, till patch after patch was placed on the sad havoc that pitiles, drif ng want had made.

But in the holy heart-love they were richer than the Rothchilds; yes, out of their bank in heaven—that bank directors here might sneer at—they draw every day, every hour, uncounted treasures.

"Mother, I will be everything to you I can be; I promise you that.."

The words are beautiful enough to be repeated. Henry Locke smiled, because as he spoke there came tears to his mother's eyes. He had that morning been promised a place in a country store, five miles from the cot, or rather cabin, where they lived. It was but a small pittance; but of late the mother had grown so feeble that she could earn nothing; could scarcely do the little that order and neatness called for at her hands.

One dollar a week! It was a very little sum, but better, much better, than nothing. Besides, Henry was to have his meals with his employer, and could, if he chose, sleep there. But he did not choose. For a glad smile from mother; for the pressure of that feeble hand; for the tender Christian words that came from those pale lips, he was brave enough willing, after the day's hard work, to walk the five miles, dark and tedious though the way was. Often he came bringing some little delicacy that he had earned, and which was sweet to the invalid because he brought it.

One night the sky was curtained in with clouds. The widow looked from her little window facing the hilly road along which the hay-waggons went on their way to the city, and said, as she saw the twilight deepening earlier than its wont: "He will not come to-night."

No: he would not surely come that night. The wind blew fiercely, and sent the branches of the old apple tree rattling against the clap-boards, and threw the rain, as with a spite, over the little windows sheeting them, and making dreary music. So the widow, quite confident that Henry would not venture out in that storm, said her Bible till her heart kindled with the Holy words, and putting out her little light went to bed.

She knew not how long she had slept, when a voice awakened her. The sweet voice, so dear to her, was crying, "Mother! mother!" At first she thought it a dream; but listening intently, the heard, blending with the wail of the wind, that cry, and a sound against the latch greeted her. Instantly rising, she groped for a light, unfastened the door, and beheld there stood Henry, a pitiful sight, lashed covered with mire, literally from head to foot. His face was wet; but the honest, happy smile was no longer there.

"My boy, how could you come on such a night?" exclaimed the widow.

"Why, mother, storm couldn't keep me away from you," was his hearty response. "I've had the greatest time, though you'd not call it pleasant to be out in such a storm. I asked master for permission to come to you to-night, and he said I might. But I'll tell you all about it by and by. Have you got a light in the window?"

"Mother, I will be everything to you I can be; I promise you that.."

"Yes, and I thought to get back again before dark, but—"

"Your mother—" Henry's voice faltered, as the sad truth flashed upon him. He had not thought before that she would be ill.

"Mother, I will be everything to you I can be; I promise you that.."

"Mother, Henry? Why, she only had a cough and cold when I left this morning. She's not sick, is she?"

"Yes, mother, I think she is very sick. She has a fever, and I'm afraid she's very ill. But you must not be frightened, Henry. We'll do all we can for her, and I hope she will be better by to-morrow. Now you must go to bed, and I'll sit up with her."

"Mother, I will be everything to you I can be; I promise you that.."

"Mother, I will be everything to you that I can be; I promise you that."

THE ARREST OF Sec. CAMERON.

The arrest of the late Secretary of War in Philadelphia, on the 11th of April, on a charge of having illegally imprisoned Mr. Pierce Butler in Fort Lafayette, is a circumstance which, although it has not attracted so much attention as it deserves from the public, is clearly understood by the politicians. These gentlemen, of whom too many have used the name "patriotism" as a disguise for partisanship, are aware of the danger that threatens them in any reversal of the party which is now out of office. Consequently, the late movement in Washington for the purpose of reviving the Democratic party is called a treacherous, traitorous, contemptible intrigue; and one of the Abolition organs, the Continental Monthly, speaking of this revival as an attempt to support General McClellan's war policy, says: "A more ingenious and more iniquitous scheme of fomenting dissension could not be devised." With more foresight than the general mass of the people, the political leaders perceive the dilemma in which they are placed by the manner in which certain individuals, obnoxious to the party in power, have been arrested and imprisoned. They see that they must either admit that the Constitution is in force, or declare that its legal obligation has ceased to exist. Either, with those who still cite the British Constitution because no bookseller keeps a copy of it, and want the Constitution of the United States because it can be purchased for three cents at any bookstore, they must declare that the Constitution is the foundation on which the entire political fabric of the United States is raised, or they must agree with the Englishman who laughingly said that three cents is all the Constitution is worth. From this dilemma, the politicians perceive they cannot escape. Either the Constitution is intended to control any and every political party, which may obtain the executive power of the country, or it is merely an evanescent law, which any and every successful political adventurer may set aside. Either the constitution is a fundamental law, beyond the power of party in ordinary Congress to subvert; or it has lost the character of a permanent obligation, and has ceased to be the Constitution of the United States of America. These astute partisans perceive the difficulty of which the arrest of Mr. Cameron only foreshadows the advent. They see that if the Constitution is not a fundamental principle, but merely a compact that may be broken—then it has no authority over the State which withdraws from its control; if, on the contrary, the Constitution is a permanent enactment, then no party can possess the right to abrogate or transgress any clause in it. Such is the dilemma that is made apparent by the arrest of Mr. Cameron, on a charge of having violated those articles of the Constitution that have especial reference to the security of persons and the rights of individuals. And certainly the dilemma is sufficiently embarrassing, not merely as a forensic question, but also as were intimately affecting the individuals who, having been intrusted with administrative functions, have assumed both legislative and executive power, and, notwithstanding the most explicit declarations in certain articles of the Constitution, have subjected their opponents to arrest and imprisonment, without a trial, and without specific accusation. In this difficulty Mr. Seward has taken a step still further in advance of the power conferred by the Constitution on the Executive, and has addressed a letter to Mr. Brewster (Mr. S. Cameron's advocate) in which he says he is directed by the President to say that the President avows the proceeding of Mr. Cameron as one under his authority, and that he deemed it necessary for the prompt suppression of the rebellion. Whether this step is taken by the advice of Mr. Seward is not very apparent, and is not very material, because the question of the authority of the Constitution is unaffected by it. To suppress rebellion is especially the duty confided by the Constitution to Congress alone; and the question as to the existence and limitation of the force and power of the Constitution applies equally to the action of every member of the political body corporate. We ask our readers to watch the proceedings in this extraordinary case with attention. No more remarkable exemplification can be found of the just value and power of a mere written Constitution than the arrest of Mr. Cameron, and the proceedings that will be adopted to maintain its legality.—Scottish American Journal.

THE CAPTURE OF NEW ORLEANS.

Though no detailed account of the actual capture of New Orleans is to hand, there can, we think, be no doubt that the city has fallen into the hands of the Unionists. The forts erected for its defence upon the Mississippi river have certainly been taken, and it is difficult to see, that being the case, how the city could have escaped a similar fate.

In the loss of the city the Confederate cause has suffered a severe blow. New Orleans was not of much value as a strategical point to the rebels. It did not enable them anywhere to take the offensive. The superior Federal force effectually prevented it being used as a base for naval operations against the trade of the enemy in the Gulf, and as provisions and arms could not be imported by it, it directly added little to the strength of the Confederate army in Tennessee. But on the other hand, while held by the rebels, the communications of Beauregard were safe from interruption. He was enabled to draw his supplies without difficulty from the Gulf States. Now, if the victory is followed up as it ought to be, if gun boats are sent up the river together with a land force of a few thousand men, he will find himself placed between two fires. Even the privilege of retreat is denied to him; he has no place to fly to, unless into Texas. The rebel fleet opposite Memphis, or perhaps a little higher on the river at Fort Wright, must also be sought. With Commodore Foote above and Commodore Farragut below, it has no chance of escape.

Modernity as the possession of New Orleans a great military advantage to the North, but the moral effect of the victory will be of far more importance. The richest and the most populous city of the Confederate States has fallen into the hands of the enemy, and its recovery is hopeless. While the North retains its overwhelming preponderance at sea—and there is nothing to jeopardize that preponderance—it is impossible that the South should retake New Orleans, or "forbid ray of the sun" to warm a single "rebel" by the Federalists. If the English army were destroyed, and the French in possession of Canada, no more serious blow could have been given to the British power than has now been given to the Confederate cause. The struggle may be continued for a "while" longer, until the Federal troops in the east and west can advance, but the extinction of the rebellion is a matter of as complete certainty as anything human can possibly be.—Globe.

ASTOUNDING DEVELOPMENTS.

WHOLESALE LARCENY OF GOVERNMENT STORES.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

The Government authorities of this city have just received the developments of a wholesale larceny operation, the parallel of which surpasses in atrocity and villainy any other that has come to light for many months, exhibiting, as they do, that an organized gang of plunderers are at work within the Federal lines, diligently appropriating supplies and Government stores sent by willing and benevolent hands to comfort and aid the sick and wounded soldiers in the hospitals, and the volunteer who, on the battle-field, is exposed to privations and suffering and fighting for his country, the Union and the Constitution. The particulars of this latest villainy are in substance as follows:—For many weeks, detectives and police have been advised that an unusual number of packages of different kinds have passed through this city en route for sundry towns in the North, and, taken in connection with other information that supplies sent forward never reached their destination, the utmost vigilance was at once instituted, and the co-operation of officers in various parts of the State was solicited in unravelling the apparent mystery.

Within a day or two the officers have succeeded in unravelling a series of most outrageous frauds. Their suspicions were aroused at Toledo on Wednesday last by a large quantity coming through the Express office from Lebanon, Ky., which was believed to be property unlawfully obtained.—The person to whom the boxes, trunks and parcels were directed, and who had previously received large consignments, was permitted to take one of these boxes from the Express office to his store-house in another portion of the city. There the police seized this box and other packages and found them to contain clothing, hospital stores, provisions, &c., plainly indicating to have been obtained in the hospital of the army. At the Express office the remaining boxes and packages were opened and found to contain blankets, drawers, stockings, &c.

Upon pursuing the investigation further, four boxes and two trunks directed to certain parties in Toledo were found in the Dayton and Michigan freight depot.

A man named Alfred W. Hinds, who went from Toledo to Lebanon as a nurse and hospital steward, and soon after returned with a largely accumulated quantity of "extras," has been arrested. Hinds alleges that he purchased his property of Dr. Daniels, Surgeon of the Fourteenth Ohio Regiment, and on this statement and other evidence a despatch has been forwarded, and Daniels was arrested at Pittsburg yesterday. Hinds is in jail in Toledo in default of $2,000 bail. He will have an examination before the Mayor of Toledo on Monday.

At Lima, about sixty-five miles from Toledo, the officers have secured ten tons of a similar kind of property, upon which there are railroad charges of $500. The authorities in this city are also in possession of similar packages, but as the arrests based upon the discoveries here have not yet transpired, we forbear going into particulars, except to say that the evidence is positive that a grand thieving combination has been in successful operation for many months, and it is very evident that the country and the soldiers have been defrauded out of a vast amount, and that a large portion of the contributions of the benevolent societies throughout the country have served no other purpose than to fill the pockets of certain individuals, without ever reaching the soldiers for whom they were intended.

The officers of the Government will take immediate cognizance of the matter, and warrants will be issued for the arrest of any person having any and every connection with the affair.

RESEMBLANCE BETWEEN VICTORIA AND THE PRETENDER.

The portraits of our own Royal Family furnish in themselves a very clear example of resemblance continued through a series of generations. The most observable peculiarity may be said to consist of a fullness in the lower part of the cheek. It can be traced back not only to the first monarch of the family of Brunswick Lunenburg, but to his mother, the Electress Sophia of Hanover; which shows that it did not come from the paternal line of the family, but more probably from the House of Stuart, of which the Electress was an immediate descendant, being granddaughter to King James I. No attempt, so far as the writer is aware, to trace this physiognomy further back than the Electress Sophia; and certainly, in her mother Elizabeth, the Electress Palatine of the Rhine, and in Elizabeth's father, King James, we do not find any such peculiarity prominently brought out. There is, nevertheless, reason to believe that common points of physiognomy in the Stuart and Hanover families can be traced to a generation prior to the Sovereign last mentioned, who is the common ancestor. The writer, at least, must own that he has been very much struck by the resemblance born by the recent portraits of our present amiable Sovereign to one representing Prince Charles Edward in his latter years. The fullness off cheek is palpable in both portraits—the form of the mouth is the same in both—and the general aspect, when some allowances are made for difference of age and sex, is identical. It is few generations back from the Prince, and 8 from the Queen, to King James; two centuries and a half have elapsed since the births of the two children from whom the subject of the two portraits are respectively descended; yet there is a likeness exceeding in what is found in half the cases of brother and sister. The peculiarity, however, is apparent also, in a portrait of Mary of Scotland taken in her latter years; and it may be further remarked that, between the youthful portraits of Prince Charles Edward and those of the Prince of Wales now coming to maturity, a very striking resemblance exists. Thus the perseverance of physiognomy may be said to extend over three centuries and eleven generations—thereby reminding us of the connection between the present Royal Family and the ancient one which it supersedes, and calling us emphatically that the present and Pretender are now happily ONE.—Book of Days.

HURRYGRAPUS.

Under this heading, a capital series of letters appear at different times in the Daily London Free Press. They are signed "Fat Contributor,"—and bear evidence of real wit and talent. If the writer is a Canadian, there can only be cause for congratulation that he is likely to remain such, for the efforts of Hurrygraps, these are to be found in his "Hasty Grapes." There is nothing personal about them—no state jokes, but just what such letters should be, racy and full-flavoured. We have noticed that the letter from Ottawa appears rather irregularly by both the Quebec and Montreal papers, but we have noticed that the Quebec paper has now settled down to the regular publication of the letter, and we are glad to see that "Fat Contributor" is appreciated.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, THE 8TH MAY, 1862.

THE CONGER PROTEST.

We publish to-day the petition of Mr. Conger to the Legislature, complaining of the return of Colonel Haultain as member for this County. It is rather a singular document, and we are curious to know who drew it up, abounding as it does with statements known to be false. We are at a loss to know how the other parties signing the Petition with Mr. Conger could allow their names to be attached to it, if they knew the facts of the case. Our only inference is that they did not know them otherwise they would never have lent themselves to it. We intend to show that the greater part of the Petition is not in accordance with fact, and before we get through we flatter ourselves to be able to show to any reasonable individual that there is no more danger of the unseating of our gallant Colonel from such a harmless wimble than there would be to unseat the Attorney General himself.

It will be observed that the whole gist of the objection against the election lies in the fact that the list of voters for 1860 were used in the back townships, while Mr. Conger and his friends wished those of 1861 used. The whole point in dispute lies in a nut shell—it is simply whether should the rolls of 1860 or 1861 have been used at the election. In the second reason assigned by the petitioners for the undue return of Col. Haultain, they say, "Because the Deputy Returning Officer for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden, and Stanhope was not at the time of the said election in possession of a certified copy of the list of voters within the Municipality revised and corrected last before the receipt by the Returning Officer of the writ to hold the said election." We call special attention to the part we have italicised, as it furnishes an admitted point by the petitioners themselves, that the proper lists to be used at the election are those, and those only, that are revised and corrected last before the writ for holding the election is received by the Returning Officer. Now what are the facts in reference hereto? Why, that prior to the receipt of the writ by the Sheriff not one solitary list for the County of Peterboro' had been returned to the Office of the Clerk of the Peace. Now for the proof: the writ was issued on the 10th day of June, 1861—it was received by the Sheriff on the 18th. The proclamation was issued on the 19th. On enquiry on that day by the Returning Officer at the Clerk of the Peace's Office, no list for 1861 had been filed there. The list for the Townships complained of was made out in Peterboro' by the Township Clerk, and filed by him in the office of the Clerk of the Peace on the 21st and 22nd.

Now, if what we have stated is correct—and we have taken some pains to ascertain the facts—and we therefore challenge contradiction—it follows that the Petition is faulty, and as such will be as harmless as so much smoke. As to the costs of the trial we hear that, in addition to the petitioners, four good men and true are bound to see them paid. These are Messrs. John Harvey, Jonathan Stevenson, Jos. Walton, and John Carnegie, Jr. Never have we known of a protest of an election on such flimsy and untenable grounds, and we do not pity the parties who will have to pay for such frivolity. Not that we say that the Petition in its statements is frivolous or vexatious, but we say positively that it states what is not true, and when the facts come before the Committee, we are satisfied they will dismiss it with costs.

Seldom has it fallen to the lot a Returning Officer to be so blessed and maligned as Mr. Hall has been during the late election in July last; and seldom has a man shown a greater desire to discharge his duty faithfully, impartially, and in accordance to law as we shall presently show. On the receipt of the writ for holding the election, he at once consulted Judge Boswell and Mr. Dumbleton which list of voters should be used at the election. Both these gentlemen agreed that those of 1860 were the only proper ones. Not satisfied with this advice he telegraphed to Sheriff Corbett of Kingston, as follows:—"If Lists for 1861 were not filed when writ was received can I use them—which do you use?" The answer to us as follows:—"Kingston, 21th June,—I was told your Lists if all the years were not filed before the issuing of the writ, take only as many and use last years for wards as were not—this is the Attorney General's opinion. Time. A. Conservy." Mr. Hall applied also to Mr. Harrison of Toronto—the compiler of the Municipal Manual, for his opinion, and the reply he got was to "use only the lists that were authorized in all respects before the writ issued." Notwithstanding the concurrence of so many in the same opinion the desperate efforts made by the Conger party to use the list of 1861, led Mr. Hall to write to Mr. Harrison on the 9th July, asking his opinion in reference to the Deputy Returning Officer would be justified in using the lists of 1861 contrary to the orders issued by the Clerk of the Peace on the 12th [illegible] Mr. Harrison replied that the Deputy Returning Officer would be fully justified in so doing, and certainly must think that the Returning Officer who acted upon a copy of the roll of 1861, filed after the writ of election, did wrong." To charge a man with wrong doing who took such pains to find out how to do right and then act upon the advice he received is indeed most ungenerous, and those most severe in their charges against the Returning Officer if possessed of common honesty and in his position, must do as he did.

Mr. Hall acting upon such advice, such high legal opinion, took every possible pains to ascertain that the Deputy Returning Officer for the municipality of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, as well as all his other Deputies, were in possession of a certified copy of the list of voters, within their Municipalities revised and corrected last before the receipt of the writ by the Sheriff, and it is adding insult to injury to go before the Legislature with charges so false against a public officer for simply doing his duty as any honest man would do, and was bound by his oath of office to do. And in addition to the opinion referred to of using only under the circumstances the lists of 1860 we reproduce a letter to the Leader last summer, and the view of that journal on the point at issue:

THE VOTERS' LISTS.

To the Editor of the Leader.

Sir,—Being greatly surprised at your statement that the use of the lists for 1861 in the late elections was contrary to law, I shall feel obliged if you will point out how the following was objectionable.

The Township assessment roll was finally passed by the Revision Court, 1st May, voters' list made and certified 6th May, and deposited with the Clerk of the Peace, 8th May. Writ for County not issued till 10th June.

I am, sir, your obd't serv't,
A Deputy Returning Officer.

1st August, 1861.

"Perhaps our statement admitted of misconstruction. The "high legal opinion" to which we referred was predicated upon the fact that in several instances the deputy returning officers used lists which were not made out formally until after the issuing of the writ. In such cases the roll for 1860 was the proper one; and the use of the roll for 1861 assails the election. So, at least, we are advised by legal gentlemen whose opinions carry weight. The case adduced by our correspondent does not come within the category."

If blame is to be attached to Mr. Hall at all it is in his saying to his refractory Deputys he would refuse to receive their returns if they used the lists of 1861, but actions speak louder than words—and second thoughts are often best—and he did not do as he said he would, his bark was worse than his bite, and he did receive the lists used by the Clerks of Asphodel and Ashburnham, though they went against his orders and used the lists of 1861. This conduct of the Deputy Returning Officers was illegal and if the Petitioners had but inserted these two municipalities instead of the one in the back woods they might have upset the election. But it is too late to mend their pleadings, and the case must rest and be decided on the counts in the indictment. We have no hesitancy in saying that the Bill will be returned into Court endorsed Ignoramus.—Mr. Conger must seek some more profitable way of employing himself than attempting to upset a bona fide member of the Legislature. Men of ordinary intelligence might be aware that even if the present attempt were successful nothing would be gained by the party moving in it beyond the excitement of another election. The Colonel would be re-elected in spite of all efforts to prevent it. So view it as we may we have nothing to fear from the consequences of the investigation.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOL BILL.

It will be observed from the records of the doings in Parliament that a new Separate School Bill is now before the House, having been introduced by Mr. Scott, member for the City of Ottawa, who, according to the opinion of Dr. Ryerson—no mean opinion in matters politic as well as scholastic—"seems to have become the organ of an ultra party in the Church of Rome, that has caused much trouble in the Separate School question in Upper Canada." The bill in its present shape is objected to by the Chief Superintendent, and many members who spoke on the debate at the vote for its second reading. It however has had a second reading, and has been referred to a Committee of five members, viz: Messrs. J. A. McDonald, McCann, Bell, (of Russell) Anderson and Bown. On the motion to have it read six months hence 13 only voted yea and 93 nay. From all we can gather it appears there is a dissatisfaction expressed by Catholics on the bill now stands, and there is good reason to believe that if the present bill passes in its present shape it will not give satisfaction to the parties concerned. Dr. Ryerson in a letter to the Leader expresses a hope that the bill introduced by Mr. Scott may not become law. He says: "If Mr. Scott's Bill be passed, I hope for the honor and character of Upper Canada it will be rejected by the united vote of both parties of Upper Canadian representatives." And while planning to expel Mr. Scott as attempts to remove needless impediments out of the way of the working of the Separate School law he thus discourages: "but the accomplishment of no just and legitimate an object is very different from perpetrating as great an act of injustice to Upper Canada, and inflicting so flagrant a wrong upon many of its citizens and institutions as the passing of Mr. Scott's present Separate School Bill."—Poor Mr. Scott is between two fires—the Toronto Freeman as well as the Chief Superintendent discourages his measure, and he merits sympathy. The Separate School system has been [illegible] upon us, and is in our common system, threatening to destroy it. It seems as if the present agitation is likely to [illegible] the wedge, and we will [illegible] if the present Parliament will pass another wedge being inserted. It appears from the Church of England pulpit that their correspondents have passed resolutions affirming the principle of Separate Schools, and Mr. J. H. Cameron has been foremost in their advocacy. We therefore anticipate that this gentleman will bring forward his measure some of these fine days. We may then expect a fearful rush for those troublesome affairs, and we really do not see how it is possible to grant a favor to one denomination and deny it to the rest. Again we have heard the Separate School system compared to a safety valve—meaning probably that it secures the Common School system from explosion—but care should be taken that too much weight be not applied or too many appendages added, or it may after all blow up and "burst the boiler!" Separate Schools in Upper Canada are not so beneficial to Catholics as many suppose, and aside from the impolicy of their existance, in the separation of the youth of the country in the most important part of their life, they are a source of a deal of trouble in the municipalities where they exist, to all concerned. If the Catholics wish to retain their schools the less fuss they make about them the better, their agitation is never very agreeable stirring up strife and ill feeling that had better be suppressed.

THE SOLICITOR GENERAL ADRIFT.

The fates seem unpropitious to Solicitor General for Upper Canada. Poor Mr. Morrison became a sort of political wanderer, travelling from constituency to constituency, till after being an outcast by three, he gave up in despair; and has now obtained a judgeship by way of solatium to his wounded feelings. Mr. Patton stepped into Mr. Morrison's boots, and the electors of Sangeen, whose representative he was, have declined to re-elect him. Poor Mr. Patton! What is to be done with him? Will the Attorney General West retain him at his post without a seat as he did in Mr. Morrison's case; or will he send him to other constituencies to be again and again defeated in order to qualify him to become a judge? We scarcely think that Mr. McDonald will at present venture to do either; but he may consider the defeat in Sangeen sufficient to entitle Mr. Patton to a County Attorneyship; and thus, as is his wont, reward those who like Mr. Patton sacrifice themselves in a bad cause.

Mr. Patton disposed of, who next will face the evil destiny of Solicitor General? Who next will venture to cast in his lot with the man who on a recent occasion and because he knew the accusation to be true, was compelled to sit in silence and bear himself denounced in the house as a man who had done more to demoralise society in Upper Canada, than all the other members of the House put together? Time alone will tell; but the man who ventures, certainly will be bold as well as reckless and unprincipled.

The Electors of Sangeen have nobly done their duty, and similar treatment of political renegades by other constituencies would in a very brief space of time terminate the career of the Cartier-McDonald Ministry.

We may congratulate ourselves that henceforward none but a constituency of fools will elect a member of that Cabinet, on the faith of fair promises, as the County of Peterboro' did in Mr. Smith's case. Mr. Robinson has effectually opened the eyes of the most credulous, to the systematic depravity of the ministry in that respect.

☞ We observe that a Bill has been introduced in the House to amend the Division Court Act, making it lawful to try a case in any Division where a Defendant may be found, irrespective of where the cause of action arose, and notwithstanding that the defendant may at such time reside in a county different from the one in which such Division Court is situate and such suit is entered—a good measure we believe. A Bill has also been introduced by Hon. Mr. Campbell restricting Towns and Villages from extending their limits beyond a certain number of acres. The proposed plan is to allow towns and villages to have one hundred acres of area to every thousand inhabitants after the first thousand, which is allowed two hundred acres. Thus Peterborough would not be allowed to extend its limits unless it has less than five hundred acres, and if this measure becomes law we could have a very small addition to the limits of the Town if any. We look upon Mr. Campbell's Bill as a work of supererogation. The Towns, Villages, and neighbourhoods thereof are the best judges of the need of extension.

PETERBORO' FIELD BATTERY.—We have been given to understand that there will be a full meeting of this Battery next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, when matters of great importance will be brought before the members. All the members, we hardly need say, will be expected to attend. For our part we wish the Battery every success.

ENTIRELY "HOPELESS"!

"Mr. McMurrich is at present engaged "in the hopeless task of opposing Hon. Mr. "Patton in Sangeen." "How either Mr. "Brown or his party will be humbled by "Mr. McMurrich's defeat is a secret yet "lacking out"—London Prototype.

No doubt, no doubt! Mr. McMurrich's defeat would have been bad—but what about Mr. McMurrich's victory?—Globe.

THE CONGER PETITION

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, Wilson Seymour Conger, of the Town of Peterboro', in the County of Peterborough—one of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria: Gentleman, Charles Perry of the said Town of Peterboro', Esquire, and Maunsell Boyd, of the same place, Lumber Merchant, electors of the aforesaid County of Peterborough, whose names are severally subscribed thereto,

HUMBLY SHEWETH:

That your petitioner, the undersigned Wilson Seymour Conger, was, at the late election of a member to serve in the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of Canada held in and for the County of Peterborough aforesaid, a candidate, and claimed and still claims to have had a right to be returned or elected thereat, and that your petitioners, Charles Perry and Maunsell Boyd, were respectively duly qualified electors of and for the said County of Peterborough, and had a right to vote at the said election for the County of Peterborough.

That a Poll was duly taken at and for such election, when Frederick William Haultain, Esquire, was said to have been elected as member as aforesaid, for the said County of Peterborough, and was returned returned by the Returning Officer as such member.

That your Petitioners complain of the undue election, and of the undue return of the said Frederick William Haultain, Esquire, to serve in Parliament, for the following reasons:

1st. Because the Returning Officer upon receiving the writ to hold the said electors for the said County of Peterborough, did not ascertain that the Deputy Returning Officer for the United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope was in possession of a certified copy of the then last revised and certified list of voters within the Municipality of the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, for which he was Deputy Returning Officer.

2nd. Because the Deputy Returning Officer for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, was not at the time of the said election for the County of Peterborough in possession of a certified copy of the list of voters within the Municipality of the United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, revised and corrected last before the receipt by the Returning Officer of the writ to hold the said election for the County of Peterborough.

3rd. Because the Deputy Returning Officers for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope refused to receive and record the votes of duly qualified electors, whose names appeared upon the list of voters last made and certified prior to the receipt by the said Returning Officer of the writ to hold the said election for the County of Peterboro'.

4th. Because the Deputy Returning for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, admitted persons to vote at the said election for the County of Peterborough whose names did not appear upon the list of voters last made and certified prior to the holding of the said election for the County of Peterborough.

5th. Because the Deputy Returning Officer for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope made use of and was guided by and permitted such persons alone to vote whose names appeared upon the list of voters for the said Municipality of the United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, made and certified in and for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty, and refused to make use of or to be guided by or to permit such only to vote whose names appeared upon the list of voters for the said Municipality of the United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope, made and certified on and for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, and that in truth and fact, and within the meaning of the statute in that behalf the persons whose names appeared on the list of voters for the said Municipality of the United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one were such persons alone as should have been admitted to vote in the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope at the said election for the County of Peterborough.

6th. Because the list of voters for the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope for the year one thousand eight hundred ad sixty-one exceeded in number of persons appearing by the list for the year one thousand eight and sixty as entitled to vote, by one hundred and thirteen, and that the said one hundred and thirteen persons were entitled to vote in the said United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope at the said election for the County of Peterboro, and were not admitted to vote thereat,—and were therefore disfranchised, and the election aforesaid for the said County was therefore undue, illegal and unfair.

7th. Because the Returning Officer for the said County of Peterborough did by threats and intimidation induce the Deputy Returning Officer of the aforesaid United Townships of Galway, Snowden, Minden and Stanhope to use the list of voters of the United Townships aforesaid, revised and certified in and for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty in lieu of that revised and certified in and for the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one.

8th. Because that by reason of the premises the said election and return of the said Frederick William Haultain was and is wholly null and void.

Your petitions, therefore, humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the premises into your consideration, and will declare the said election and return of the said Frederick William Haultain to be null and void, and that a new writ may issue for an election for the said County of Peterborough, and that your petitioners may have such further and other relief in the premises as may be deemed just.

And your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

—An African Serpent, of the python species, in the Zoological Gardens in London, was found one morning with a hundred eggs which she had laid during the night. They are about the size of guinea eggs, and covered with a leathery skin of a dirty yellow color. She coils her body over, and around them, and performs her incubatory duties with determined perseverance. The time of incubation is not known for a certainty, such an event with the larger serpents never having happened before in England, but it is supposed to be from seven to eight weeks. At the time of depositing the eggs the reptile had not been fed for twenty-one weeks, nor has since taken her food.

STEAMSHIP "ARIEL," AT SEA.
[illegible], 1862.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—As I promised considerable acquaintances and your readers and friends of gaining some reliable information respecting the steamship route to British Columbia via Panama and San Francisco, (although as yet I may say I have only just fairly started,) I will give them, through the medium of your valuable paper, such hints as I think may be of service in assisting them to get a fair start on their journey. First, I would advise to leave Peterborough at least six days before the sailing of the at steamer you intend taking passage in, if you intend going in the steerage, as steerage berths are all taken three or four days before each steamer leaves; if you are later, you may get a ticket, but stand a poor chance for a berth. Do not buy your ticket, as I did of Bray in Hamilton, or any other town except D. B. Allen, No. 5, Bowling Green, New York. The office in the latter place exhibits Bray as your appointment as theirs—and your berth and ticket is procured by Allen, on the arrival of your ninety dollars Bray, not sooner, as he gives you an order on the office in New York for it. You can bring your money on to New York and get your ticket two or three days sooner than by buying from him. I did not get mine until the third day after my arrival in New York. When you arrive in New York, if you are not acquainted with the city, or recommended to any particular Hotel, I would recommend you to put up at Day Street House, No. 69, Day Street, I found it comfortable and respectable. The steamers sail on the 1st, 11th, and 21st of each month, from pier No. 3, North River—fare to San Francisco, including the Panama Railway ticket, $300 cabin; $150 Cabin, $100 steerage; the trip occupies twenty-four to twenty-eight days. From San Francisco to victoria $45 first cabin, $25 steerage—time, four to six days. Ask no questions in New York of any person excepting your boat or a policeman concerning passage, as there are plenty of bogus offices, and sharpers to lead you into them. I would advise young men who intend going to take the steerage passage, unless their means are ample, and to lay in some good bacon, a boiled ham, some cheese, dried beef, tea, coffee, &c., and any other little comforts, to use on the passage, as the ship's steerage fare is decidedly rough. You certainly can live on it if in strong and hearty health, but if you will find that the four or five dollars you invested in prog is not the worst investment you ever made.

Our party, consisting of Hughes, Fortye, Cooney, Fearle, and self, is in good health and spirit. We are within a few hour's sail of Aspinwall, where I will mail this letter to return with this steamer.

Yours truly,
JNO. W. EDWARDS.

MR. J. B. ROBINSON.

Mr. J. B. Robinson was asked last night by Mr. Foley whether he had given a pledge to the people of Toronto that he would resign his seat in the Cabinet if he did not obtain for them relief from the Government to a large amount. Mr. Robinson replied that he had never given such a pledge! Mr. Foley at once read from a report of Mr. Robinson's speech, published in the Leader, a promise to the effect mentioned. Mr. Robinson then said that he pledged himself to that in order not to be behind his opponent, and furthermore added that "everybody knew how these things were conducted." These frank declarations of the views of a Minister of the Crown on the value of his pledges to his constituents were, the report says, received with "great Ministerial laughter and cheers." It is difficult to say whether Mr. Robinson showed more folly or want of principal in this singular scene. He was charged with breaking a very important promise to his constituents, and he denied the charge in the broadest and most positive way. The proof was furnished that

AN HEIR OF THE IRISH PEERAGE IN THE POLICE COURT FOR CRIME.

This morning a boy about fourteen years of age, named Charles Beresford, was arrested, and taken before the Police Magistrate, charged with obtaining goods by false representations, or some offence of that sort. He went to a store on State street and represented that his mother sent him to procure certain goods, which, if they suited her, would be paid for; if not they would be returned. Neither the goods nor the money came back, hence the proceedings. If the mother assumes the responsibility of the act, it will clear the boy, and it is presumed that she will. This lad is the presumptive heir to an Irish peerage and a rich estate. His mother was a Nova Scotian, the wife of Major Beresford, a retired officer of the British army, who lived at Hamilton, C. W. Some ten or twelve years ago, when the lad was an infant, the wife fled from Canada with one Gallagher, employed as a conductor by the husband. They brought the child with them to this city and with a little money which the woman had they purchased a piece of land in the neighboring town of Irondequoit. There they lived for a time and then moved to the city, where they now reside. Gallagher owns a Nova Scotian title-deed, and is disposed to be an industrious man. He has found employment as a laborer, and somehow the refugees have got along ever since. Major Beresford procured a divorce from the Canadian Parliament. For a long time after the flight of the couple from Canada Major B. tried to obtain possession of the boy, his son, but he did not succeed, though a large sum was offered for his delivery in Canada. He did for a time set apart and pay his wife, living with Gallagher, the annual stipend, but of late years that was stopped, it is said, and her only reliance has been upon the man with whom she fled from the house of her husband. As a consequence she has been in reduced circumstances, Beresford was an old man when he married this woman, and must now be upwards of seventy while she is less than forty. His uncle held the peerage, but the Major was the heir, and this boy now under arrest being his oldest son, would follow him, and will attain to the estate and peerage even though he remains here till the death of his father. The trial of the divorce suit brought against this woman in Canada was published and caused considerable comment in the papers. She made no defence, however, and the decree was not aside, not through any influence on her behalf, but by the Ecclesiastical Courts, who were jealous of any infringement upon their rights and powers by the Provincial Parliament.—Rochester Union.

THE NORTHUMBERLAND SHERIVALITY CASE.

It was expected that a case would have come up at the Assizes here which would have elucidate certain curious and important facts in relation to the sale of the Sheriwalty of Northumberland and Durham. A suit was entered for trial entitled Ruttan vs. Covert. The Plaintiff sued for £3000 due under a deed of Mortgage.—The pleas entered by the defence probably frightened the crew out of court. They were in effect as follows:—

That before the date of the Mortgage the plaintiff, Mr. Ruttan, was Sheriff of Northumberland and Durham; that he, Ruttan, illegally, corruptly, and contrary to the Statute sold his office to Jas. B. Fortune, the present Sheriff, for £5000. To pay this sum Fortune gave ten notes of £500 each endorsed by Covert, and the Mortgage was given as collateral security for a portion of these notes. It was therefore pleaded that the obligation was illegal and, of consequence, void.

For the present, the facts of this infamous transaction have evaded full investigation; but the time must come when a full enquiry must be necessary; and as the defendant has ventured to place on record such pleas as we have quoted, we suppose that the plaintiff will not realize much more wealth from his immoral bargain. No wonder that poor Fortune is a defaulter to the County Council if he has to meet his payments to Ruttan out of his income; nor with such liabilities, upon its income can we wonder if the Sheriff's Office should have become a mere den of extortion, where poor debtors are fleeced and robbed to supply the place of corruption and fraud.—Freeholder.

CROP PROSPECTS IN CANADA WEST.

—There has not been for years a spring in which the fall wheat and grass crops have looked better than this, and next harvest it is evident that the farmers will again be able to indulge in the luxuries that the "hard times" and bad crops of the past few years have deprived them of. The fruit trees look healthy, and the indications are in favor of a large yield. The spring work is, however, much retarded by the wet weather, and it is highly probable that very little will be done in getting in spring crops until the 10th or 15th May.—St. Catharines Journal.

WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Our reports for this week is better than we have had the pleasure of recording for some time. The North American's mail is received this morning, and fully confirms the news by the Persia. The wet and cold weather still continues to prevent the sowing of the crop in England, and the general tone, both of English and Scotch markets is firm, and sales made at 1s. to 1s. 6d. per bbl. advance on flour, and 6d. per bushel on wheat. There has been considerable sales during the last two days at $5.00, for Superfine. Provisions are dull.

Freights—Lake freights are low; there are several sea-going vessels in port, but up to to-day no engagements have been made that we can hear of.

Flour—Extras, $5 80 to $5 60; Fancy $5 10 to $5 15; No. 1 Superfine, $5 00. More is asked for future arrival, but no transactions; No. 2, $4 55 to $4 65; Fine $3 25 to $3 35.

Bag Flour—Ordinary spring wheat, $2.45 to $2.50; best Scotch $2.50 to $2.65.

Wheat—Nothing arrived by water. Arrivals on cars are very light, and sales acceptable to depot $1 00. We hear $1 07 proffered to-day.

Peas—Are selling at 70c., but few coming in.

Oatmeal—Sells at $3 90 to $3 75; bulk at $4 00.

Pork—Mess pork unchanged. Prime Mess meets with a little enquiry, and sales made at $10 50 to $10 75; Prime is held to small lots at $10.

Butter—Is in fair demand from the country purchasers for packing. Better grades nearly $ lb. Dairy is also in good demand and sells readily at 12c.

Lard—Are doing better in England, and are being enquired for here. Sales are made at $8 75 for first Pots, and 8c. made for tierces. Firkin $8 75.

BUSINESS AT HAMILTON.

Six vessels are loaded with timber at the Great Western Docks, five are loading with staves, and a number have cleared during the past five days.—Hamilton Spectator.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

BRYAN'S
PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, to which what other ingredients of both greater alterative power can be added, in order to afford an effective antidote for the disorder Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proved by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found in the catalogue of the fatality complaints, as—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, TUMORS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TETTORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASES, DROPSY, MERCURIALIA ON THE CONSTITUTION, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, Blood on ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. Purified thoroughly by expulsion of them many troubling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions. If not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Diseases and the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; purify it when-ever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life diseased, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, hardly become the druggists alone has not all the virtues that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or nay thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall restore the name from the level of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have good grounds for believing it has virtues which are invaluable by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price, $1 per Bottle; Six Bottles for $5.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues wherever it has been employed. As it has now been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that in many to relieve as to do for those relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and for Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled excellence of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The Agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

ASIA, we present you with a perfect Monster of Nature, a cloud of a train of the strongest Aztec Poisons, that ever rolled thereon. You will find a full appreciation of this and the power in our Pamphlets and Almanacs, to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The Invention and manufacture of Dr. Judson's Mountain Herb Pills,* has opened the greatest part of his life to his invalid, having worked hourly every moment in the world. He spent other six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and Oregon, and it was then that the wonderful Herbs which compose these Pills were discovered. The interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in the Almanacs to be had gratis.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Every globe feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly succumb. The vessels will and thence the head positively. The liver ceases to perform a healthy office. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity of the deathless blood of Judson's Mountain Herb Pills. Judson's Pills are a perfect purifier, even when run a May riotist, in a few minutes the whole system of the virulent poisons developed into circulation, and quickly drive impure blood by to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become enlightened, and pulsate the purifying influence. Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera, Morbus, Fever and Ague, Liver Complaint, Headache, Indigestion, Sour and Grand Dyspepsia, Influenza, Sanatory Symptoms, Piles, Scurvy, &c., &c., &c.

☞ The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very surprising way among the Tamaras, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Get the Almanac of our Agent, and you will read with delight, the very interesting account in relation of the "Grand Discovery" of the Aztecs.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

A FIRST CLASS FAMILY NEWSPAPER

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF SCOTSMEN IN AMERICA, AND TO THE DISSEMINATION OF SCOTTISH LITERATURE AND NEWS.

FIFTH YEAR.

ON January 2nd 1863, was commenced a new volume (V.) of the Scottish American Journal; and in future the numbers issued between the first and last days of each year will constitute a complete volume, of convenient size for binding; and each number will contain a most entertaining and instructive repertory of reading matter, calculated to interest all readers of the British origin, and such Scottish American Journal, though decidedly international in its constant efforts to promote peace and prosperity between the people of Great Brit in and America, is yet emphatically Scottish in its copious records of all events occurring in Scotland that can be regarded of the least interest to natives of that country residing in America; and to this "news from home" is added, weekly a summary of general intelligence from England, Ireland, and other parts of the world.

A distinguishing feature of a Scottish American Journal is its regular re-publication—verbatim et literatim—of the "leading articles" of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the most important topics of the day. This feature is a unique one, and has been found very acceptable to the people of British North America, as it supplies a long needed desideratum in the Provinces. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently and now largely uses this issue a touch and force by copiously extracting from our columns and designating the Scottish American Journal as the leading and influential paper published in America. A concise weekly summary is also given of the principal items of American news, and a concise narrative of events taking place in the British Provinces, will be found added to what our subscribing is other portions of the British possessions.

In the forthcoming volume of the Scottish American Journal the several issues will be devoted to the literary department in the publication of early tales, of a high order, and calculated to entertain the general reader, and the more general characteristics of the people of Scotland each tale commencing with the period and locality of celebrity. All tales will be carefully selected and will be exercised in the choice of original poetry contributed by writers of acknowledged merit, and chiefly characteristic, reading matter generally. The first number of the new volume contained the commencement of a Scottish tale of interest, entitled

THE LIEUTENANT & HIS SON:

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and will be appreciated by all classes of readers.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is sometimes caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. The foul corruption, which genders in the blood, disposes the decoction of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power by withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family, has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must counteract the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this awful, where prevailing and fatal malady. It is compounded from the most active remedials that have been discovered for the suppression of this foul disorder from the blood, and the renova of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as Erysipelas and Salt Rheum, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose, or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Blains and Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ringworms, Syphilitic Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Dropsies, Debility, and, indeed, all Complaints arising from Vitiated or Impure Blood. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of the Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate this vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

AYER'S

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so compounded that disease within the range of their action soon readily withstand or avoid them. Their sugar-coating preserves them perfectly, and renders them pleasant to take, while their searching properties, the mildest way to operate on the internal organs, correcting by powerful influence such derangements as first cause sickness in the system. If "a healthy discharge" is produced by these or any other purgative, the bowels may be opened from constipation or injurious accumulation, and the whole body is thereby relieved. Such safe, sure and simple remedies as these Pills are needed in every family, as a protection against the first approach of disease, and for the cure of the innumerable ailments which spring from the derangement of the digestive organs. FOR THE RAPID AND CERTAIN CURE OF Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness,

Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping-Cough, and for the relief of Consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease. No remedy has ever been discovered which has proved so universally successful in the cure of pulmonary complaints, or which has won such unqualified confidence in communities where it has been known. Where its virtues are unknown, the public have only to make a trial of it to be convinced that it is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that has ever been offered to mankind. Its unparalleled success has made it known throughout the civilized world, and there is no country, no section of country, and scarcely a village, where some living witness to its power cannot be found. Many publications have been issued containing certificates of their cures, and we do not deem it necessary to do more than refer the reader to the following cases, which have occurred in the practice of Dr. Ayer's agents in the vicinity of their residence. Their neighbors and friends are familiar with the facts, and will vouch for their truth.

Poetry.

The Song of Spring.

BY W. WOOD.

Sweet Spring is here, arise, rejoice—
Join Nature's glad uplifted voice!
Birds blythely ring from every bough,
No hymn of gratitude hast thou?
Young flowers are waving in the dell—
Hast thou no tale of love to tell?
Fleet streams are fresh from Winter's thrall—
Hast thou no blessings to recall?
[illegible]
But see! the Queen of buds and blossoms
Comes scattering wide her rich perfumes.
Gently she leads her spiritful train
By silvery brook and verdant plain;
With dance and song they glide away,
While harps unseen take up the lay,
Till earth and sky with music rings—
Come, let us hear the song she sings:

"I have fled forth from the dismal North,
I've broken the icy band
That kept me fast in the storm-fiend's blast,
And under his death-white hand.
Grim Winter's left, of his power bereft,
To howl as he liketh best;
'Tis mine to cheer the awakening year,
And dwell with the balmy West.

"In haste I run for the orient sun,
To gladden the rising day;
To light the streams with his golden beams
While the blushing maiden play.
The earth in her need I strew with seed,
To cheer and make full the heart;
Beauty and love I bring from above,
Gladness and hope I impart.

"The genial shower in the sunny hour
I drop from the passing cloud;
'Tis called serene when its lips I press
And the wind is piping loud.
Unsatisfied man, do what I can,
Is clamorous loud and long,
Till I give place to the mower's pace,
Then bursts forth a grateful song.

"More than Houri fair, all earth and air
Through me an Eden becomes;
Though fading the flowers, I build fresh bowers
And stray where the wild bee hums.
I tune the notes for the songs-birds' throats,
Imprisoned or warbling free;
All own my care in their morning prayer,
And some in their evening glee.

"Childhood I lead to the dotted mead
Where the fairy cowslips dwell,
Where hazebells blue and violets true
Their lessons of wisdom tell.
Their tones impart to the opened heart
Bright hopes of a lasting spring;
And in riper years, through memory's tears,
Rays of light and joy they'll fling.

"Where primroses nigh when snowdrops die,
And the brooklet sings its lay,
Manhood I take to the thorny brake,
To muse on his own brief day.
The hoary sage on life's narrow edge
I bear to the aspen bowers,
Where Memory weaves, mid the dancing leaves
The past with the present hours. (leaves

"Attend to my song, both old and young,
While ye hail me blythe and bland;
Time's on the wing to an endless Spring
In a sinless, cloudless land!
Seek it above, on the wings of love,
Higher than bird ever soared;
Faith be your guide in bless to abide
For ever with Nature's Lord."

Miscellaneous.

An Afternoon with the Magazines.

IN PRAISE OF SHYNESS.

The author of "A strange Story" continues in the April number of Blackwood his clever essays on "Life, Literature, and Manners." Here is an extract containing something new on an old subject:

The desire of excellence is the necessary attribute of those who excel. We work little for a thing unless we wish for it. But we cannot of ourselves estimate the degree of our success in what we strive for—that task is left to others. With the desire for excellence comes, therefore, the desire for approbation. And this distinguishes intellectual excellence from moral excellence; for the latter has no necessity of human tribunal; it is more inclined to shrink from the public than to invite the public to be its judge. To the aspirants to moral good the vox populi is not the vox Dei. The Capitol has no laurel crowns for their brows; enough for them if they pass over earth unobserved, silently educating themselves for heaven. There are natures so happily constituted that they are moved irresistably to good by an inborn affinity to goodness; for some souls, like some forms, are born into the world beautiful, and take as little apparent pains as do beautiful forms to increase or preserve beauty. They have but to maintain health by the way of life most in harmony with their organization, and their beauty endures to the last; for old age has a beauty of its own, even in the physical form; and the Moral Beautiful gradually becomes venerable without even losing its bloom.

But these natures are exceptions to the ordinary law of our race, which proportions the moral worth of a man, as it does the worth of a work from his hand, to the degree of skilled labor by which he has transformed into new shapes the original raw material. And labor needs motive; and motive implies reward.

To moral excellence there are two rewards, neither of which is bestowed by the loud lauzas of the populace; one within the conscience—one far out of reach beyond the stars.

But for intellectual excellence, man asks first a test, and next a reward, in the praise of his fellow-men.

Therefore the love of human approbation is at the root of all those sustained labors by which man works out his ideal of intellectual excellence; at least so generally that we need care to count the exceptions. During the later stages of a great career, that love of approbation, in a mind well disciplined, often ceases to be perceptible, chiefly because it has become too habitually familiar to retain distinctness. We are, then, as birds custody sensible of the pervading forces of the universe, as, while in health, we are sensible of the beats of our pulse and the circulation of our blood. But there it still is, we hear—there, in the pulse, in the blood. A cynic or a misanthrope may discern it; but if he have genius, and the gaunt urge him to address men even in vindication of misanthropy and cynicism, he is inevitably courting the approbation which he pretends to scorn. As Cicero says with quiet irony, "The authors who affect contempt for a name in the world put their names to the books which they invite the world to read." But to return to my starting point. The desire of approbation will be accompanied by that nervous susceptibility, which, however well disguised, is inseparable from the vibrating oscillation between hope and fear. And this nervousness in things not made mechanically familiar by long practice, will be in proportion to the height of a man's standard of excellence, and the care with which he measures the difficulties that interpose between a cherished conception and a worthy execution of design.

Out of this nervousness comes the shyness assumed to all youth, where it aspires to excel and fears to fail.

It follows, from what I have said, that those races are the most active, have accomplished the greatest marvels of energy, and, on the whole, exhibit the highest standard of public honesty in administrative departments, to which the national character of shyness is generally accorded, distinct from its false counterfeit, pride.

For the best guarantee for honesty is a constant sense of responsibility, and that sense is rendered lively and acute by a certain anxious diffidence of self, which is shyness. And again, it is that diffidence which makes men take pains to win and deserve success—stimulates energy and sustains perseverance.

The Turk is proud, not shy; he walks the world, or rather lets the world walk by him, serene in his self-esteem. The Red Indian is proud, not shy; his dignity admits of no Decorum—is never embarrassed nor taken by surprise. But the Turk and the Red Indian do not improve; and when civilization approaches them, it is rather to corrupt than enlighten. The British race are shy, to a proverb. And what shore does not bear the stamp of their footsteps? What boundary in the regions of intellect has yet attained their order of progress? Anaham's ideal of perfectness is in the mind of the whole nation.

To desire to do something, not only as well as it can be done, but better than we can do it—to feel to exaggeration all our own natural deficiencies towards the doing of it—to resolve by redoubled energy and perseverance to extract from art whatever may supply those deficiencies in nature—this is the surest way to become great—this is the character of the British race—this should be the character of a British genius.

But he who thus feels, thus desires, and thus resolves, will keep free from rust those mainsprings of action—the sensibility to shame, and the yearning towards perfection. It is the elasticity of the watch-spring that renders it the essential principle to the mechanism of the watch; but elasticity is only the property of solid bodies to recover, after yielding to pressure, their former shape. The mind which regains to the last youth's quick susceptibility to disgrace and to glory, retains to the last the power to resume the shape that it wore in youth. Cynicism is old at twenty. Impudence has no elasticity. If you care no more than the grasshopper for the favor of gods and the reverence of men, your heart has the age of Tithonus, though your cheek has the bloom of Achilles. But if, even alone in your room or a desert, you could still blush or turn pale at the thought of a stain on your honor—if your crest still could rise, your pulse quicken, at the flash of some noble thought or brave deed—then you have the heart of Achilles, though at the age of Tithonus. There is a certain august shame-facedness—the Romans called it Pudor—which, under hairs white as snow, preserves the aspect of youth, to all personations of honor, of valour, and of genius.

THEATRES AND THE EMPLOYMENT THEY GIVE.

London Society opens with an article on the cost of amusing the public. There is, at least, something new in this extract:

"The employment which the theatre provides has, however, a much wider scope than this. It is not alone the actors, whose persons we are familiar with on the stage, who are enabled to live and bring up their families; but there is another class whom we never see, and whose existence many do not even suspect, who are equally dependent upon the theatre for their means of subsistence, and whose labor is equally essential to the conduct of the establishment. There are scenic artists, scene painters, carpenters, scene shifters, and gas men, all employed within the walls of the theatre; and out of it, at their own homes, costumiers, tailors, shoemakers, hosiers, wigmakers, jewelers, upholsters, armorers, printers, draughtsmen, engravers, and bill-stickers. These artists and artisans devote themselves exclusively to theatrical work. A stage carpenter could not make a chest of drawers fit for domestic use. If you were to order such a thing of him, you will probably find that the drawers were all dummies, or that the whole concern was designed for a trick in a pantomime. So the tailor will fit you with an embroidered blue velvet tunic, or a pair of trunks; but he will scarcely undertake to furnish you with a surtout, or a pair of pantaloons, suitable for the streets. Generally speaking, the theatrical hosier's hose are all particolored, the theatrical shoemaker's shoes all red-heeled, the theatrical jeweler's jewels all glass and tinfoil, the theatrical armorer's armor all white iron and tin plate. Their craft is thus confined exclusively to theatrical work, and their art applies to produce nothing which will stand the test of the light of day. It is on that a branch of manufacture and trade called into existence and operation solely by the requirements of the theatre. The whole number of theatres in the United Kingdom is 125. We should expect to find very few theatres in Scotland, where the religious prejudice runs so strong against such amusements; but it is somewhat unaccountable that there should be still fewer in Ireland, where no such prejudice exists, and where the people are more numerous, more vivacious, and naturally addicted to all kinds of sport and entertainment. The fact, we suspect, must be ascribed to that want of posterity which has made Ireland exceptional in so many other respects. It cannot be Ireland's will, but her poverty which has made her support to have only five theatres in all the land; for no people appreciate the drama better than Irish, and nowhere are actors more warmly recognized and applauded than in Dublin and Belfast. Scotland, with less than a third of Ireland's population, has almost double the number of theatres; but here the thing is overdone; the supply is greater than the demand. Except at Glasgow and, at certain seasons, in Edinburg, theatres do not flourish in Scotland. The Scotch are not unappreciative; far from it. An Edinburgh audience is said to be the most refined and discriminative in Europe, and actors are more proud of laurels gathered on the modern Athens than even in London itself; but, unfortunately for the dramatic art, the audiences in Scotland are far more select than numerous, and the cause of this is too well known to require any explanation at our hands."

FROM EDINBURGH TO PERTH.

Temple Bar closes with an article entitled "Back to Scotland."

"Scottish railway directors are careful and steady-going; and they are not afraid of incurring a satirical remark by building their railway-carriages of coffin-wood, but the journey from Edinburg to Perth is enjoyable on other accounts. The scenery is grand and diversified. No dull flat levels here; but hill and dale, mountain and stream, heath-land and forest. And almost every station you come to has an historical name—Linlithgow, Falkirk, Bannockburn, Stirling—names, that even from the mouth of a railway porter, raise a thrill of pride in the breast of a Scotchman; but while the names of these stations recall the memories of heroes and battles, the sight of their pretty gardens blooming with all kinds of autumn flowers affords another and a softer pleasure. Every station is clustered about with flowers, and each succeeding one seems to be more trim and resplendid than the last. You see no gardens like these at the railway stations in England. I ascribe it to the national predilection and aptitude of the Scotch for gardening; but I learn that there is a special incentive in the case. The directors of the line furnish the seeds and plants at their own cost, and every year prizes are given for the best kept gardens. English directors might take a leaf out of the Scotch book. Those gorgeous flower beds are far more pleasing to the eye, and far less expensive to the shareholders, than the huge useless hotels and refreshment-saloons with which directors adorn the stations of English lines; but the great North of Scotland has refreshment-saloons, and very comfortable ones too, with an abundance of things to eat on the counters, including hot mutton pies, and an infinite variety of things to drink, not forgetting whiskey-toddy, served with tumbler, wine-glass, and silver ladle. And what do you think they sell besides at Scotch stations? Why, cigars with fuzees, and latest-patented article in Vesurians, to light them withal. You may judge from this that the authorities of the railway are not very particular about smoking in their carriages. I had the pleasure of travelling for some distance with a director, who not only did not frown at the suggestion of a cigar, but actually gave me a very fine one, and bade me blaze away."

THE SCOTCH SABBATH.

The editor of Good Words, in the course of a review of the Christian Sabbath, remarks:

"What restrictions would you lay on children?' None, except those with which they can, as well principled children, sympathize. 'When I was a child,' said Paul, 'I spake as a child, I thought as a child.' Do not lay the burdens of men on such soldiers. Let your teaching tend to make the Sunday helpful to their growth, not as strong men but as children in Christ. Beware of training them to hypocrisy by making them false and overs', to hatred of religion and of Sunday by moroseness and severity, or to self-indulgence and unpracticed selfishness, by unchecked self-will. Good sense and sympathy will supply the rules. 'I hate a Scotch Sabbath.' Only? yet possibly you never saw one, and are but repeating what I must call a stereotyped myth upon this subject. If you did see one, I hardly know what any Christian man can see in it to hate. I have seen the keeping of the Sabbath, east and west, and in most parts of Christendom, and I do not think Scotland has any cause to be ashamed of her Sundays, but to thank God for them. We have, no doubt, weaknesses and evils mingled with our strength and our good. So have 'religious people' south, as well as north, of the Tweed. I am free also to confess that when men, for example, needed air and exercise, are condemned for enjoying both on this day; when 'not working' is pushed to the extent of not drawing water from a well, nor shaving (!), and the like absurdities; or when we deny ourselves the good of instrumental sacred music, in public and private worship on Sunday, we certainly lay ourselves open to rebuke as being both Judaical and Pharisaical; but it would be a miserable reform to fly from such extremes to the thoughtlessness, the dissipation, the more convenient, the other wordiness of a Continental Sabbath.—Nay, move, the error, arising from false judgment, which induces a Scotchman of the extreme school, or an Englishman either, to make the Lord's-day one of formal dullness and senseless punctilios, is less blameworthy than the error of religious indifference, which induces thousands to make the Sunday a holiday, but not a holy day, and to mark it only by idleness and excitement, without any thought of even religious worship."

—All accounts from the West speak favorably of the appearance of the wheat crop. In Illinois and Indiana it looks extremely promising.

The Owner of the Soil.

The man who stands upon his own soil—who feels that by the laws of the land in which he lives—by the laws of civilized nations—he is the rightful and exclusive owner of the land which he tills, is by the constitution of our nature under a wholesome influence, not easily imbibed from any other source. He feels, other things equal, more strongly than another, the character of a man who is the lord of the manifold world. Of this grand and wonderful nature, which—fashioned by the hand of God—and governed by his power—is rolling through a space, a part in his, from the center to the sky. It is the place on which the generation before him moved in its round of duties, and he feels himself connected by a visible link with those who follow him, and to whom he is to transmit a home. Perhaps his farm has come down to him from his fathers. They have gone to their last home, but he can trace their footsteps over the scenes of his daily labors. The roof which shelters him was reared by those to whom he owes his being. Some interesting domestic tradition is connected with every inclosure. The favorite fruit tree was planted by his father's hand. He sported in boyhood beside the brook which runs through the meadows still. Through the fields lies the path to the village school of earlier days. He still hears from his window the voice of the Sabbath bell which called his fathers to the house of God, near at hand is the spot where his parents laid down to rest, and where, when his time shall come, he shall be laid by his children. These the feelings of the owner of the soil. Words cannot paint them, gold cannot buy them, they are the lifesprings of a fresh, healthy, generous, national character.—Edward Everett.

Paying Dear for a Newspaper.

Mr. J. Sanbury sued Bradford O. Wait for seven years' subscription to his new paper. The case was recently tried before the Supreme Court in Albany, N. Y. The publisher recovered, and the delinquent subscriber had to pay in judgment and costs a sum amounting to between $200 and $300. The New York Observer speaks as follows of his case:—

"It is surprising that so few subscribers fully understand their responsibilities to publishers of newspapers. The law which governed in this decision is a law of Congress, and therefore applicable to every State in the Union. Many subscribers seem to regard the bill for a newspaper the last to be settled, especially the last which the law will enforce. Responsible men, even, under trifling whims, refuse to take their papers from the office, regardless of the payment in arrears, and when half-a-dozen more years have been added to the arrears at the time of stopping, think it hard to pay the increased bill, with interest and cost of collection."

THE PARSNIP.—The parsnip is one of the most valuable roots that can be grown. In the Island of Jersey it is used almost exclusively for fattening both cattle and swine. According to Le Cyrateur, the weight of a good crop varies from thirteen to twenty-seven tons per acre. When parsnips are given to milch cows with a little hay, in the winter season, the butter is found to be of as fine a colour and excellent flavor as when the animals are feeding in the best pastures. As parsnips contain six per cent. more mucilage than carrots, the difference may be sufficient to account for the superior fattening, as well as butter-making quality of the parsnip. In fattening the cattle the parsnip is found superior to the carrot, performing the business with more expedition and affording meat of exquisite and highly juicy flavor. The animals eat it with great greediness.—The result of experiment has shown that not only in meat cattle, but in the fattening of hogs and poultry, the animals become fat much sooner, and are more healthy than when fed with any other root or vegetable, and that, beside, the meat is more sweet and delicious. the parsnip leaves, being more bulky that those of carrots, may be mown off before taking the roots, and given to oxen, cows, or horses, by which the will be greedily eaten. Another thing in favor of parsnips for this country is, that the frost does not injure them. They may remain in the ground until spring, when the make splendid food, at a time every other root or green thing is scarce; or may be slightly buried, where they can be obtained at most any time during the winter. On account of their rapid growth when young, the weeding is less troublesome than carrots.

THE BEES IN SILESIA.—A province of Prussia, number 280,000 colonies, representing a capital of more than one million of dollars. These, even in the most favourable years, yield a profit of 100 per cent., or more than $1,000,000. The wheat-blossoms and buck wheat blossoms are much richer in melacious juices on the poor soil of Silesia than in more fertile districts.

LARGE FEES.—The largest fee for Sir Astley Cooper ever received was paid him by a West India millionaire named Hyatt. This gentleman, having occasion to undergo a painful and perilous operation, was attended by Drs. Lettsom and Nelson as physicians, and Sir Astley as chirurgeon. The wealthy patient, his treatment having resulted most successfully, was so delighted that, after his physicians with 200 guineas each and "Tell you, sir," cried the grateful old man, sitting up in his bed, and speaking to his surgeon, "shall have something better. There, sir,—take that." The fact was the convalescent's night-cap, which he had flung at the dexterous operator. "Sir," replied Sir Astley, looking up the cap, "I'll pocket the affront." It was well he did so, for no remaining bonus he found in the cap a draft for 1,000 guineas. This story has been told in various ways, but all the talkers agree as to the amount of the prize.

Catherine, the Empress of Russia, was even more munificent than the West India planter. When Dr. Dimsdale, for many years a Hertford physician, and subsequently the parliamentary representative of that borough, went over to Russia and inoculated the Empress and her son, in the year 1768, he was rewarded with a fee of £12,000, a pension for life of £500 per annum, and the rank of Baron of the Empire. But if Catherine paid this handsomely for increased security of life, a modern emperor of Austria put down a yet more loyal fee for his death-warrant. When on his death-bed, the Emperor Joseph asked Quarin his opinion of his case, the physician told the monarch that he could not live forty-eight hours. In acknowledgement of this frank declaration of the truth, the emperor created Quarin a Baron, and gave him a pension of little than £2000 per annum to support the rank with. —Book about Doctors.

MANAGEMENT OF SHEEP AT SHEARING.—When sheep are sheared, as soon as the fleece is off take a stiff brush, dipped in a solution of salt and soap (white-oil soap is best) in water, and rub them all over with a saturated brush, which will produce a white lather or foam. this stimulates the skin to redness, and prevents the animal taking cold, loosens the scurf, and promotes the future growth of the wool, and also improves its quality. The application is a sure extermination of the vermin. For want of the brush, a woolen rag might answer the purpose. The application, if used, will be found productive of many good results.

GEN. BURNSIDE IN PRAYER.—The victories of Roanoke and Newbern, together with the other numerous yet important successes of Gen. Burnside, are now the theme of grateful mention in every patriot home. In a recent sermon, Bishop Clarke of Rhode Island made the following personal allusion:—"While he was planning his magnificent expedition, it was my fortune to occupy the same room with him in Washington, and I shall never forget how, every morning, we used to kneel down together, and pray for the blessing of God upon his solemn work. That blessing insures his success. The Lord of Hosts is with him, the God of Battles is his refuge." —Boston Journal.

☞ Rennie, in the good old times, was travelling in Scotland in a stage-coach. The axle-tree broke near a blacksmith's, and the son of Vulcan being out, Rennie himself lit the fire and welded the axle-tree in a masterly style. His fellow-passengers, who had been very communicative and friendly during the earlier part of the journey, now became very reserved, and the "respectables" especially held themselves aloof from the man who had so clearly revealed his calling by the manner in which he had mended the broken axle. At last, at their journey's end for the day, the travellers separated, Mr. Rennie proceeding onwards to Eglinton Castle. Next morning, when sitting at breakfast with his noble host, a servant entered to say that a person outside desired to have a word with the earl. "Show him in." The person entered, and he proved to be one of Mr. Rennie's fellow-travellers, whose surprise and confusion at finding the "blacksmith" of the preceeding day breakfasting with my lord may be easily imagined. The earl was much amused when Mr. Rennie afterwards described to him the accident of the broken axle.

MARVELOUS INSTANCE OF SYMPATHY.—A very strange example of the influence of sympathy is reported to have occurred during the battle of Pea Ridge. Hiram P. Lord, of the 25th Missouri, Col. Phelps, while charging up a ravine, fell as if dead, and his companions ran to him and asked him if he was hurt. He did not answer, and it was soon discovered that he had expired. On reviving he said he must have been struck by a ball, for he felt a pain in his left side, and had distinctly experienced the stunning and reeling sensation that results from a gun shot wound. His person was examined, and no mark or indication of injury was perceptible. He could not comprehend the mystery, but soon after resumed the fight, and forgot the sensation until he returned to his camp, when he learned to his surprise and sorrow, that his twin brother George was among the dead. George had been in another part of the field, and had been shot in the body, and at the same time that Hiram had believed himself mortally wounded. The sympathy between the illness of the one was usually accompanied by the sickness of the other. Strange, if true, say many; but the stranger the truer, says the student of nature.

—Homburg rather than Hoke, one of the great gambling places of Germany, has recently been the scene of three suicides, one of a young Prussian, who had ruined himself at the gaming table; the second of a rich Russian, and the third of a traveller passing through, who had both beggared themselves in the same manner.

Dining With A Queen.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press gives the following description of a dinner at Windsor Castle with Queen Victoria:—

At this season, except that fashion is slightly less bustling in Lent, London is generally very much alive—taking its tone from the Court. Queen Victoria's little dinners always drew a certain number of invited—or, of Commanded guests, for the etiquette is, not that royalty requests the pleasure of one's company but, orders it. Indeed, so very autocratical is the system, that supposing you had arranged to give a dinner to a number of your own friends, and you received a card from the Lord Chamberlain of the Queen's household, desiring you to dine on the same day at the Queen's table, there is no refusing on any other plea than that of positive illness. Not to go would be a sort of petty treason; and you would have to send a circular round to your own guests, stating that the Queen's command, compelling you to dine at Buckingham Palace, also compelled your absence from them.

Not that, except the honor and glory of the thing, there can be much comfort or satisfaction in having one's legs under the royal mahogany. First of all, the guest must put himself into a court dress, which makes him look like a fool in private life, with knee breeches and silk stockings, bows around and ruffles, and must of white cravat and shad bellpiet of coats. Then if he does not keep his own coach he must hire one, looking like a private vehicle, for it is doubtful whether, since creation commenced any one ever walked to a royal dinner; and the idea of going thither in a cab would probably have a moral effect on the enormous porter, in a scarlet and gold taggery, who examines your card of invitation when he admits you. Nor, supposing all the preliminary trouble ended—supposing that you have found your way into the drawing-room, and bowed to the Queen, and stealthily looked round at the pictures, and counted over (all this time in solemn silence) the spots or flowers on the carpet for the tenth time, and marched in file into the salle du manger—supposing all this, do not imagine that you are going to enjoy yourself. No indeed. None but Mark Tapley could be "jolly" at such a feast. Royalty has already dined, about three o'clock, probably off the hereditary leg of mutton and turnips, and has added the usual quantum of rice pudding, and the bit of old Cheshire, or rich Stilton, or double Gloster cheese, and imbibed the accustomed mug of Guinness or Meux. This repast, called lunch, is really a good, homely filling dinner; and at the solemn repast, five hours later, people are expected to merely sip and taste through several courses, so that one is reminded of the famous feast of the Barmecide. The viands are of the best, the cuisine perfect, the vintages superb—but one can merely ta-te. Royalty's appetite was blunted on the leg of mutton and pudding, the cheese and the bottled porter, and the guests should have taken the edge of theirs by a similar process.

At these sadly solemn re-unions dull silence grimly reigns. There is not even a whisper to your neighbor, if you know him. The etiquette is, do not open your mouth unless Royalty expressly condescends to speak to you. Do not expect such a compliment. That is reserved for a few favored guests in the immediate vicinity of the regal hostess. The dinner occupies from sixty to ninety minutes, and when ended the Queen rises, all other ladies rising and retiring with her. The male guests remain some ten minutes longer, silently sipping their wine, or whispering in small knots with bated breath. At last, the master officer of the household present rises on his hind legs and majest cally gives "the Queen," as a toast, which every one drinks. If any male member of the royal family be present, he bows an acknowledgment. Coffee follows, and then the guests depart—a few to the drawing-room, where the maids of honor are yawning the rest going home; where, it is to be supposed, each man gets out of his livery at once, and gets rid of his gnawing hunger by means of oysters and stout.

Such, I am informed by one who experienced it, is the routine of a royal dinner. He was an East Indian, and suffered much.

An amusing Incident.

Mr. S. and Mr. A. meet in the cars. They are strangers to each other. Mr. S. is a red-faced, portly young man, richly dressed, wears about his person, in his looks and general demeanor, clear evidence of being a "fast youth." He is accompanied by two handsome, intelligent, young ladies. They are superbly dressed, in the height of fashion. All three feel and show their consequence. Mr. S. has turned his seat and sits facing the ladies. He has placed their reticules, muffs &c., on the seat beside him. The three are thus occupying four seats, while several are standing for want of room to sit. A goatly travelling blanket is placed before Mr. S. and the ladies for a table. One of the beauties takes out a pack of cards, and three fall to playing with a will, regardless of the feelings or convenience of their fellow travellers. Mr. A. is a young minister, plainly dressed, and looks careworn and weary. For want of a seat he stands in the aisle of the car and looks, over and anon, at the spare seat filled with reticules and muffs. The game of cards goes on and the minister is left to stand. Soon the conductor comes along, gazes a moment at the game and the busy players, takes their tickets and turns to Mr. A. for his. Mr. A. says:

"Conductor, do you think I had better have that seat?" pointing to the seat beside Mr. S.

"If you wish it," said the conductor with a smile, as he passed on.

Mr.

Mr. Gladstone on the struggle in America.

By the last steamer we received a telegraphic synopsis of Mr. Gladstone's speech at Manchester, and we now give a verbatim extract of what he said upon American affairs as follows:—

"And now, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, after having said thus much I come to that which more particularly touches the state of your own district. We stand here at a time when but for one unfortunate event, it is probable that you and your workpeople would alike be enjoying a great prosperity. That one unfortunate event you have described in this address, and in my opinion truly described as "the deplorable struggle in which the two sections of the great American republic are now engaged." It is, gentlemen, a deplorable struggle. We are not of those, if such there be, who envied the greatness of the American republic.—(Hear, hear.) We could have been well content to see her enlarge her borders from year to year, gradually increasing in her wealth and strength; we should have retained the consciousness that on our part nothing would be done to prevent the continuance of the most friendly and peaceable relations (hear), and the admiration with which we regarded the energy of that nation would have been totally untinged either by envy or by fear. (Hear, hear.) But this struggle has come about through no fault of ours, and I think we cannot but feel that the position and attitude of this country with respect to the United States has not been on the other side of the water quite impartially or fairly judged. (Hear, hear.) Now, gentlemen, I am not going to make this a matter of complaint. Let us sympathise with our American brethren in their difficulties. Let us allow that, under the excitement of those difficulties, and of a desperate and agonizing conflict, the minds of men are not in that state of tranquility which render them the best judges of the conduct of their neighbors. Under such circumstances, the proportions of objects alter before the eye and expectations are formed, and are thought to be just, which, in a dispassionate moment, will be seen and felt to have been unfounded. Why, gentlemen, there was a demand made upon us by the public voice in America, at the outset of this deplorable struggle, for what was called "sympathy." Well, now, what was the real meaning of that demand, at least if I can understand it—and I hope that in what I say I shall not say a word inconsistent with that fraternal feeling which I desire to cherish toward all men, and especially toward our kindred beyond the water—but, practically, what was the meaning of that desire, and that call for sympathy? Why, it was this: that we should take such a course by our language and by our public acts, as would place the six millions of men—of the ten millions, I care not which you call them—of the South in permanent hostility with us. (Hear, hear.) Well, now, we may have our own opinions—and I imagine we have our own private opinions about the institutions of the South, (hear,) as, unfortunately, we have our own private opinions about the countenance that has been given to these institutions in the North. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) But that is no reason why, on the one side or the other, we should adopt a course of conduct that is to lay the foundations of alienation of feeling and permanent hostility between ourselves and those who may hereafter be a great nation, claiming to enter into peaceful relations with us. (Cheers.) Why, no doubt if we could see that this was a contest of slavery or freedom, there is not a man in the length and breadth of this room—there, perhaps, is hardly a man in all England, that would for one moment hesitate upon the side which he would take.—But we have no faith in the propagation of free institutions at the point of the sword. (Hear, hear.) It is not by such means that the ends of freedom are to be gained. Freedom must be freely accepted and freely embraced. You cannot invade a nation in order to convert its institutions from bad ones into good ones; and our friends in the North have, as we think, made a great mistake in supposing that they can bend all the horrors of this war to philanthropic ends. Indeed, gentlemen, there are those among us that think—and I confess, for one, that I have shared the apprehension—that if, in the course of the vicissitudes of the war, the Southern States of America should send an embassy to Washington, and should say, "Very well, we are ready to lay down our arms on one condition; we are ready to renew the compact; we are ready to make it perpetual; we are ready to attach to it every guarantee and security that you can imagine for holding us fast; but upon one condition—that you shall assure us that there shall be no interference with our domestic institutions." Ah, gentlemen, we have had the fear that that application, if it were made, would receive a very favorable reply. (Hear, hear.) I think that it was well stated by my noble colleague, Lord John Russell, that "this was a struggle on the one side for supremacy, and on the other for independence."—(Cheers.) Now, gentlemen, I cannot but sympathise with those who are making the struggle for supremacy. It is painful to surrender a great, an imposing, and a magnificent national unity. We, the English, people in other times, have felt that pain. (Hear.) We know what it was. (Hear, hear.) Old George III., upon the throne, who had the feelings of an Englishman—whether you may approve his policy in all things or not, he was a true Englishman in heart and sentiment—old George III. felt his heart "rent in twain" by the laceration of the empire when the American colonies were parted from us. But, gentlemen, I think we feel this, that the experience we have had in our national history in some degree gives us the means of judging of the prospects of this American struggle better than those which are possessed by the Americans themselves. We have felt that after the pain of the severance was over we came at length to recognize it as a good, and we are thankful that the American colonies were parted from us, because we think that we could not have governed them as much for their own advantage as they have been enabled to govern themselves.—(Cheers.) Some people may say the Northern States are a great deal stronger than Scotland was in former times; but the Englishman as well as the Scotchman knows that it was the object of England to establish by force a supremacy over Scotland, the Scotch proved themselves to be what are called "very ugly customers" (laughter), and at length it was not the exercise of force, but it was a sense of policy and prudence on both sides, dictated in the main by natural circumstances, that led to the union of the two kingdoms. But the position of the Northern States in this—"We won't let you go." The position of the Southern States is—"We are determined to go." [Laughter.] Now, gentlemen, you are men of business, and if one of you has got a partner and that partner wants to separate from you, I ask you whether, in the long run, it would not be very difficult to hold him. [Laughter.] But I ask you more, supposing that you were able to hold that partner, supposing you could contrive some indenture of partnership by which he should abdicate his free will and tie himself to you like a captive to the chariot-wheel of a victor, but he still retaining an alienated heart, no common interest in your business, a desire to trip you up and embarrass you, why, I say, you would not hold that partner if you could. [Laughter and cheers.] The Northern States of America have undertaken a military enterprise of enormous difficulty. It is but fair, I think, that we should record our sense of the vast and gigantic energies which they have unfolded in the prosecution of that military enterprise. [Hear, hear.] They have had certain successes in the field. But, gentlemen, again I fall back upon our English experience. If you revert to the annals of the War of Independence between the American colonies and this country, where were the successors in the field in that war? It was not for want of success in the field that we did not conquer the American colonies. It was this—but we found when we had successes in the field we were no nearer our object than before. It is not the question when you are endeavoring to conquer a country whether you can break up its embattled armies and drive them off the plain where they have contended with you in fight; the question is this, and this alone, whether the heart of the country is set upon the separation. [Hear, hear.] If it is not set upon a separation, it may be conquered; but if it is set upon a separation, and if the blood of Washington, and of the men of Virginia of his day, still runs in the veins of those who inhabit southern America, then it is all but impossible that the military object should be effected; and if the military object were effected, and sti political difficulties remaining would render the military success a curse and a misery to those who had achieved it. Well, gentlemen, we in this country are in the habit of plain speaking, and it is well, I think, upon this subject, considering the nearness and intimacy of our relations with all those who inhabit the American continent, that we should test our minds in regard to the sentiments with which we view what you have well called this "deplorable struggle." May the Almighty disposer of events bring that struggle quickly to an end! For the sake of ourselves, for the sake of the Americans above all, may that struggle quickly reach its termination. May that take place, not which we wish or prefer, but which is for the peace, happiness and welfare of the inhabitants of that country, be they white or be they black. [Hear.] But, gentlemen, we also feel the painful and deplorable effects of this struggle upon ourselves. It is impossible to deny them, not upon ourselves alone, but upon other countries of Europe also. France is suffering, Belgium is suffering, every country that has cotton manufacture is suffering grievously—more grievously in proportion to the numbers employed than in this country; because in those countries there is not the sense of independence; there is greater disposition to lean upon the government for help than happily prevails among ourselves. But when we are told by an organ of American opinion that Europe or that England has behaved unhandsomely by America, I feel the utmost confidence that the final verdict of history will be this—that there never was an occasion in which the civilized nations of the world in general bore, and had been content to bear, so much real misery, resulting from a civil and municipal quarrel in another state, without interference, as there has been on the present occasion.—[Hear, hear.] If we look upon the pain it has brought upon us, it is a grievous thought. In another point of view it is a remarkable testimony to the real progress of civilization and peaceful views among the nations of the world. It is homage to what is called an abstract principle, that all this misery has been borne. It has been a cause of the danger and inducer of interference in intestine quarrels in other countries, and the deference that has been paid to that principle of international policy by England and all the nations of Europe is, I say, among the most remarkable features that determine the character of history as applicable to the nineteenth century in which we live. [Cheers.]

Mr. Gladstone then expatiated on the patience with which the poor were enduring their trouble, and the kindly efforts which were made by their employers to alleviate their distress.

A Remarkable Memory.

The secret of Parsou's great literary acquisition, according to his own account, rested in his astonishing memory. In his case there was no learning a lesson in the popular acceptation of the term—the mere reading of the longest and most difficult task imprinted it so firmly on his mind, that it never became erased; hence, at school, we find him scanning pages of Horace in his class, with an Ovid held upside down in his hand, the proper book having been mislaid; and in after life, if he had read a book one day and any allusion was made to it on the next, it was no uncommon thing for him to repeat whole pages of the book verbatim. He would not only, says his biographer, repeat verse or prose from one edition of a book but would, if necessary, revert to all the various reprints, as if he had their pages laying before him. 'Roderick Random,' he could repeat from beginning to end, and he even offered to learn by heart a complete copy of the Morning Chronicle in a week. Basil Montague related that Parson in his presence read over two or three pages from a book selected by Montague; then repeated what he has read from memory, and immediately after a friend's request repeated the pages backwards, missing only two words. Two other instances of this wonderful faculty deserves to be related before we pass on. Mr. Cogan tells us that a friend one day consulted the scholar on the meaning of a word in Thucydides; Parson, without looking at the book, immediately repeated the passage in which the word occurred. His friend asked how he knew it was the passage 'Because,' said Parson 'the word occurs only twice in Thucydides—once on the right hand page in the edition which you are using, and once on the left. I see your eyes are directed to the right hand page.' Rogers relates that, taking him once to Wm. Spenser's, he delighted a large party of the nobility by reciting an immense number of forgotten Vauxhall songs, drinking the whole time. He got very tipsy at last, and, says Rogers, 'I brought him home as far as Piccadilly, where, I am sorry to say, I left him sick in the middle of the street.' His retentive memory, however, was far from being delightful to him on all occasions. 'My memory,' he said on one occasion, 'is a source of misery to me—I can never forget anything which I don't wish to remember.'

CHARLES BACKUS, a long Island farmer, has under cultivation eight large farms, devoted to raising vegetables for the New York market. During the past year he has raised 30 acres of potatoes, 15 or 20 acres of parsnips, carrots and beets, 50 acres of corn, 60 acres of cabbages. One hundred acres are devoted to asparagus, and forty to onions. Three and a half manure cars, for raising salad, radishes, cucumbers, &c. From 300 to 350 laborers are employed on the summer season, and twelve large wagon loads of produce are every day sent to the city. His business in a single year amounted to $10,000. Only thirteen years ago two waggon loads every week was the whole amout of produce raised by Mr. B., who has ever since exceeded his operations, until they probably now exceed those of any market gardener in the United States.

The Recent Fire.

Peterborough, like all other Canadian Towns, has suffered dreadfully by fire. Last summer we had three very heavy and destructive fires, and last Saturday added another to the catalogue. About 1 o'clock P. M. smoke was seen issuing in dark columns from the stable of Mr. Flavelle on Water street. In a few minutes the stable, a building, and the bake house of Mr. Green, of hewn timber, was all of a blaze, and the devouring element spread on both sides, igniting the Potashery and the building on the West. The Fire Engine was speedily procured and run down to the edge of the river near the Ashery—but the hose was faulty, and it was soon discovered that the fire was so near the Engine that the men could not work the brakes. While new hose was being procured, and the Engine removed to a greater distance from the fire, the flames had caught fairly hold of the building on Water street, and in an incredibly short time the dwellings of ten or twelve families were destroyed. Mr. Green is a very heavy sufferer, being uninsured. Mr. Green had his own dwelling, and tenements for 7 or 8 families, besides an ash factory, a soap and candle factory, bakery and stable. Mr. Elliot, dwelling house and stable, occupied by Mr. Flavelle. Mr. E. Green, dwelling house and slaughter house, occupied by Mr. Cochrane, and Mr. Ryan, a dwelling house and stable, occupied by Mr. Bauvais, and another—all of which, with the exception of the shell of a small dwelling, and the charred remnants of another, in less than two hours were consumed.

We hear that Messrs. E. Green, W. Elliot and P. Ryan are partly insured. Mr. B. Green had allowed his insurance to lapse by not renewing.

It is strange how slow we are to learn the lessons so frequently taught us of the folly of building wooden buildings together in a town. Experience is a dear instructor, and we hope its recent sad lessons may not be lost upon us. Again have we been reminded of the want of a Fire Company, or some such organization in cases of fire. When the alarm was given the Engine was soon on the ground, and had there been an experienced, cool commander he would have placed the Engine at first where it ought to have been. If this had been done we do think that the fire might have been confined to the rear buildings. The wind was blowing furiously from the north west, and a small stream of water would have prevented the flames from working up to windward. Never have we seen more confusion and less effected by so many persons, as at the fire on Saturday, and the failure seemed to be clearly traceable to the fact we have noticed, that there was no head—no directing mind to say what should be done.

We observe by our exchanges there were two fires in Toronto, and one in Troy, N. Y., on the same day and hour. The fire in Troy destroyed over 800 houses, clearing off 50 acres of land, and destroying property to the amount of over three millions of dollars, nearly one half of which is covered by insurance. Some 8 or 10 persons are supposed to have lost their lives, and considerable suffering has been experienced by many who are rendered houseless.

—Since writing the above we have had yet another fire. Yesterday morning about half past 3 A. M., the fire bell gave the alarm, and it was discovered that the large wooden building on Charlotte street owned by Mr. Robert Harper, and occupied by Moses Jackson, Cardinelle, and other French families, was on fire. The devouring element soon reduced the pile, the inmates scarcely being able to save their effects. We have not heard the cause of the fire, but suspect it may have arisen from carelessness caused by inebriety, as the establishment bore any thing but a good repute.

The Saugeen Election.

THE DECLARATION.

The following is the state of the poll in this Division, as stated by the Returning Officer on the 9th inst.:

	McMurrich.	Patton.
Total votes North Simcoe..	917	951
" " Grey.....	1751	1590
" " Bruce.....	1668	950
Total,.....	4336	3491
	3491
Majority for McMurrich..	745

From the above it will be seen that Mr. Patton obtained a majority in his own county of only 154 votes. In the other two Mr. McMurrich had in Grey 161, and in Bruce 684. A more distinct condemnation of the Cartier-McDonald Administration has not been uttered for some time. For a Division first to elect a man, and then to reject him by so large a vote, for the simple reason of his joining that Administration, speaks trumpet-tongued to all concerned, that the people will have the measure conceded, that this unprincipled Ministry sees fit to refuse.

Five Sisters Drowned in the Bay.

(From the Globe of Monday.)

It is our duty to record this morning one of the most deplorable accidents that has occurred in the vicinity of Toronto for a very long period. About one o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Ward, son of Mr. D. Ward, fisherman, a lad about 15 years of age, embarked in a sail boat for a cruise on the Bay, accompanied by his five sisters named respectively Phœbe, Mary Ann, Jane, Caroline, and Margaret. The eldest girl was about thirteen years of age, and the youngest only four. After sailing up and down the Bay for an hour or so, when about half a mile out from Messrs. Goodgerham & Co.'s wharf, William, who was steering the boat with an oar attempted to put it on another tack. At this time there was a stiff breeze blowing from the south-west. He sat upon the gunwale in order that he might have a greater purchase over the oar, when the sail suddenly flapped against the mast, and the boat capsized. All who were on board instantly fell into the water. The boy made every effort to save his sisters and to right the boat. After considerable effort he succeeded in getting the boat on her keel again, and when the two eldest of his sisters came to the surface he managed to get them into the boat, which was half filled with water. When about to get on board himself, the wind again caught the sail of the boat, and in an instant she was capsized a second time and the poor girls, along with the lad who had acted so manfully were again battling for their lives in the water. He made another attempt to save them, but they sunk before his eyes to rise no more in life. The boy although much exhausted succeeded in getting hold of the boat which was being driven hither and thither by the wind and waves and shouted lustily for assistance. His father's house is situated about a thousand yards from where the accident occurred on what is known as the Marsh shore, a short distance from the mouth of the Little Don and on the east side of the Gap in the Island. His painful cries for assistance were, however, not heard by the inmates in the father's hut, but a young man named Earnest had observed the accident from the Esplanade and put off in a boat to render assistance. He fortunately succeeded in rescuing the lad in a very exhausted state, and conveyed him to his father's dwelling. The grief of the parents may be imagined when they learned the melancholly intelligence that their five daughters who had left them in health a short time before, had all met a watery grave. The news of the sad accident reached the city about four o'clock in the afternoon and created much excitement; and Messrs. O'Halloran, Murphy and others immediately proceeded to the spot in a boat to drag for the bodies. They pursued their search till late in the evening, but without being able to find any of the bodies of the unfortunate children. They will renew their efforts this morning. It is stated that the two eldest girls and the boy were well acquainted with the management of a boat, but when they were about to leave the beech their father tried to dissuade them from going, but without effect.

We insert the above not only as a piece of news of a very melancholy character, but as affording another sad lesson to those who break the fourth commandment. From the memory of the past we record it as our deliberate conviction that far more accidents occur on the Sabbath day than on any other. The frequency of drowning to pleasure-seekers on the Sabbath seems an audible command from Him who says "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

The Saugeen Election

"The extraordinary efforts made by the Clear Grits of note from all parts of the Province, and the free use of misrepresentation and falsehood have succeeded in ousting Mr. Patton in Saugeen. Mr. George Brown spent a whole week, and Sunday into the bargain, stumping it for Mr. McMurrich, and dealing forth such invectives against the present administration, that the listner, not knowing the antecedents of the speaker, might be induced to believe that our Provincial affairs were in the hands of a set of brigands. The loss of Mr Patton to the Government is not serious, for they are stronger than their unscrupulous opponents are willing to admit, and one vote will make no material difference in the overwhelming majority that invariably sustains them."

We clip the above precious morceau from the Omanee Warder, for the sake of showing the views of a small bitter soul on this event. Whenever party feelings become stronger than a regard for right, an individual is in danger of running head long into wrong doing—just as our cotemporary has done in throwing out the very base and unjust insinuation of Mr. Brown's having electioneered for Mr. McMurrich on Sunday.

Mr. Brown would not do that, and it is a shame to charge a man innocently. We advise our cotemporary to keep within the line of truth when he assail character again, even though it should be the chief "unscrupulous opponent" to the Government. And let us assure the Warder that Mr. McMurrich would have been elected had George Brown and the other opponents staid at home.

THE CONVICT MILES.—The unhappy criminal now under sentence of death, is very attentive to his religious duties, but is still buoyed up with the expectation of reprieve, the granting or the refusing of which will be known towards the end of the week. It is a melancholy announcement to make, nevertheless it is true, that no fewer than six applicants for the office of hangman have been sent in, one of them from a person 50 miles distant.

The above from the Montreal Witness takes us by surprise. We supposed its excellent Editor was better acquainted with a precept from an old book which says "judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous judgment." Wherein is it more "melancholy" to be a hangman than the Judge who passes sentence? The one adjusts the rope, the other the rope—both are indispensible, and if the one be a cause for "melancholy" so is the other. In the estimation of many, where kings and beggars are upon a level, and where he who may sweep the streets and he who rules an empire are applauded alike if they do their duty, the first and the last executioner of the law are equally commended. To do their duty.

"Honor and shame from no condition rise,
Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

☞ The weather for some time past has been cold and dry. On Tuesday we had a gentle rain, but the air was cold. Since then we have had the genial sunshine, and we trust we have summer fairly set in.

We observe that the forests are assuming their livery of green. They are, however, some eight or ten days late.

From our exchanges we observe the fall wheat is spoken of as looking well. We hear a great many complaints from this neighborhood that much of it looks feeble, and some farmers talk of ploughing up their fields. We hope it will turn out better than is represented. The wheat certainly does not look so well as it did when the snow went off.

OBITUARY.—It is with feelings of regret that we record the death of Mrs. A. T. Heathfield, which took place on Friday night last. Mrs. H. has been known for some time as a pains-taking and successful teacher in the Union School. Possessed of a kind and gentle disposition she endeared the affections of her pupils—many of whom will remember her with pleasure through life. She was married to Mr. Heathfield about two years ago, and leaves an infant but three weeks old. We sincerely sympathize with her relatives and friends in their bereavement, and trust that their loss is her gain.

"SECURE THE SHADOW 'ERE THE SUBSTANCE FADES," is a good advice of old. In ancient times this could only be done at great expense, and after much labor, few being able to afford the luxury. But in modern days there is excuse for none, when a beautiful, life-like, and durable likeness may be had at a very trifling cost. Mr. R. Thompson, and his indispensable partner, the Sun, advertise to attend to the wishes of the public in this respect, and we are sure they will give satisfaction.

THE TIMBER TRADE.—Cribs of timber are already being run down the River, the water being high, and the slides all in good condition. The running is splendid. We believe the cribs are 15 days ahead of last year's time.

☞ By advertisement it will be seen that Mrs. Flavelle will continue her school in Burnham's Block, over the store of Messrs. Glover & Robinson, George street.

☞ President Lincoln has issued a proclamation that the Ports of Beaufort, Port Royal and New Orleans will be open after the first of June. This is the beginning of the end.

☞ Robinson & Co.'s Great Circus, so well known to the sight seeking community, is announced to be in this place, on Saturday, the 17th inst.

The International Exhibition.

The English papers received by the Australasian contain the official programe of the ceremonies to be observed at the opening of the International Exhibition on the 1st of May. The Queen being unable to be present, has appointed the following persons to represent her on the occasion: The Duke of Cambridge, Archbishop of Canterbury, Earl of Derby, Lord Palmerston, and the Speaker of the House of Commons. The arrival of these distinguished personages are to be announced by a flourish of trumpets, and followed by a procession composed of high military and civil officers, and detachments from the army and navy. When the company arrives at the western dome the national anthem will be sung, after which Earl Granville, chairman of the commissioners for the exhibition, will deliver an address, and an answer will be made by the Duke of Cambridge on behalf of the Queen's commissioners for opening the exhibition. The procession will then move down to the eastern dome, where the special musical performances will take place—the orchestra consisting of 2 000 vocalists and 400 musicians. The music, composed for the occasion, will consist of a grand overture by Meyerbeer, a grand march by Auber, and a chorale by Dr. Sterndale Bennet to the following words by Alfred Tennyson, poet laurete:—

Uplift a thousand voices full and sweet,
In this wide hall with earth's inventions stored,
And praise th' invisible universal Lord.
Who lets once more in peace the nations meet
Where Science, Art, and Labor have out, pour,d
Their myriad horns and plenty at our feet.

O, silent father of our kings to be,
Mourn'd in this golden hour of jubilee,
For this, for all, we weep our thanks to thee

The world-compelling plan was thine,
And lo! the long laborious miles
Of Palace; lo! the giant aisles,
Rich in model and design;
Harvest-tool and husbandry,
Loom and wheel and engin'ry,
Secrets of the sullen mine,
Steel and gold, and corn and wine,
Fabric rough or fairy fine,
Sunny tokens of the Line,
Polar marvels, and a feast
Of wonder, out of West and East,
And shapes and hues of Past divine!
All of beauty, all of use,
That one fair plant can produce,
Brought from under every star,
Blown from over every main,
And mixt, as life is mixt with pain,
The works of peace with works of war.

O ye, the wise who think, wise who reign
From growing commerce loose her latest chain,
And let the fair white-winged peacemaker fly
To happy heavens under all the sky.
And mix the seasons and the golden hours,
Till each man find his own in all men's good,
And all men work in noble brotherhood,
Breaking their mailed fleets and armed towers,
And gathering in all her fruits of peace and crown'd with all her flowers.

At the conclusion of the special music the procession will proceed to the throne in the centre of the nave. A prayer will be offered by the Bishop of London, and the hallelujah chorus, and the national anthem will be sung. His royal highness the Duke of Cambridge will declare "the exhibition open." The declaration having been made, it will be announced to the public with a flourish of trumpets, and by the firing of a salute on the north side of the Serpentine. The procession will then proceed to the picture galleries, and the barriers will be removed.

The Separate School Bill.

MEMORANDUM OF THE HEADS OF A BILL AFFECTING THE SEPARATE SCHOOL LAW OF UPPER CANADA PREPARED BY DR. RYERSON.

An Act to restore certain Rights to the parties therein mentioned in respect to Separate Schools.

Whereas it is expedient to restore to the parties therein mentioned certain rights of which they were deprived by the Act 22 Victoria, chapter 65, of the Consolidated Statutes of Upper Canada: Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of Canada, enacts as follows:

1. The words "any incorporated Village or Town," shall be inserted between the words "within" and "any" in the third line of the eighteenth clause of said Act.

2. So much of the thirty-fourth section of said Act, as requires Trustees to make their returns or reports under oath is hereby repealed.

3. It shall be lawful for the majority of the rate-paying supporters of the separate School, in each School section (in two or more School sections,) whether in the same or adjoining Municipalities, at Public Meetings duly called by the Separate School Trustees of each such section, to form such sections into a separate School Union Section, of which union of sections the Trustees shall give notice within fifteen days to the Clerk or Clerks of the Municipality or Municipalites, and to the Chief Superintendent of Education, and each such separate School Union Section then formed, shall be deemed one School Section for all Roman Catholic separate School purposes.

4. The twenty-ninth section of said Act, 22 Victoria chapter 65, shall be amended as follows:

"After the first notice required to be given to the clerk of the municipality by the supporters of a separate school section, each subsequent annual notice required by law to be given, of the names and residence of the supporters of a separate school in any rural school in any rural school section, city, town or incorporated village, shall be given in writing by the trustees of such separate school; but subject, in case of incorrect returns, to the penalties imposed by law on school trustees in case of other false returns."

5. The Roman Catholic separate school (with their registers) shall be subject to such inspection as may be directed from time to time by the Department of Public Instruction for Upper Canada.

MEMORANDUM ON THE ACCOMPANYING DRAFT OF BILL TO RESTORE CERTAIN RIGHTS TO THE PARTIES THEREIN MENTIONED IN RESPECT TO SEPARATE SCHOOLS:

"No new principle is introduced into this Draft of Bill, nor does it contain any provision (except those of the last section) which was not embraced in the Common School Acts of 1850 and 1855. The farmers of the Roman Catholic School Act of 1855 aimed to assimilate the separate School Law of Upper Canada, with the Dissentient School Law of Lower Canada, but they were ignorant of the effect of some of the provisions of their Act arising from the municipal system of Upper Canada, in connection with School sections Assessments, &c.

"The provisions of the accompanying Draft of Bill only restore to the parties concerned rights of which they were deprived by the Roman Catholic separate School Act of 1855."

(Signed,) E. RYERSON."

The Cotton Famine: its Facts and its Effects.

(From the London Economist.)

"Happy," it has been said, "is that nation whose annals are dull and uneventful." Happy, no doubt, is the nation, but wretched are the journalists thereof. A war, a great catastrophie, a novel or difficult political question, or a "difficulty" in public life—whatever, in short, wise men, or busy men, or benevolent men would most deprecate and deplore—it is a veritable godsend to the writer who has week by week to cater for the interest and instruction of his fellow-citizens. Now that the education controversy has been compromised, and that all immediate risk of a rupture with the United States is over, there would be scarcely any matter of importance to discuss in our domestic policy, and we should be very hard up indeed were it not for the American civil war, and the reflex action of the conflict between the Merrimac and the Monitor. There is, however, one grave question, of foreign origin, indeed, but of vast magnitude at home, which is every hour growing in prominence and seriousness, and which we cannot look at too promptly or too firmly. We allude to the scarcity of cotton, and its consequences to our trade, our population, and our revenue.

Eight months ago the public took great interest in this matter, and felt considerable alarm in reference to it. Since then, tho' the danger and suffering have been really and ceaselessly increasing, the general attention paid to it has been as steadily diminishing. This has been partly owing to those mitigating circumstances which we have more than once explained, part y to the length of time which has elapsed without any actual catastrophie, partly also to the unexampled and exemplary patience with which the distress undoubtedly experienced by our manufacturing population has been borne. It is now desirable that the actual position of affairs shall be once more brought before our readers, in order that they may acquire some adequate conception as to what may have to be endured and what will probably have to be done.

The facts of the case are simply these. From two-thirds to three-fourths of our usual consumption of cotton comes from America. For nine months or more this supply has been wholly cut off. In ordinary years, between the 1st of September (the commencement of the cotton year) to the present date, about two millions and a quarter of bales are shipped from the ports of the United States to Great Britain. This year, within the same dates, we may say that none has been received. The usual stock of American cotton is about 600,000 bales. The actual stock is only about 150,000 bales. The usual price is 7d. per pound. The present price is 13d. The quantity usually on its way hither at this time is 300,000 bales. Now there are not, probably 300 bales afloat. To set against this alarming deficiency, we last year imported double our usual quantity from India, which supplied us with nearly a million of bales. But to all appearance this was a spasmodic effort, which is scarcely probable can be kept up. Our present stock of Indian cotton is 100,000 bales larger than last year. But the quantity afloat—the quantity that has to arrive before the end of June—is 100,000 bales less, according to the best calculations—199,000 bales against 293,500 in 1861. The inevitable result is that nearly all the mills are on short time; many are stopped altogether; and, as a rule, the operatives who are still employed are only earning half their usual wages. Every week, too, makes the matter worse. The consumption of cotton continues, the export continues, the arrivals come in slowly and inadequately, stocks are regularly decreasing, and the amount of earnings on which the working population of Lancashire and the other cotton districts have to subsist grows scantier day by day.

Nor is there any—we do not say reasonable, but any possible prospect of early amendment or relief. Granting the best that the most sanguine hopes can anticipate, viz., that the civil war in America may come to an end, in one way or another, in three months—say by the end of June; granting that the moment preliminaries of peace are signed, the blockade will be raised without waiting for the arrangement of all the difficult and nearly insoluable questions which must arise as soon as negotiations are commenced; granting that the planters begin to pack and forward their cotton to the ports as rapidly as they can; still, considering that much of the bagging necessary for the cotton has to be imported that the ships which are to transport it are still on this side of the Atlantic, and that the usual modes of river and land carriages have been dreadfully disorganized by the war, we could not receive any quantity in England before the middle of September. That is to say, we have only 150,000 bales of American cotton to last us for 6 months, at our usual rate of consumption, this could last us scarcely five weeks. For at least six month's then, we shall, on the most favourable supposition, have to work on half time, and to live on half wages—having been doing this for several months already. Now, what must be the condition of even the most frugal population who for three-quarters of a year find half their income cut away, and many of whom have no income at all?

Nor must our readers jump to the conclusion that even here, because there has therefore been little distress. The character of the artizan population of the north is not as well understood among us as it deserves. They are very sturdy and very patient. Though prompt to resent anything like wrong, or any suffering that appears to spring from injustice, they show wonderful endurance of all calamities that are clearly traceable to no wilful or human agency. In the present case, they are perfectly aware that neither the law, nor the Government, nor their employers are in any degree to blame for the misfortune has overtaken them. They have, therefore, borne their privations with singular calmness. They have accepted thankfully a good deal of assistance from their masters, and of those who have been thrown altogether out of work, a considerable number have applied for parish relief; so that in many districts the pressure on the rate fund has more than doubled the usual amount. But the operatives, as a rule, are peculiarly averse to all applications to the Relieving Officer. They are conscious that they could obtain it; and, therefore, feel great annoyance at the idea of a "labor test." They are accustomed to extremely good food; and the scanty pittance of legal charity strikes them as miserably insufficient. The risk, too, of having the "workhouse offered" to them is insupportable. Then, again, the guardians, in the execution of a somewhat harsh, but, in ordinary cases, quite justifiable precaution, mostly refuse assistance as long as the applicant has any property at all. Now, as all the operatives have household furniture, and many of them furniture of considerable value, they are obliged to pawn or sell this before they can obtain relief—and this they will only do in the last extremity. It is obvious that the Poor-law Board must, as soon as possible, take up the consideration of this question, and sanction such a relaxation of the ordinary practice as, without introducing dangerous or permanent laxity, shall meet an unusual emergency in a sagacious and humane manner. It clearly can be for nobody's advantage that a large part of our most industrious and thriving population should be reduced, before any aid is rendered them, to a state of destitution from which only very liberal and long continued aid can again raise them. "A stitch in time" may here "save nine."

The factory workers, too, though not often among the depositors in saving banks, are by no means altogether an unthrifty a class as it is usual to represent them. They subscribe largely to trades' unions, to sick clubs, and to various "friendly societies," organized and conducted by themselves—such as the Foresters, the Odd Fellows Club, and so on. From several of these they obtain assistance in times of pressure as long as the funds last; and on such assistance most of them have been partially subsisting for some months. But all these resources are now undergoing a rapid progress of exhaustion; and the shopkeepers' power of giving credit—another great resource—will soon come to an end also.—The returns relative as yet have only given the very faintest indication of diminished consumption of dutiable and excisable articles; but the diminution began some time since, and the effect will be clearly enough apparent in the ensuing quarter. It always takes some weeks before this operation reaches the actual receipts of the tax collector. Mr. Gladstone might be content to wait and see the precise amount and nature of the deficiency before he makes any endeavour to provide for it; but it is simply impossible that by far the largest body of workmen in the empire, with the greatest number of subsidary trades dependent upon them, should be reduced to half work and half wages for six or eight months without the consequences being legibly written in that most sure and sensitive of all barometers, the Customs and Excise returns. We cannot entertain much doubt that before Parliament rises it will be found necessary both to afford a considerable abnormal assistance to the suffering operatives of Lancashire and Cheshire, and to provide for a considerable falling off in the revenue arising out of that suffering.

Blessing the Apple Tree.

In Sussex, England, the blessing of apple trees is still observed. On the eve of Christmas Day, young and old people assemble in the orchard, and commence dancing round a large apple tree, repeating a rude chant to the words of this purpose: "God bless this tree to the use of the master. May it flourish and bring forth abundantly, even to fill a hat, to fill a basket, to fill a cart, to fill a waggon." The same ceremony is performed round every apple and pear tree in the orchard. In Devonshire, a certain apple tree, as the representative of the rest, is sprinkled with cider, or a bowl of it is dashed against the tree, or cakes steeped in cider are hung upon the branches, followed by an incantation, and a dance round the trees, and then home to feast.

Decisive Battles of the World.

The decisive battles of the world—those of which, to use Hallam's words, a contrary result would have essentially varied the drama of the world in all its subsequent scenes—are numbered as fifteen by Prof. Creasy, who fills the chair of Ancient and Modern History in the University of London. They are the grand subjects of two volumes by him, lately from Bentley's press, and are:—

1. The battle of Marathon, fought 490 B.C., in which the Greeks, under Themistocles, defeated the Persians under Darius, thereby turning back the tide of Asiatic invasion which else would have swept over Europe.

2. The battle of Syracuse, 415 B.C., in which the Athenian power was broken and the rest of Europe saved from Greek dominion.

3. The battle of Arbela, 331 B.C., in which Alexander, by a defeat of Darius, established his power in Asia, and by the introduction of European civilization, produced an effect which yet may be traced there.

4. The battle of Metaurus, 208 B.C., the Romans under Nero defeating the Carthaginians under Hasdrubal, and by which the supremacy of the great republic was established.

5. The victory of Armenius, A.D., 9, over the Roman leader Varus, which secured Gaul from Roman domination.

6. The battle of Chalons, A.D. 471, in which Actius defeated Attila, the Hun, the self-styled scourge of God, and saved Europe from entire devastation.

7. The battle of Tours, A.D. 735, in which Charles Martel, by the defeat of the Saracens, averted the Mahommedan yoke from Europe.

8. The battle of Hastings, A.D. 1066, in which William of Normandy was victorious over the Anglo-saxon Harold, and the result of which was the formation of the Anglo-Norman nation, which is now dominant in the world.

9. The battle of Orleans, A.D. 1424, in which the English were defeated, and the independent existence of France secured.

10. The defeat of the Spanish Armada, A.D. 1588, which crushed the hopes of Papacy in England.

11. The battle of Blenheim, A.D. 1704, in which Malborough, by the defeat of Tallard, broke the power and crushed the ambitious schemes of Louis XIV.

12. The defeat of Charles XII. by Peter the Great at Pultown, A.D. 1709, which secured the stability of the Muscovite Empire.

13. The battle of Saratoga, A.D. 1777, in which Gen. Gates defeated Burgoyne, and which decided the contest in favor of the American revolutionists by making France their ally, and other European powers friendly to them.

Letter from the American War.

CAMP RENO,
Roanoke Island, N. C., April 21.

DEAR BROTHER:—I take this opportunity of answering yours, as we all have something to talk about now. On the 18th we left the Island, and in company with the 89th New Hampshire, 51st Pennsylvania and 21st Massachusetts, started for Elizabeth City. We landed at 12 o'clock at night. Being the first regiment on land as soon as daylight broke we started on our march; marched all day steady until four o'clock, when the first gun was fired at General Reno and one of his aides, the rebels having a battery commanding the road. The aide rode back and the regiment advanced to within one mile of their position, when we deployed to the right of the field and advanced about a quarter of a mile, the shells flying around us but doing no damage to us. Then commenced the firing of grape and canister at our Colonel, who was acting Brigadier-General of the 1

Hand-Writing.

At a recent sitting of the Academy of Sciences, some papers were read relative to hand-writing. Among the facts stated, the most remarkable was, that no man can ever get rid of the style of hand-writing peculiar to his nation. If he be English, he always writes in English style; if French, in the French style; if German, Italian or Spanish, in the style peculiar to his nation. I am acquainted with a Frenchman who has passed all his life in England, and who in English in dress, habits, tastes, everything; who speaks English like one of our countrymen, and writes English with ten times more correctness than ninety men in the hundred of us, but who cannot for the life of him, imitate our mode of writing. I have also heard speak of a Scotch youth who was carefully educated in this country, and for eighteen years of his life mixed exclusively with French people, but who, though he had a French writingmaster in his life, always wrote in the same style as we all do; it was really national instinct. In Paris, all the writing-masters profess to teach the English manner of writing, but with all their exertions, they can never get their pupils to adopt any but the cramped hand of the French. Some person pretended that he could tell the character of individuals from their hand-writings. I know not whether he spoke the truth or not, but assuredly he might have asserted, with the most perfect confidence, that he could distinguish a man's country by his hand-writing. The difference between our writing and that of the French is immense—a schoolboy would distinguish it at a glance. Mix together a hundred sheets of manuscript written by a hundred of our countrymen, and no one would fail to say which was the British and which was the French, even though they should all be written in the same language, and with the same pens, ink, and paper. The difference between Italian, and Spanish, and German styles of writing is equally as great.—Edinburgh Weekly Review.

ALBION HOTEL,

MONTREAL.

L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.

IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST-PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION, to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half hotel in Canada.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ERYSIPELAS, ROSE OR ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall restore the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price, $1 per Bottle; Six Bottles for $5.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

THIS FOUND WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE HEAT OF the ailment, ARRESTS IT, KILLS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

JUDSON'S

Mountain Herb Pills.

ABOVE, we present you with a perfect likeness of TOMAH, a chief of a tribe of the strange Aztec Nation, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlets and Almanacs—to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity at the fountain-head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a stream, and after a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lamp of life soon dies out.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body; they are, therefore, unrivalled as a

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, &c. &c. This Anti-Bilious Medicine expels from the blood the hidden seeds of disease, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and fluent, cleaning and rejuvenating the vital organs.

Pleasant indeed, is it to say, that we are able to place within your reach, a medicine like the "MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS," that will pass directly to the afflicted parts, through the blood and fluids of the body, and cause the sufferer to brighten with the flush of beauty and health.

Judson's Pills are the Best Remedy in existence for the following Complaints:

Bowel Complaints,	Debility,	General Weakness,
Coughs,	Fever and Ague,	Liver Complaints,
Colds,	Female Complaints	Locomotor of Spirits,
Chest Diseases	Headaches,	Piles,
Costiveness,	Indigestion,	Sores and Ulcers,
Dyspepsia,	Influenza,	Secondary Symptoms,
Diarrhœa,	Inflammations,	Worms.
Dropsy,

GREAT FEMALE MEDICINE

Females who value health, should never be without these Pills. They purify the blood, remove obstructions of all kinds, cleanse the skin of all pimples and blotches, and bring the rich color of health to the pale cheek.

☞ The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very surprising way among the Tennessee, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Get the Almanac of our Agent, and you will read with delight, the very interesting account it contains of the "GREAT MEDICINE" of the AZTECS.

Observe.—The Mountain Herb Pills are put up in a Beautiful Wrapper. Each box contains 40 pills, and Retail at 25 cents per box. All genuine, have the Signature of B. L. JUDSON & CO., on each box.

Poetry.

Spring.

I go among the bursting flowers
That blooms the hills upon,
And weep me in the robes of green
The Spring is putting on.

I lie beneath the grateful shade
That rape the woody hill,
And listen to the low sweet voice
Of yonder singing rill.

I breathe with swelling joy the air
That fans my naked brow,
And feel within my bounding heart
The world's awak'ning now.

I watch the lazy ships that ride
Upon the river's breast,
Forgetful of the winter's blasts,
So peacefully they rest.

I gaze upon the silver clouds
That sail along the sky,
And wonder are they angel's wings,
So lightly floating by?

I hear the love-song of the birds
Among the boughs above—,
So full of joy their carols are,
I know they sing of love.

They thrill soft sonnets to the flowers
That blossom in the dell,
And to the blue forget-me-nots
Their sweetest stories tell.

The trees that skirt the water's edge—
The sly, coquettish elves?—
Have made a mirror of the lake
By which to robe themselves?

And, rustling in the laughing winds
That kiss their leaflets fair,
They shake their fragrant blossoms down
As maidens do their hair?

The pulse of Nature throbs with joy,
Like hearts that, much oppress,
Their weight of woes and griefs lay down,
And find in Heaven rest.

O? what a glad awakening!
O happy time of Spring,
The resurrected world to thee
Doth hallelujahs sing!

Miscellaneous.

The United States War Debt.

(From the Baptist.)

Competent authorities in the United States have estimated that the war debt proper, by the first day of July next, will amount to the sum of $2,000,000,000. It is also further estimated that the war debt of the individual States, for the raising and equipping the respective regiments sent by them to the Federal Government, will, by that time, amount to $700,000,000. For damages sustained by railroad companies, owners of houses, steamboats, ships—the Merrimac alone destroyed, in less than one hour, $1,500 000 worth of property—and interest up to the date we estimate, without any correct data, at $1,000,000,000. And, for pensions, damages done to fortifications, guns, &c., belonging to the United States, we estimate at $300,000,000. Making a total debt by the first of July next of $4,000,000,000.

If this debt is paid off at the rate of $250,000,000 a year, together with the back interest, at the rate of 7 per cent.—the average rate of legal interest charged by the several States—the following would be the whole sum paid for interest and principle for the period named:—

1st year's interest	....	$.	80,000,000
2nd "	"	....	262,500,000
3rd "	"	....	245,000,000
4th "	"	....	227,500,000
5th "	"	....	210.000.000
6th "	"	....	192 500,000
7th "	"	....	175,000,000
8th "	"	....	157,500,000
9th "	"	....	140,000,000
10th "	"	....	122,500,000
11th "	"	....	105,000,000
12th "	"	....	87,500,000
13th "	"	....	70,000,000
14th "	"	....	52,500,000
15th "	"	....	35,000,000
16th "	"	....	17,500,000
Total interest	....	$2,380 000,000
Principal	.....	4,000,000,000
		$6,380,000,000

It will be a low estimate to add 15 per cent. to this amount, for the expenses attending assessing, collecting, treasurers, bank commissioners, &c. This will add $957,075,000 to the debt—making a grand total of $7,337,075,000. This sum would place twenty-one Bibles in the hands of every man, woman, and child in the world, worth 35 cents each.

Ten silver half dollars measure just one foot. Suppose the above debt to be paid in such coins, and laid down in one continuous line, it would reach 1,467,415,000 feet or 489.138,333 yards, or 277,919¼ miles, and would reach around the globe about eleven times and a half!

Ten dollars in silver weigh just 9 ounces. $1,000,000, 28¼ tons; and the entire debt, as above, 209,107 tons!

Helper, in "The Impending Crisis"—good authority—estimates the entire slave population in the (then) United States at 2,200,000. It is also estimated that the average weight of the population of any country, men, women, and children, is about 80lbs. At this estimation, the war will have cost an amount of silver equal to about 2½ times the weight of the whole 2,200,000 slaves, or $3,335 each for every man, woman, and child!!

Suppose all of this said debt was piled up in silver, in one slip of a vast pair of scales, it would require the opposite scale, the entire population (according to the census of 1860) of the following states to counter-balance this "heap"; calculating the average weight to 80lbs. each:—

Michigan	769,112
New Jersey	672,034
Rhode Island	174,620
Vermont	315,098
Maine	328,279
New Hampshire	326,073
Delaware	112 216
Kansas	107,110
Minnesota	172,022
Massachusetts	1,231,066
Wisconsin	775,873
From other States	264,172
	5,227,675 !!

The Northern army is estimated at about 400,000 men. None, but those accustomed to see large bodies of men, can form any idea how much ground even 50,000 men will cover. Now, suppose that there was a position from which the whole 400,000 could be seen at one time, and suppose that the average weight of each soldier with his accoutrements and arms are 160 pounds. It would require more than six and a half of said armies to weigh as much as the silver of the debt would—209,107 tons; or 418,214,000 pounds.

Money at compound interest, at 7 per cent., calculating the interest every six months, (more than) doubles itself in ten years. Now, suppose that the debt and interest should remain unpaid for 60 years. (on the principle of "let the next generation pay the expense of the war, as this one has given her blood and many of her best sons," it would, by that time amount to $256,000,000,000! Which sum, in silver, would weigh 7,232,000, as seen below:—

Years.	Dollars.	Tons.
10	8,000,000 000	226,000
20	16,000,000,000	452,000
30	32,000,000,000	904,000
40	64,000,000,000	1,808,000
50	128,000,000,000	3,616,000
60	256,000,000,000	7,232,000

This would amount to $44,266 50 cents for every man, woman, and child, in 60 yrs from now, supposing the population of the North then to be 60,000,000, or about four times what it is now.

In the foregoing we have calculated the cash cost of the war, to the Federal and Northern States governments, supposing the war to close on the 1st July next.

The cost of the war to the Confederate States, will, as we suppose, be about the same.

If we were to add to this the loss to individuals, crops, labor, &c., how much the foregoing amount would be augmented!

God grant that this war may speedily come to a close, and the time soon arrive when nations will not need to learn the art of war any more.

The Battles of a Year.

One year ago, the 12th of April, says the Evening Post, occurred the first action in this war. Ten thousand rebels opened fire upon seventy loyal soldiers in Fort Sumter. Since then there have been fought twenty-five battles, besides numerous skirmishes. The following list will show the year's work;

1. Fort Sumter, South Carolina, April 12–13, 1861.
2. Big Bethel, Virginia, June 10.
3. Carthage, Missouri, July 5.
4. Rich Mountain, Virginia, July 12.
5. Carrickaford, Virginia, July 14.
6. Bull Run, Virginia, July 21.
7. Springfield, Missouri, August 10.
8. Lexington, Missouri, Sept. 20.
9. Santa Rosa Island, Florida Oct. 9.
10. Ball's Bluff, Virginia, Oct. 21.
11. Fredericktown, Missouri, Oct 21.
12. Port Royal, South Carolina, Nov. 7.
13. Belmont, Missouri, Nov. 8.
14. Drainsville, Virginia, Dec. 20.
15. Mill Spring, Kentucky, Jan 19, 1862.
16. Fort Henry, Tennessee, Feb. 6.
17. Roanoke Island, N. Carolina, Feb. 7–8.
18. Fort Donelson, Tennessee, Feb. 13–16.
19. Valverde, New Mexico, Feb. 21.
20. Pea Ridge, Arkansas, March 6–8.
21. Hampton Roads, Virginia, March 8–9.
22. Newbern, North Carolina, March 14.
23. Winchester, Virginia, March 23.
24. Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., April 6-7.
25. Surrender of Island No. 10 April 7.
26. Surrende. of Fort Pulaski, April 11.

Of these actions, eight occurring in 1861, were defeats for us, and six victories; but since New Year's day the list shows an uninterrupted series of splendid achievements for the Union arms. Leaving out the battle of Pittsburg Landing, our losses during the war have been—in killed, 2,400; wounded, 4,196; prisoners, 1,440; total loss, exclusive of deaths in camp by disease, 8,126. The rebel loss has been, in killed and wounded, 12,429; prisoners, 23,797; besides which the rebels have lost enormous stores of provisions, not less than 350 cannon, and at least nine Generals killed.

A Canadian Victimized.

One of the party who left this neighborhood last week intending to sail from New York for Caribou greatly surprised his friends by returning home on Saturday morning last. As far as we have been able to learn, it appears that in traveling in the cars en route for New York, he got into conversation with a sharper, and in the course of the journey, informed him that he was on his way to Caribou and was going by way of California. The sharper told him that he too, was travelling to California. On arriving at New York, they proceeded immediately to the office of the Company whose steamer was to take them to San Francisco for the purpose of purchasing their tickets when, by some means or other, the sharper succeeded in getting the other man's money. He was consequently obliged to return home as he was unable to pay his fare after he had been relieved of his gold. He had barely enough left to pay his way home. No doubt every one who reads the above will say within himself, 'I could not be victimized in this way.' No doubt you gentle reader, are possessed of an extra share of good sense, ability, and penetrating acumen. We never saw a man who did not think these of himself but your liability to yield to the invitation of 'Step into my parlor said the spider to the fly,' can only be known when experienced. A man who came two years since was known to our merchants as a travellor for a commercial house in Montreal passed through this section a few days ago taking orders as of yore. After conversing with the merchant upon business he would say 'good day' and turn to leave but suddenly wheeling to the merchant again would say 'Oh! could you lend me a few dollars? I've been disappointed in my remittances; will return it as soon as I hear from Montreal.' One lent him $30, another $20, another $17, and in all he raised $250. It has since transpired that he was travelling on his own account, and not for the Montreal house. Our merchants have the credit of being, as shrewed as most men of their class, but even they get "sold".—Norfolk Reformer.

A Deceiver Tricked and Trapped.

An unparalleled matrimonial adventure has taken place during the last week in Dudley. A Mr. Wragg, a patent smoke-bottle maker, a few years ago paid his addresses to Miss Lydia Bradley, in Birmingham street, Wolverhampton. After having had two children by her, he proved faithless to his vows, and a few weeks ago paid his addresses to Mrs. Nancy Lane, who keeps a tripe shop in the town. Mrs. Lane, happening to be on terms of friendship with her fair rival, was determined to punish Mr. Wragg for his faithlessness to his former love, by executing a stratagem which has no parallel in the annals of matrimonial bonds. Feigning to receive his addresses with tenderness, she agreed that the bans of marriage should be published in Wodsley church, and, being experienced in the forms necessary to be undergone, she undertook to have them published herself. This she did, but instead of giving the clerk her own name, she gave him that of Mrs. Lydia Bradley. So far all went well, but the difficulties to be overcome were still great—but none too great for woman's will. The morning for the celebration of the happy event came—and with it also came Mr. Wragg to the house of his new love. Mrs. Lane received him with smiles, ready attired in her wedding dress, and informed him that if he would wait ten minutes, while she made some little preparation up stairs, and put her veil on, she would accompany him to the church. No sooner was this rose over than she immediately transferred the wedding garment to Mrs. Bradley, who descended the stairs, duly veiled and decorated with the attir of Mrs. Lane.

It is customary in Dudley for the bridegroom to lead the way to church, accompanied by the bridesmaid, the father and the friends of the bride bringing up the cortege. Of course this was all in favor of the success of the plot, and the party arrived at church. The trepidation of the representative of Mrs. Nancy Lane's charms may be more easily conceived than described when her faithless one was brought thus far, and had to go through the ceremony; but despairing not, the ceremony was entered upon; aye—and such was the amazement of poor Wragg, that he went brough the ceremony without noticing that the name of his bride was Lydia Bradley, and not Nancy Lane. After leaving the alter, and being still in blissful ignorance of the trick that had been played upon him, the gay benedict attempted to steal a kiss. He was successful; but behold the face was not Nancy's but Lydia's! The sequel only remains to be told:—the bridegroom, who had been audibly consoling himself on his way from Church upon the prospect of being independent for life, with Mrs. Lane's tripe business, found himself in the wrong box. Indignant in the highest degree, the newly made benedict forthwith proceeded to the house of his "intended," and reproached her bitterly. Nancy met his reproofs with such smiles of consolation, that poor Mr. Wragg waxed wroth, and sought to redress his wrongs by applying to an attorney. The gentleman of the law told him that his remedy was an application for a divorce, but he would not be answerable for the amount of the costs, so the faithless Mr. Wragg has been obliged to put up with his rib, to the no small amusement of the whole town.—English Paper.

A BAD JOB FOR THE COW.—When George Stephenson, the celebrated engineer completed his model of a locomotive, he presented himself before the British Parliament, and asked the attention and support of that body. The grave peers, looking sneeringly at his invention, asked,

"So, sir, you have made a carriage to run by steam, have you?"

"Yes, my lords."

"And you expect your carriage to run on parallel rails, so that it cannot go off, do you?"

"Yes, my lords."

"Well, now, Mr. Stephenson, let us show you how absurd your claim is. Suppose, when your carriage is running upon these rails, at the rate of twenty or thirty miles an hour—if you are extravagant enough to think such a thing possible—a cow should get in its way. You cannot turn out for her—what then?"

"Why, then it will be a bad job for the cow, my lords."

—A bickering pair of Quakers were lately heard in high controversy, the husband exclaiming: "I am determined to have one quiet week with thee!" "But how wilt thou be able to get it?" said the taunting spouse in reiteration, which married ladies so provokingly indulge in. "I will keep thee a week after thou art dead!" was the quaker's rejoiner.

—"Sean," said an Irishman to his fellow servant, "what are the bells ringing for?" "In honor of the Princess's birthday," was the reply. "Be asy, jewel," rejoined Pat; "none of your tricks upon travellers: 'twas the Prince of Wales' on the ninth, and how can it be his sister's twelve days after, unless indade they are twins?"

—A dyspeptic clergyman, after a long confinement, determined to try an experiment of preaching once more; and he accordingly delivered three discourses in one day, of an hour each. He told his negro servant he felt better for preaching, when that functionary replied—"I thought you would, massa, after getting so much trash off your stomach."

Sons of Temperance Column.

To Temperance Men and the Public generally.

The Sons of Temperance, in this place have for a long time back, with the deepest feelings of unmingled alarm and regret, beheld two things, viz: the increase of intemperance in their midst and the apparent apathy of the temperance community. The "Sons" have tried different ways to prevent this. Some of them have met with partial success—others have failed almost altogether. They now intend to try what can be done through the public press. Through the courtesy of the Proprietor of the Examiner, a column of his paper has been devoted to their interests, to be exclusively under their control, and they alone to be responsible for the articles that may from time to time appear therein. The "Sons" believe in the motto "Try, try, try." They consider it their duty to make every effort to assist in consummating the great end which their own and similar organizations have in view. They leave the results in the hands of a higher power. And surely, at no period of our towns history has there been greater necessity to try to put an end to the fearfully alarming drinking usages that obtain among us, than at present. Intemperance seems now more rampant than ever. It is coiling its slimy folds around many a victim, and Cerberus-like is poisoning the whole community with its hot fetid breath. The ravages he is making are seen around about in the bloated, bleared figures, in the broken up families, the blighted prospects, the crushed hopes and happiness, the obscene profanity, the terrible crimes, and the premature and often violent or incidental deaths, that are every day coming under our notice. It is indeed no time for temperance men to relax their efforts, and lying on their oars, to permit themselves to be carried down with the stream of apathetic indifference—along the surface of which so many are gliding. No, it is rather a time for more vigorous action than has ever characterized them. And it is not only a time of action for men who are enrolled in some professedly temperance organization: but for men who profess to love their fellow men and their God. Will not something then be done? Will not those who were once big-hearted and active in the Temperance cause return to their old love and assist again in the old but glorious work of redeeming and regenerating fallen and down-trodden humanity. What a cheering thought it must be upon one's death-bed that he with the blessing of the Supreme being has been instrumental in saving even one. For the possession of what earthly bauble or honor would be exchange this? The Sons therefore appeal to the old temperance friends to buckle on their armour and come and assist them. But not only to these would they appeal, but to all the intelligent, the orderly, and the good in the community. Fully impressed with the "mighty power" of example, they would call upon these by their direct and indirect influence to aid to banish all that can intoxicate from the sideboard and the table—if not for the good of others not connected with them, if not for the order of society, if not for the higher and nobler interests of morality and religion—if not for these the greatest and loftiest motives that can prompt and actuate man—at least for the sake of themselves and the families which are growing up around them. Whatever the prompting motives—whether totally disinterested, or altogether selfish in their character—there is work for all; and whatever the motives, to advance the interests of the temperance cause is the work of all. All are injured directly or indirectly by intemperance, all are benefitted by temperance. Will this appeal, then be in vain? Rather, will not a new and vigorous start be made to wipe away the opprobrium that lies upon our town's fair fame, and so remove the mighty incubus that is weighing down its best and highest interest—both moral and material. Let time tell.

A few Practical Thoughts.

RUNNING DOWN ON TEMPERANCE.

We use this language not because it is select or philosophical, but because it conveniently and aptly conveys an important idea. Mankind are so constituted, that they will run down like a clock on any important subject. And they, as much, and as often, need winding up. You need winding up on your religion every Sabbath, at least, to say nothing of some social meeting that may intervene to perform the same service. You have to be wound up more fully and tighter at annual and periodical elections. Our nature is such, that we can't support even a personal friendship without winding up with letters or visits, or both. So mankind must be wound up on Temperance.

WINDING UP ON TEMPERANCE. HOW.

As we run down on Temperance like a clock, so we must be wound up on Temperance like a clock. We run down by neglecting to read, think, feel, talk—by neglecting the society, the meeting, the discussion—the action—whether for the encouragement of the faint-hearted, the admonition of the unwary in the wielding of argument or the enactment and execution of law—the action necessary to keep up our thoughts, our feelings, and our courage. We must wind up then by reversing all this. Let us read then. Let us reflect deeply. And then we shall feel—we shall have the "requisite moral sensibility; and then we shall speak out of this abundance of the heart, and all associated, energetic effort will follow; so that we will find ourselves wound and keyed up to "concert pitch" and we shall sing in time and tune, and not fall down into lolorous jargon and death-cries.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

The politician does not say place it before the people, but KEEP it before the people. And herein is consummate, prudential wisdom; the only true, sound policy. "The children of this world are wiser than the children of light." Whatever will bear investigation must be kept constantly "before the people" to make it succeed. Will temperance ever learn a lesson here? We'll see.

WE MUST DO THE WORK OVER AND OVER AGAIN.

Any temperance man who dreams that the work is not to be done over and over again, understands little of his mission.—For it is not only true that we run down naturally and must be wound up on Temperance, the same as on Religion, Politics, or anything else of any importance, but every few years a new generation will come up to be indoctrinated, pledged, associated and made through in the principles and practices of our glorious Reform. Besides the enemy is always busy, conjuring up objections and false charges, so that we must be on the alert, in full force, and operating to meet and conquer him. "There is no discharge in the temperance war." To the very end of our lives, as individuals and members of the cold water host, we must rally, must keep rallied and contend earnestly."

BUT IT WILL COST SO MUCH. WE CANT DO IT.

Yes it will cost a good deal. It is not for us to say how much—time, thought, money, feeling, high resolve courage and hard work. And we shall incur much opposition, reproach and slander. We shall be forsaken and betrayed—it may be, by the professed friends of the cause. Yet all must be done and met manfully, heroically. Complaints and whining on our part, will either sink the cause or grievously affect and overwhelm our co-labourers. Cheerfully and assiduously must we keep doing over, in this temperance cause, or we shall show ourselves anything but true disciples.

Royal Marriages.

THE ROYAL FAMILY OF ENGLAND.

We copy the following interesting article which we slightly abridge from the Newburyport Herald:—

In countries where the highest governing power is hereditary, the marriages in the royal family are regulated by law. The nation declares its right to say whose shall come the blood that is to govern them; and in that they do well. The sovereign or heir to the sovereign does not alone marry for personal pleasure and individual or domestic happiness, but for the public good. Therefore it has often happened that marriages have been negotiated where the royal parties have never seen each other, and have been brought to the point of consummation before they knew anything about it. They are political arrangements—matters of state, and often have been most unhappy to the married parties.

The members of the royal family of England cannot marry their inferiors in rank, and hence they cannot marry in England, where are no families on an equality with them. This was not so anciently; the kings or queens could take wives or husbands who were their subjects; but it is now two hundred years since such an event has occurred. Nor can they marry any but Protestants; and as the Protestant royal families are few, they have a narrow field from which to select. Chiefly such families are Germans, and with these the crown has connected; and as the family itself is German, and has married none but Germans, it remains pure "German" to this day. Scarcely a drop of English blood is in the family to whose hands are committed in a great degree the unity, happiness and prosperity of the great British empire—the first nationality of the world.

The Prince of Wales, Albert Edward, having nearly reached his majority, (he was born Nov. 9th, 1841,) the government has been looking about to see whom he could marry with advantage to the nation, when he should express a desire for matrimony. There has been some talk of a change in the laws, that he might marry in his own country if he would. In the meantime at sport in abroad that he has already committed matrimony—by a private marriage with an Irish lady of great beauty and intelligence, with whom he formed acquaintance when visiting that part of his mothers kingdom. This, we are told, happened before the death of his father, who on that account ordered him on a voyage to the East, to finish his education, trusting that distance would break the enchanting spell that led him to such youthful indiscretion. The story is not to be credited, though what has happened in the past might happen to him. Such a connection would not be marriage in the eyes of the law; and the female thus wedded and all the parties who assisted in the ceremonies would be liable to punishment for crime. [illegible] the proposed change in the [illegible] allowing him to take one [illegible] jects to wife, he might [illegible] ratify a private arrangement, and [illegible] blood come into the ruling family. [illegible] logically this might be an [illegible] for so long [illegible] the family [illegible] that determination is most [illegible] intensity in not already [illegible] a most decided tendency [illegible] To mingle the heavy, plodding [illegible] with the sprightly, brave, [illegible] Irish, might give a successor of great energy than the throne of England has known for a long time. It might be of quite as much advantage, too, politically, as to rock furthering connections in Germany. It would unite the Irish heart to the English throne; and the shamrock of Erin, like the thistle of Scotland, might entwine about the cross of St. George throughout the empire.—But as it will not probably be. A princess who stands nearest the throne of Denmark is expected to be the bride of Queen Victoria's oldest son, though possibly personal happiness may not come to her thereby.

The Princess Royal, Queen Victoria's first born, who is wife of the Prince of Prussia, to whom two children have been born, might have done as well for herself by a marriage in England. Her husband is said to be of dissolute habits—(and that is very probable, since the manner of educating the children tends to it)—and at times to treat her with neglect and cruelty We may make due allowance for the usual of courts; but if this be so it is not the first time it has happened in the same Prussian family.

The third of Queen Victoria's children is the Princess Alice Maud Mary, who is nineteen years old this month, one of the finest girls in Great Britain. She is to be married in June, the Court Journal says, to Prince Louis of Hesse; and here the German comes in again. Hesse is one of those little German Provinces so limited in territory that it would scarcely be noticed if it was attached to some of our Western States, and of such scanty revenues that she may need the annuity of £25,000 per annum that the British Parliament is expected to vote her. Hesse is a nice little estate, however, full of beauty, fashion and intellect; and Prince Louis is no parvenu but proud of a race dating long back, and worthy, we are told, in himself. Princess Alice may, therefore, live more happy than her elder sister who looks to the throne of Prussia, one of the Great Powers. She was the favorite of her father, and like him, is of good heart and cultivated mind.

The above are all of the Queen's children of marriageable age. Prince Alfred "her sailor boy"—Alfred Earnest Albert, comes next. He is eighteen years old, and more active and "clever" than the Prince of Wales. And two other boys and three girls are also younger. The care and solicited of the widowed Queen, for the oldest who is to inherit her place and power, and for the younger, some of them just emerging from infancy, will henceforth weigh heavily upon her, and her future may have shadows mingling with its sunshine, such as her past has not experienced.—Her children may fill a great place in the world's history, and have great influence upon its destiny. Possibly they may become the ruling family of the nations. Should the Prince of Wales so marry as to have controlling influence in Denmark, then at once England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Prussia, Hesse and Denmark in Europe, and India with its 180,000 of people in Asia, and the fifty-seven British colonies scattered over the world, will come within the same circle, and others may be added, when the six children younger than Princess Alice, comes to maturity and seek their places by matrimonial alliances. In both their parents there was prudence and practical good sense, combined with the purest morality. Albert and Victoria were models of discretion and virtue; and should their children be like their father, whom nations lament, or their mother who has won the respect of the world, their chief desire and labor will be to make others, whether superiors, equals or subjects, wiser, better and happier for their having lived.

Population of the World.

The total number of human beings on the earth is now computed in round numbers at one thousand millions. They speak 3,064 now known tongues, and in which upwards of 1,100 religions or creeds are preached. The average age of life is 33½ years. One fourth of the born die before they reach the age of seven years, and the half before the 18th year. Out of 100 persons only 6 reach the age of 60 and upwards, while only one in 1,000 reaches the age of 100 years. Out of 500 only one attains 70 years. Out of the thousand millions living persons 330,000,000 die annually, 91,000 daily, 3,730 every hour, 60 every minute, consequently one every second. The loss is, however, balanced by the gain in new births. Tall men are supposed to live longer than short ones. Women are generally stronger than men until their 30th year, afterwards less so. Marriages are in proportion to single life (bachelors and spinsters) as 100 to 75. Both births and deaths are more frequent in the night than in the day. One-fourth of men are capable of bearing arms, but not one out of 1,000 is by nature inclined for the profession. The state thrives a country in the more full of vigor, life and health are the people. The notion that education enfeebles and degenerates the human frame is not borne out by fact.—Once a Week.

TREATMENT OF EARACHE.—M. Emile Duval, of Lyons, France, says that he has, in person, found relief in severe earache, after other means had been tried in vain, from the use of a mixture of equal parts of chloroform and laudanum; a little being introduced on a piece of cotton. The first effect produced is a sensation of cold; then there is a numbness, followed by a scarcely perceptible pain and refreshing sleep.

TO OUR READERS.

Our readers will perceive that the Examiner appears to-day with a new heading. Having spared neither money nor pains to make our Journal appear respectable, and as it is our aim to make it in reality a good paper, we trust our patrons will appreciate our efforts to please and profit them.

Having also, purchased a large assortment of new, fancy, and ornamental type, we are in a position to do all and every kind of job work. And as our circulation is extending rapidly, our columns afford an excellent medium for advertising. Parties will consult their own advantage by patronising us, and we flatter ourselves that by punctuality, expedition, close attention to business, and moderation in charging, to secure a share of the public patronage.

The Separate School Question.

The introduction of Mr. Scott's new Bill on Separate Schools, has given rise to a deal of discussion both inside and outside of the House.

It is instructive to note the different views entertained upon the merits and demerits of the measure, as well as the manner different individuals reason on the principles involved therein.

We have always looked upon the establishment of Separate Schools in Upper Canada as an excrescence upon our School System, which will eventually destroy it, and every effort put forth like the present to foster its growth, hastens the downfall of the Common School System of Upper Canada. As however it is a part of that system, and as the last amendment of the Separate School Act was the doing of the parties concerned—we were willing to try and get along with it satisfied that the system as a whole is of more injury to the Catholics than to Protestants. The agitation now inaugurated, may possibly do more injury to the promoters of the reform, than any good they may expect from the amendments.—The chief causes of complaint we have heard urged by Catholics to their present Separate School act were, that their Trustees were obliged to make affadavits to their returns, whilst Common School Trustees only signed theirs—a distinction they deemed invidious and unfair. The other source of complaint was the annoyance of Catholics yearly not fying the Clerk of the municipality wherein a Separate School exists, of being supporters of such school, so as to secure their exemption from payment for Common School purposes. Mr. Scott's bill seeks to remedy these objections by repealing the first, and substituting the Trustees to notify the Clerk in place of the individuals themselves, after the first notification. While advocating even handed justice to all classes of the community, and equal civil and religious equality, we have always considered the granting of Separate Schools to Catholics, whilst they are denied to others, as more than fair—a concession to them that is equally due to others, and which if granted would assuredly shatter our boasted system to atoms.

It is then a privilege enjoyed by Catholics not enjoyed by others, and it is not unreasonable if they have to do a little more than others for that privilege. We do not state this to throw obstacles in the way to remove any disability Catholics may labor under—all we intend by it is to show them that they have really little if any thing to complain of. It is very easy to get up an excitement upon any fancied grievance, and expend a vast amount of buckum and virtuous indignation against the opponents of a cherished measure, but is it honest or fair to complain, when there is no just ground of complaint? We readily admit that there are many who oppose Separate Schools merely because Catholics have them, we need scarcely say with such we have no sympathy. In this free country Catholics and Protestants stand upon a level. Time was when a part of the Protestants claimed superior rights to all others, a thirty years struggle in which the Catholics joined ended in establishing the heaven born principle of religious equality and having it engrafted in our constitution. In that struggle Protestants and Catholics contended side by side, and it is anomalous that the latter should seek now an exemption, not claimed nor asked for by the others. Our opposition therefore to Separate Schools has always been from principle, and we should not have spoken now upon the matter but for the discussion going on in reference to the proposed bill. We were somewhat surprised to see it made by some of our contemporaries on this engrossing question, that Mr. Scott, in one of them, the Morning Herald, in a paragraph headed "Intolerance" remarked:

"The age of bigotry and intolerance is rapidly passing away in the Halls of our Legislature. During the debate on the Separate School bill of Mr. Scott, a number of Members expressed themselves in a liberal and tolerant manner, quite different from what they were wont to do on like occasions. We feel gratified to observe that Mr. Scott has at last discovered the amenity of the Opposition in matters affecting the interests of his co-religionists."

The part which struck us as being rich was the pleasure enjoyed by the writer "that Mr. McGee had at last discovered the amenity of the Opposition in matters affecting the interests of his co-religionists." Mr. McGee is neither so verdant nor so "intolerant" as the author of the above little piece of libel. No man knows the principles of the opposition as a body better than does Mr. McGee. He has identified himself with them from principle, and he knows full well that tolerance and civil and religious liberty and equality are fundamental principles in their creed. That the bigoty and intolerance so frequently charged upon them by the party to which the Morning Herald belongs are as false as they are foul—that with all their faults the body of men composing the Parliamentary Opposition are as free from such charges as any other men. Mr. McGee has studied history too well not to know that the party he is politically opposed to have been noted for their intolerance, not only to Catholics but to their fellow Protestants who happened to be non cons. It was this party chiefly who opposed the granting of the rights of Catholics which was yielded in 1829. It was the same party that was the cause of our rebellion in '37—that grasped at all the emoluments in the country—that openly and unblushingly claimed the seventh of all the land in the country for one denomination of Christians, and when efforts were put forth to rectify such monstrous inequality and injustice we were branded as "pharisaical brawlers," and our efforts as marriage. And although Mr. McGee affected to see a similarity between Separate Schools and Catholic emancipation, we cannot help thinking that his speech on the debate on Separate Schools was intended more for outside the house than in.

To us there appears no analogy between the two cases—one was an effort to place a body of the people of one religious denomination merely on a level with all other denominations, and to remove actual disabilities, the other is an effort to give that very denomination of people an advantage possessed by no others—and even men of Mr. McGee's weight and influence will be at fault when talking of "equal rights and privileges," and denouncing the conscientious opposers of Separate Schools as "enemies of religious freedom." The fact is the debate was not upon the expediency or inexpediency of Separate Schools, that has been settled so far as the school law is concerned, but simply upon the expediency of making the law as it stood more agreeable to the parties it affected, and there is no doubt the large vote for the second reading of Mr. Scott's Bill was to this end, not that it was affirming the principle or otherwise on which these schools exist. We trust however that the Bill in Committee will be shorn of its objectionable clauses, and that when amended it will not cause a just ground of complaint to those who disapprove of their establishment.

More Taxes—the beginning of the End.

In Mr. Galt's new Budget we have something like a confession that the reign of extravagance is about to collapse—that the system of borrowing a few millions of dollars yearly, to meet the annual expenditure of the government is nearly played out.

To meet the estimated expenditure of over twelve and a half million dollars for 1862, additional, and very oppressive, new taxes are proposed; and yet these, heavy and oppressive as they are, will only yield enough, according to Mr. Galt's own estimate, to bring the yearly revenue up to two thirds of the estimated expenditure. The one third deficient Mr. Galt proposes to raise in Canada by the issue of Provincial Debentures, to the amount of four million dollars, bearing interest at five per cent.

Mr. Galt and his colleagues by their reckless and wasteful management, have brought the financial affairs of the country into such a state that the heaviest taxation he can venture to propose is utterly inadequate to meet the ordinary expenditure. No less than a third of the amount must be borrowed, and the attempt to raise the amount in Canada where money is scarce, and the rate of interest consequently high, is, in our estimation, equivalent to an admission that English capitalists are not disposed to make further advances to the Canadian Government. If capitalists at a distance who know comparatively little of the recklessness of the present Government are thus chary, there is little prospect that those who are well aware of it will be inclined to lend; and the borrowing part of Mr. Galt's scheme may therefore be safely predicted to fail, so that one third of the ordinary expenditure for the present year is virtually unprovided for.

But even were it possible to obtain this new loan of four million dollars, how and when is it to be repaid? If the ordinary revenue of the country increased by hitherto unexampled taxation is only sufficient to pay two-thirds of the ordinary expenditure this year what chance is there that things will be better next year? And if not better, they must of necessity be worse. If the four millions are not obtained by Mr. Galt, the exchequer by the end of the year will be bankrupt. Should the loan be obtained the interest on it will require to be provided for next year, and thus an additional item of two hundred thousand dollars independant of next year's deficiency would be found in the budget for 1863.

From whatever point of view we regard the present budget, we cannot avoid the conclusion that the financial affairs of Canada have come to a crisis, and that nothing short of an immediate reduction of the ordinary expenditure will save the country from absolute bankruptcy. A deficiency for five years in succession, and amounting to from a fourth to one half of the yearly income would damage the credit of any country; and not only damage the credit of a country like Canada but will, when known abroad, prevent immigration, which is our greatest want. Heavy taxation will soon make immigrants cease to think of making this country their home.

And the new taxes proposed are chiefly on what we may regard as the absolute necessaries of life. Tea, sugar, coffee and molasses will bear a heavy share of the new tax will amount to about one shilling on every pound of tea; on sugar the tax will be about one-third of the price of every pound; on coffee the new duty will amount to about twenty-five per cent; and the duty of three cents a pound on molasses will more than double the price of the article.

The duties on these are we believe higher than under the British tariff, and the articles we have mentioned are only four taken at random from a numerous list, all heavily taxed.

Besides the proposed increase in customs and excise duties a species of direct taxation is introduced for the first time in Canada. Bank cheques, bills, promissory notes and receipts for sums over £5 are all to be subject to a stamp duty, and telegraph messages, even, are to be taxed three cents apiece. There are to be stamp duties on conveyances of land and on investments generally.

In short, with no legitimate cause for increased ordinary expenditure Mr. Galt proposes a system of taxation unparalelled in a new country, and only rendered necessary by the most reckless mismanagement, and keeping up an unnecessarily extravagant expenditure. In every county, and in almost every town in the Province, are to be found useless offices—and useless officials to fill them—created to reward political partisans. Every year and every election adds to the number of these sinecures. We could refer to more than one of those, recently made in this county where the parties have for some time been in receipt of pay without as yet having done anything to earn it. With numerous similar items of expense little wonder that new taxes are proposed.

We are surprised at the apathy which has permitted an unprincipled and corrupt government to exist so long, but our astonishment will be great indeed if the Canadian people quietly submit to the imposition of the new taxes proposed. If their representatives are true to themselves and their constituents they will insist on the inauguration of a new order of things by turning out the present men and placing others in their stead who will bring the expenditure within the income. With the present men there is no chance.

The habit of spending beyond the revenue has become with them a sort of second nature, and we might as well expect to pick grapes from thistles as to hope for retrenchment and economy from them.

Bills before the House.

We observe that Mr. Langevin's Bill on Interest has been remodelled and submitted in quite a new shape. It is less exceptional than before, but we are still in favour of free trade in money and prefer the law as it now stands.

Mr. Tett has introduced a Bill to alter the time for completing the Lists of Voters for members of the Legislature, confining the time for their completion to fifteen days after the Assessment Rolls are fully revised and corrected. It appears to us that it would have been better to have fixed a day, and to state that an election held before or after such a day, what Lists are to be used.

There are two members of our Legislature who have severally brought in bills to repeal the act restricting the issuing of tavern licenses, as far as two small villages, which they represent are concerned. Mr. Harcourt wants more tavern licenses to issue in the village of Cayuga, and Mr. Street more for the Village of Welland.—Both villages have by the Provincial census less than 800 inhabitants, and Mr. Harcourt finds three taverns too few for his village, and Mr. Street finds two too few for his. In like manner it is found that fifteen taverns are too few for the Town of Peterborough, and we should request our member to put in a Bill to exempt our Town from the operations of the Act. This class or local legislation is hateful. The Bill referred to does not answer the end for which it was intended, and we are disposed to think the members would have shown more good sense and patriotism had they moved for its repeal if they moved at all.

We observe that our worthy Member has given notice of a Bill for closing the canals on the Lord's Day, and for prohibiting the running of Trains on Railways, and the departure of Steamers and other vessels from Port on that day.

Our Lumber Business.

Within a short period our Town has presented its wonted activity in the movement of Lumber. Teams are observable at every thoroughfare engaged in drawing sawed lumber from the mills. Parties are busy loading cars, and two locomotives leave for Port Hope daily, hauling away our staple product. We are pleased to notice that a fair demand exists for the produce of our saw mills, and owners are likely to realize a fair return for their labor. We wish them all and more than they expect. The river too is used for transporting square timber. Within a week past a large number of cribs have descended, and we may expect, for some time to come, busy times with the hardy lumbermen. We regret to learn that several concerns are "stuck," that is, parties having timber to bring down creeks owing to the sudden fall of the water, their timber must be left behind for this season. A serious mishap for those concerned. The river appears to be in a good state for running cribs just now, but those having to use it must hurry on as the water is falling. We learn that there is an average quantity got out this year. The low prices of supplies and labor, inducing manufacturers to extend their operations.

Communications from "An Observer" and "Visitor," are unavoidably crowded out, but will appear next week.

☞ An Extra of the Review issued on Tuesday evening, announced that the Ministry were defeated on the Militia Bill by a majority of seven votes, and that there was a probability of their resignation. This is not to be wondered at as a crisis has been imminent for some time past. The Governor General has appeared anxious about the fate of the Militia Bill.

It is surely high time for the men who so long have misruled us and have been driving us into bankruptcy to resign—men who are introducing the odious stamp duties that created such a sensation in the Colonies in 1776.

LAND SALE.—Mr. Henthorn's sale of valuable property at the South end of the Town, takes place on Saturday next, (Queen's Birth-day) at 2 o'clock, p. m., on the premises. Intending purchasers will do well to bear this sale in mind, as the lots to be sold are in the pleasantest locality round Peterboro for private residences, the terms are moderate.

THE WEATHER the latter part of last week was hot enough for June. On Sunday the heat was oppressive, but on Monday it was cold enough for a March day. The wind was high, and a hard frost was expected on Monday night—but if any its effects were not visible. As we go to press it rains heavy.

The "Sons of Temperance" of Peterboro', have arranged to have one column each week in the Examiner, to be devoted exclusively to the temperance cause. It will be found on the first page under their seal.

We are sorry that in the bustle of setting up our last issue, being somewhat behind, we overlooked, till too late, the speech of Colonel Haultain at the discussion on the Militia Bill. We regret the delay, and apologize for it; it was quite an oversight on our part, and trust the like shall not occur again.

Col. Haultaine thought the House was indebted to the member for Peel, speaking as that hon. gentlemen did from the other side of the House, for the way in which he had insisted on the Government distinctly submitting their plan. He (Col. Haultaine) felt that the House had good reason to be dissatisfied with the manner in which the measure had been submitted. He held it to be impossible to determine upon any organization, until they knew the number of men required. The nature of the organization must depend upon the number of men. (Hear, hear.) But they had found it impossible to obtain any knowledge of this from the Government. They were told—if the country was in a state of war, we should require so many—if in a state of peace, we would not require more than 30,000—in other circumstances, perhaps only 10,000. He thought they were entitled to have had something more definite on this subject. The Commissioners recommended "the organization of an active force amounting to about 50,000 men of all arms, with a reserve of the same number," but they added that "even this number of men would be insufficient, without the co-operation of a strong body of regular troops, and a powerful fleet of gunboats on the lakes." If this meant anything at all, it meant that the Government, three of whom were members of the Commission, recommended, through this report, the present organization of 50,000 men. (Hear, hear.) Why then did they refuse to state the number to-night? The nature of any organization to be adopted, must depend on the means of the Province to provide it, and the number of men required. And how was the House to have information on these essential points, except through the Government? But it appeared that the Government themselves had formed no estimate, which they were prepared to submit to the House. This was too great a subject to be trifled with in this way. (Hear, hear.) He had seen ten times more animation displayed when the question of an unfortunate deputy returning officer who happened to vote against the Prime Minister was before the House—[laughter]—and he must say he had been very much surprised at the extraordinarily inanimate manner in which this debate had been carried on. [Hear, hear.] In dealing with this question we had to remember the very altered circumstances in which we now find our neighbors in the United States. Eighteen months ago their regular force amounted to something like 15,000 men. We felt ourselves then safe from attack, and had been in that condition for many years. Our fortifications had been dismantled. We had almost no troops in the country, and did not conceive there was a necessity for any. We were with our neighbours almost as one country. But how different the position now. The North and the South between them had a million and a half of soldiers, learning war in that best of all schools, the school of actual warfare. [Hear, hear.] The dispute might perhaps be settled within a few months, and they would then have at least 400,000 well trained men to dispose of. We know too from the public press that there was now on the other side a strong feeling of animosity towards this country. We knew too what after the Mexican war were the fillibustering tendencies of our neighbours. We all knew the repeated attempts which Walker and his fillbusters made against friendly nations. And who could tell what danger we might be in from the disbanding of these 400,000 men, now trained to the use of arms, parties of whom, imbued with animosity against this country, might in spite of all the efforts of the Government of the United States, make descents upon our frontier of a thousand miles open at any point to attack. There was no man in this Province more anxious than he was, to maintain friendly relations with the neighbouring nation, and he earnestly trusted never to see the dreadful calamity of a hostile collision with them. At the same time one means of averting such a calamity was to be prepared for it, and it would have given him exceeding pleasure to have heard from the Government something more definite than they had proposed, something that would have been adapted to the actual circumstances of our position. (Hear, hear.)

TO CURE DIPTHERIA.—A gentleman, who has administered the following remedy for diptheria, informs us that it has always proved effectual in affording speedy relief. Take a common tobacco pipe, place a live coal within the bowl, drop a little tar upon the coal, and let the patient draw smoke into the mouth and discharge it through the nostrils. The remedy is safe and simple, and should be tried whenever occasion may require it. Many valuable lives may be saved, our informant confidently believes, by prompt treatment as above.

Death of W. B. Lindsay, Esq.

We regret that we have to announce the death of an old and respected public servant, known to every visitor of the Canadian Parliament during nearly half a century—Mr. Lindsay, the Clerk of the House of Assembly. A telegram from Quebec has given us the painful intelligence that he died early on Wednesday morning. His disease, indeed, had led his family to anticipate the result; for a cancer in the throat, which his physican from the commencement had pronounced incurrable, had made such progress that it was with difficulty he could take the aliment necessary to sustain life; while the terrible pain which opiates could not subdue, prevented sleep, and acutely taxed the strength of a shattered frame. The end foreseen from the commencement was consummated yesterday.

Mr. Lindsay belonged to one of the oldest English families in Quebec; he was also related by marriage to most of the old French-Canadian families. His father, William Lindsay, filled the situation of Clerk Assistant and Clerk of the Lower Canadian House of Assembly from 1792—the date of the commencement of the Constitutional Act, until his demise in 1840—a period of thirty-eight years. On his death, his son, who had been an assistant to his father, the subject of these few remarks, was appointed to the same office; and when the Union of the provinces merged the two Provincial Parliaments into the existing House of Assembly, he was continued in the appointment which he held to his death. No one indeed could be better fitted for his part. Courteous, with a disciplined capacity, an accomplished French scholar, simple and unpretentious in his tastes and habits, methodical, with a memory which not even sickness could warp and shake—the duties of his office were carried on with the most perfect routine and to the satisfaction of all brought in contact with him. We believe Mr. Lindsay was in his fifty-fifth year of service, and hence three generations have been accustomed to look on his well-known face; indeed until lately his figure seemed a necessary part of Parliamentary life. He has now forever disappeared from the scene on which he lived with so much credit. The Parliamentary report informs us that on the news of his decease being announced to the House, the Premier moved an adjournment, as a mark of respect to his memory, paying a graceful tribute to his long service, and to his useful life—a motion which was carried unanimously, and seldom has a vote been more justified by public opinion.

Mr. Lindsay leaves a numerous family, the eldest of whom is the present Clerk assistant. No one will be more mourned by a large circle of private friends. Indeed his genial nature and kindness of manner, were peculiarly fitted to gather round him pleasant associations. To the high breeding of the past generation, which may admire rather than imitate. And his natural character, equally with his position led him to avoid the coteries and intrigues which seem destined always to cluster round the Government House—wherever its longitude. His heart was in the performance of his duty, and had Mr. Lindsay an enemy, which his gentle nature made an impossibility—ered such a one, had he existed, must have borne testimony that this duty was loyalty and ably performed. We are quite sure that many in Toronto will hear of his death with no little pain.—Leader.

The Bakruptcy Bill.

This measure is to be considered at the Board of Trade meeting to day, and it is hoped that the attendance will be large enough to make whatever resolutions may be adopted, an unquestionable expression of the mercantile opinion in the premises.

Although the opponents of the Bill differ materially in the course by which they arrive at their conclusions, they are unanimous in their condemnation of it. Some are opposed to any Bankrupt Law or other legislation which interfers between debtor and creditor, impairs the recourse of the latter, and discharges the former without his consent. Some are willing to accept a measure which shall, while it relieves the honest debtor, improve the recourse of the creditor against his estate, and punish frauds, but contend that its application should be limited to debts contracted after its passage only; and that obligations created on the faith of the non-existence, of a Bankrupt Law ought not to be impaired or swept away by it. Again another class favorable to additional legislation,urge that this should not be of a sectional character, and that in the peculiar business relations between Canada East and West, the one being almost invariably debtor and the other creditor, it is a mockery to call that a Bankrupt Law for one section of the Province which will deal in the largest degree with the property of the other. And finally there is another class which contends that superior to all other objections is the fact that the proposed measure, is cumbrous, involved, inordinately expensive, and totally unsuited for the country, and the class of estates with which it will have chiefly to deal.

It is hardly necessary for us at this day to repeat that we are totally opposed to a Bankruptcy Law, as unnecessary, immoral, and an unconstitutional exercise of legislative authority to impair the validity of existing contracts,and to destroy private property without compensation. Such legislation is at the present time uncalled for and inopportune; the agitation which existed on the subject has gradually died away; and there is no little desire for it even in Canada West, that we doubt whether there is now before the Legislature a single petition in its favor. The American troubles and the consequent low prices of produce have injuriously affected business; country traders without being seriously involved as they have been at other times by rash speculations or wild trading, are behind hand in their payments, unable to make collections and realize stocks, and the passage of a bankrupt Law would be the signal for hundreds who are not positively insolvent to escape from their obligations, and the burden of labor and economy necessary to retrieve their position; and thus throw upon their creditors the load they ought to bear themselves.

In this country credit is given rather to energy and business capability than to capital the debtor knowing that there are no means by which he can prematurely escape the loss which his creditor has upon him has a strong inducement to honesty and carefulness in his transactions, which would be swept away if he had only to invoke a Bankruptcy law to purge him in all his liabilities, and leave him free to commence once more with experience earned at the cost of his creditors, and probably with assets purchased at his own valuation.

The proposed law recognises the inviolability of judgments, chattle mortgages and a large class of obligations created before its passage, which may be in form but are not in fact more odious in their character than common debts on notes or account, which ought on every consideration of morality, and regard for vested rights to be placed in the same category.

We recognise the right of the Legislature which creates the remedies for debts, and the machinery by which they are enforced, to place in the public interest, what limit it pleases to legal resource—to say what debts shall be recovered at law, and when, and how; but the exercise of this right is constitutional only when it precedes the debt which is affected by it; and it is just as much confiscation for it to declare that Bankruptcy shall relieve my debtor from the full satisfaction of his debt to me without my consent, the obligation having been incurred before the enactment which take away the remedy, as it would be to declare that judgments affecting lands shall be void, or that mortgages shall rank from the last to the first instead of from the first to the last, in defiance of law under which those obligations was created.

It is unquestionably true that the law of debtor and creditor in both sections of the Province is disgracefully defective, and inefficient; that it sanctions gross frauds; encourages and creates a low standard of commercial integrity, and offers few inducements to men in business to imitate the traditional integrity of the rapidly becoming fabulous British merchant. But it is no remedy for the evil state of things to create a gulf into which insolvent estates are to be thrown and churned by a ponderous machine which will give the butter to the lawyers, and the sour churned milk to the creditors. If spoliation is to continue to be the rule, it may as well be spoliation which the law allows but does not sanction,as spoliation which it sanctions and calls a benefit.

The proposed Bill is in all its more important features the imperial Bankruptcy Act now in operation in England; it has been on trial only for a short time, and its fitness for the country is yet an unproved proposition; while it is quite possible for it to be excellently adopted for England, and at the same time to be in the last degree unsuitable for Canada. It was intended to amend a system most confessedly the worst ever created by legislation; here it will create that which did not exist before.

Bankruptcy laws had their origin in the fact that insolvency was formerly created as a crime; the creditor had absolute power not only over the estate but the body of the debtor; he could imprison him while he lived, and seize his body when dead. To mitigate the rigour of this power a means was devised by which the debtor was compelled to make a full disclosure and surrender of his estate for equal distribution among his creditors, and in return he was relieved from imprisonment at the will of his creditor, and obtain a discharge. It was enacted in mercy and in justice, improving the position of both parties. But here of late years not only the law but its omissions and evasions have all been favorable to the debtor alone; if he has failed to confiscate the property of his creditors by a marriage settlement based on what he intends to owe, there was a partnership or a seperation des biens open to him by which to effect the same object; the law tender of his person abolished imprisonment for debt, and gave him a large margin of goods exempt from seizure; and now with her eyes dropping pity for his woes, it seeks to enunciate the doctrine that honest payment of honest debts is a burden too heavy for suffering indebtedness to bear, and that it should be avoided by a process which purges the debtor at the cost and charges of his creditor, which is precisely as equitable as it would be to make the successful complainant in a criminal prosecution undergo the punishment adjudged against the convict.

What is wanted is not a Bankrupt Bill, not a measure to swallow up estates in costs and feed shoals of needy lawyers, not a measure like this which confiscates the property of the traders in one section of the Province to foster the recklessness, and extravagance, and encourage the frauds of traders in the other section, but a cheap, rapid, and equitable means of enforcing the fulfilment, and penalty of contracts according to their true intentent on both sections of the Province; a law which shall recognise the fact that the property of an insolvent is a trust in his hands for the benefit of his creditors, and which shall not enable them when he ceases to administer it for their interests to take possession of it, and administer it for themselves; a law which shall make what is fraud in fact fraud in law, and punish it as it deserves; so that the man who under cover of some legal pretence robs his creditors of thousands, and retires to luxuries ease upon the plunder shall not escape the Penitentiary which yawns inevitable for the hungry wretch who filches sixpence worth from the clothes line to avoid starvation.—Commercial Advertiser.

The Walton Slate Quarries.

The slates from these quarries is now being a good deal used. We find in the catalogue of Economic Minerals prepared for the Exhibition in London, the following with regard to them:—

"The quarry has now been in operation since the spring of 1861, 2,000 squares have been sold, and some of the slate have been sent to a distance of 350 miles from the quarry; a quantity of them having been purchased for Sarnia on the river St. Clair. To show that the slate, as a covering, is well adapted to resist the influences of a Canadian climate, it may be here stated that slates from Algiers in France, have been exposed on the roof of the Seminary building on the corner of Notre Dame and St. Francois Xavier Streets, in Montreal, for upwards of 100 years, without any perceptible deterioration. The strong resemblance between these and the slates of Melbourne, as those from Beagor in Wales may be seen in the following comparative analyses by Mr. T. Sterry Hunt:—

	Welsh.	French.	Melbourne.
Silica,	60.50	57.00	64.20
Alumina,	19.70	20.10	16. 8
Protoxyd of iron	7.83	10.98	4.23
Lime,	1.12	1.23	0.73
Magnesia,	2.20	3.39	3.36
Potash,	2.18	1.73	3.26
Soda,	2.20	1.30	3.07
Water,	3.30	4.40	3.40
	100.03	100.13	99.63

"The proximity of the serpentine leaves no doubt as to the geological horizon of these slates—Quebec group, Lower Silurian."

With regard to the prices of these slates we find the following in a letter addressed by Mr. Walton to the Richmond Guardian:—

"The prices at the Quarries are from $2.00 to $3.60 per square, cash within 30 days; that is for such a quantity of slate as will cover 100 superficial feet laid on the roof, being calculated so as to give 3 inches double lap. The cost of this slate delivered along the lines of Railway thro' Canada, and by water from Montreal and Chicago, freight included, will vary from $2.35 to $3.62 for the smallest-size slate; up to $3.92 to $5.10 for the largest sizes per square; as per circular of prices published and circulated for the present year."

Lord North, who detested music, was asked to subscribe to the ancient concert. He refused. 'But your Lordship's brother, the Bishop of Winchester, subscribes,' urged the applicant. "If I were as deaf as he, I would subscribe too, was the reply.

The way New Orleans was Taken.

U. S. FLAG SHIP "HARTFORD,"
Off New Orleans, April 26.

To his Excellency the Mayor of the City of New Orleans:

SIR,—Upon my arrival before your city, I had the honor to send to your honor Capt. Bailey, U. S. N., second in command of the expedition, to demand of you the surrender of New Orleans to me, as the representative of the Government of the United States. Capt. Bailey reported the result of an interview with you and the military authorities. It must occur to your honor that it is not within the province of a naval officer to assume the duties of a military commandant. I came here to reduce New Orleans to obedience to the laws of, and to vindicate the offended majesty of the Government of the United States. The rights of persons and property shall be secured. I therfore demand of you, as its representative, the unqualified surrender of the city, and that the emblem of the sovereignity of the United States be hoisted over the city hall, mint and custom house, by meridian this day, and all flags and other emblems of sovereignity, other than those of the United States be removed from all the public buildings by that hour.

I particularly request that you shall exercise your authority to quell disturbances, restore order, and call upon the good people of New Orleans to return at once to their avocations, and I particularly demand that no persons shall be molested in person or property for sentiments of loyalty to their government.

I shall speedily and severely punish any person or persons that shall commit such outrages as were witnessed yesterday, by armed men firing upon helpless women and children for giving expression to their pleasure at witnessing the old flag.

I am, very respectfully,
D. G. FARRAGUT.
Flag Officer, Western Gulf Squadron,

Mayor's Office, City of New Orleans,
City Hall, April 26, 1862.

To Flag Officer D. G. Farragut:

SIR,—In pursuance of a resolution which we thought proper to take out of regard for the lives of the women and children who still crowd the metropolis, Gen. Lovell has evacuated it with his troops and restored back to me the administration of its government and the custody of its honor. I have in council with the city fathers, considered the demand you made of me yesterday of our unconditional surreder of the city, coupled with a requisition to hoist the flag of the United States on the public edifices, and haul down the flag that still floats upon the breeze from the dome of this hall. It becomes my duty to transmit an answer which is the universal sentiments of my constituents no less than the prompting of my own heart which dictates to me on this sad and solemn occasion.

The city is without the means of defence and is utterly destitute to the force and material that might enable it to resist the overpowering armament deployed in sight of it.

I am no military man and possess no authority beyond that of executing the municipal laws of the city of New Orleans. It would be presumptuous in me to attempt to lead an army into the field, even if I had one to command, and I know still less how to surrender an undefended place, held as this is at the mercy of your gunners and your mortars.

To surrender such a place, were an idle and unmeaning ceremony. The city is yours by the power of brutel force, not by choice or the consent of its inhabitants. It is for you to determine what will be the fate that awaits it. As to hoisting any flag other than that of our adoption and allegiance, let me say to you that the man lives not in our midst whose hand and heart would not be paralyzed at the mere thought of such an act, nor could I find in my entire constituency so desperate and wretched a renegade as would dare to profane with his own hands the sacred emblem of our aspirations.

Sir, you have manifested sentiments which would become one engaged in a better cause than that to which you have devoted your sword. I doubt not they spring from a noble though deluded nature, and I know how to appreciate the emotions which inspired them. You have a gallant people to administrate during your occupancy of this city, a people sensitive to all that can in the least affect their dignity and self-respect.

Pray Sir, do not fail to regard their susceptibilities. The obligation which I shall assume in their name will be religiously complied with. You may trust their honor though you might not count on their submission to the unmerited wrong.

In conclusion, I beg you to understand that the people of New Orleans, while unable to resist your force, do not allow themselves to be insulted by the interference of such as have rendered themselves odious and contemptible by their dasterdly desertion of our cause in the mighty struggle in which we are engaged, or such as might remind them too forcibly that they are the conquered and you the conquerors.

Peace and order may be preserved without resort to measures which I could not at this moment prevent. Your occupying the city does not transfer allegiance from the Government of their choice to one which they have repudiated, and that they yield the obedience which the conqueror is entitled to extort from the conquered.

Respectfully,
JOHN F. MONROE
Mayor.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR.—Having read an article in last week's Review, purporting to take notice of a meeting of our Field Battery; I beg to state for the information of the public and those members not present at the that meeting, that the statements made in the Review, ARE NOT TRUE, so very far indeed from being so, that the third resolution which the Review says was carried, was never moved, never seconded, and consequently could not be carried; this is a fact and a hard fact, which all present at meeting well know, and which itself proves that the author of that article is guilty of a gross misrepresentation, a studied falsehood, and that he well knew before writing it. The whole production is on void of truth and contemptible, and so characteristic of the author, that if once stamps him as one, who at a former meeting when holding office in our Company, displayed such a total incapability to report truthfully the minutes of a similar meeting, as to meet with the deserved scorn of the whole company, and which this latter outswing still more forcibly itself.

This officious intermeddling is resolved for less unfavorable when we (I) know) that no difficulty had ever been experienced in getting subscriptions from the men, but the contrary when the amount of the monthly subscription was raised by the committee at 20 cents, but left to the company to decide whether the sum was to be less or more, they at once raised the sum to 25 cents, and some even said fifty, and that our modern Vulcan knows full well. Let him remember that the first principle instilled into the youngest pupils in those "small Scotch Universities which get on by degrees," is a love of truth which our Vulcan seems perfectly innocent of. In writing thus I am sure I express the sentiments of the whole company (except himself), and as a lover of fair play and honour, I crave space for this in your next issue.

A NEW STORY
IN THE
SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:
A FIRST-CLASS
INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 8th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled

DELLBURN HOUSE,
A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1708.
BY THE AUTHOR OF
"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers.

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the British people and their families from all parts of the old country resident on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its News and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal, and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspaper. Another most important feature of the journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATING POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,766 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the Kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 18s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amounts of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement shewing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies issued.	No. of Policies issued.	No. of Policies lapsed.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.

L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.

IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the bedding is of a great expense, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRESSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION may be the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

MATHEWS' VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE.

THIS CELEBRATED DYE WAS FIRST prepared in 1845; since that time it has been used by thousands, and in not instance has it failed to give perfect satisfaction.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the cheapest in the world. Its price is only 50 cents, a small bottle contains double the quantity of dye contained in those usually sold for one dollar.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the safest composition of its class. It is warranted not to injure the hair, or the scalp, in the slightest degree.

THE VENETIAN DYE

works with rapidity and certainty. It causes no annoyance or trouble to those who use it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

produces any shade that may be desired—one that will not fade, crock, nor wash out; one that is as permanent as the hair itself.

THE VENETIAN DYE

does not, in any manner, interfere with the natural softness of the hair; it neither scorches nor dries it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the least, cheapest safest, most convenient, most successful, and most permanent Dye ever used.

THE VENETIAN DYE

having gained an extended reputation, the public are cautioned against purchasing any prepared in the same style, under the name or different name, as they are mere imitations, and liable to do injury.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to the large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, PALPITATION, FEMALE WEAKNESS, AND ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will we found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year, and by the exclusion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this, expect to be relieved from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions if not assisted to do so through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even when no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with the pabulum of life discontaminated, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, latter and painful disappointment has followed the use of various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall receive the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have gr ed for believing it has virtues which are to entitle by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy must be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

THE FOUND WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING.

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, the above has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE SEAT OF THE AILMENT, ARRESTS IT, EXHAUSTS, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the cad desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

PROSPECTUS OF THE "Scottish American Journal,"

A FIRST CLASS FAMILY NEWSPAPER

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF SCOTCHMEN IN AMERICA, AND TO THE DISSEMINATION OF SCOTTISH LITERATURE AND NEWS.

FIFTH YEAR.

ON January 2nd 1863, was commenced a new volume of the Scottish American Journal, and in future the numbers issued between the first and last days of each year will constitute a complete volume, of convenient size for binding; and each number will contain a most entertaining and instructive repertory of reading matter, calculated to interest all readers of British origin. The Scottish American Journal, though decidedly international in its constant efforts to promote peace and prosperity between the people of Great Britain and America, is yet emphatically Scottish in its copious records of all events occurring in Scotland that can be regarded of the least interest to natives of that country residing in America; and to this "news from home" is added, weekly a summary of general intelligence from England, Ireland, and other parts of the world.

A distinguishing feature of the Scottish American Journal is its regular re-publication—verbatim et literatim—of the "leading articles" of the two most British newspapers and other periodicals upon the most important topics of the day. This feature is a unique one, and has been found very acceptable to the people of British North America, as it supplies a long needed desideratum in the Provinces. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from our columns and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper published in America. A copious weekly summary is also given of the principal items of American news, and a similar narration of events transpiring in the various British Provinces, the latter feature supplying a deficiency which exists in regard to the [illegible] of Canada, as to what Perth transpiring in other parts of the British possessions.

In the forthcoming volume of the Scottish American Journal increased space will be devoted to the literary department in the publication of stories, tales and sketches, vividly illustrating the customs, habits, sentiments and general characteristics of the people of Scotland and their descendants in America.

[illegible] will be devoted to the publication of original poetry, composed by writers of acknowledged genius and purity of thought, resident here or abroad. The first number of the new volume contained the commencement of a deeply interesting tale, entitled

THE LIEUTENANT & HIS SON.

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and will be accompanied by all classes of readers.

JUDSON'S

Mountain Herb Pills.

ABOVE, we present you with a perfect likeness of Tecumseh, chief of the tribes of the strongest Indian Nation that ever roamed America. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlets and Almanacs—to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in this country, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "MOUNTAIN HERB PILLS" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanacs and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any disease or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once disputing in every organ of the body. Never were Herb Life pills, and all the vital organs quickly sympathize. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter, hence a [illegible] cough, all from a slight impurity at the foundation of life—the Blood! As for those terrible diseases, such, for instance, as a sore spring, from which runs a [illegible] matter, it is but a natural effort of the stream [illegible] disturbed and disordered. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lungs or [illegible] soon shut off.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the membranes of the body; they are, therefore, invaluable as a

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Poetry.

For the Examiner.

Adieu to Canada.

Adieu the land where'er I roam,
For mine and me full many a joy,
Adieu a season, fond adieu,
My prayer is heartfelt, no alloy.

Though from thy shores a while I stay
And from thy woods a while to roam,
Back to thy bosom I will fly
And shelter seek in home, sweet home.

What though I look with wond'ring sight
On castles gay and mansions grand,
All these will vanish when I think
Of thee my loved, my foster land.

Thy brawny forests, plenteous fields
For me all fonder charms afford.
Than all the glitt'ring pomp of State.
Or all that pride and wealth accord

Can I forget thee where I go?
Go ask the forest turtle dove,
It forgets its chosen mate
Or e'er forgets I'm plighted love.

No! love of Home, and love of Truth,
The Heavenliest passions of the soul,
The guide of men, the hope of youth,
Till time shall cease its course to roll.

Be these the objects of my soul,
Above all other loves to stand.
Till life's short journey shall be o'er,
Faith points us to a Better Land.

Adieu again, my heart is loath
To say forever, that cannot be,
Only a season, then once more
To be again with thine and thee.

Miscellaneous.

The "Emile St. Pierre."

The British have found a Captain Wilkes in the person of a Captain Wilson, who, after having been captured in his ship, the Emile St. Pierre, by the United States steamer James Adger, as he was attempting to run the blockade at Charleston, recaptured his vessel from the Lieutenant and fifteen men who constituted the prize crew, and then, with the assistance of his cook and steward, navigated his vessel into Liverpool. Now, there is a glorious opportunity for the expression of approval by the British Parliament—for addresses of admiration, and for the presentation of gold swords, and caps and feathers, and cups and saucers to Captain Wilson, who has apparently made himself as intimately acquainted as Captain Wilkes with the Law of Nations and Maritime War and is evidently almost as ignorant, after all his study, as the American hero. Here is the statement of Captain Wilson, whose daring, if not so remarkable as the bravery of Captain Wilkes in the case of Messrs. Mason and Slidell, is, nevertheless, an instance of skill, courage, and success seldom surpassed:

"The captain states that the moment he was aware of the intention of leaving him on board the Emile St. Pierre, he came to the determination that the vessel should not be taken to Philadelphia, and re-sived that he would re-capture her, if practicable and bring her into a British port. He inquired of the cook and steward whether they would assist him in his efforts to take her; one of them at once consented to do so, but the other deliberated upon his conduct. Afterward, however, he also agreed to assist the master. The captain turned over in his mind the best means of effecting his object, and soon came to a conclusion as to the best mode to be adopted in the emergency. The prize master's mate was asleep in the cabin on the morning of the second day after the capture: and he, determined to secure him in the first instance. Some cloth was thrown over this officer's head: his arms were secured by Captain Wilson, and irons placed upon his hands: and he was also prevented from creating any alarm by a gag being placed in his mouth. Captain Wilson returned to the deck, and in a familiar manner inquired from the master of the prize crew, "Well, Stone, what is the position of the ship?" The officer replied that they were somewhere off Hatteras, and were about to change the course. The Captain invited Lieutenant Stone into the cabin, to peak upon the chart the vessel's position. Lieutenant Stone accompanied the Captain into the cabin; the door was closed, and the cook and steward being also present, Captain Wilson drew a bowying pis— he did not take a pistol, as by was cautious to prevent any noise being created—and demanded that Lieutenant Stone should quietly consent to a pair of irons being placed upon his hands. In the presence of such a force, the officer was compelled to submit to being placed in irons, and also to a gag being inserted in his mouth. The master prize-man being then secured in the cabin, Captain Wilson returned on deck, where he met three of the prize crew; and one being a powerful fellow, he was doubtful as to his treatment of these men, who were still, in common with the rest of the crew, in ignorance of the proceedings below. Captain Wilson's ready wit however, soon suggested an expedient. He ordered them to go aft and find out of a bundle a coil of rigging, of which Edmund Stone was represented as being in need. The three men, unsuspecting nothing, entered the bundle; but as soon as they were within the hatch was placed over the aperture, and they were thus imprisoned. In the meantime the forecastle door had been fastened up, and in this manner the whole of the rebel hirlings was prevented from taking any part in the affray. "Call the other men of the prize crew upon the pretence of what going on forward," said the Captain next forward one of the men to ask whether they would assist in navigating the ship to a British port, to which they replied in the affirmative, and were at once secured. The vessel was then safely navigated into Liverpool.

When we compare the proceedings of Captain Wilkes with the conduct of Captain Wilson, we naturally look across the water, to learn whether the British exultation and glorification upon this really gallant but illegal conduct of their countryman bore any resemblance to the marvelous excitement in Congress that followed the equally remarkably illegal achievement of Captain Wilkes. Up to this moment no intelligence has been received in this country that the Secretary of the British navy has congratulated Captain Wilson, or that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London have given a banquet in honor of Captain Wilson, or that the "solid men" of Wapping have presented a sword to Captain Wilson, or that the House of Commons have passed a vote of thanks to Captain Wilson, or that the people of Great Britain have been insanely jubilant about Captain Wilson, although Captain Wilkes has, as signally as Captain Wilkes, misunderstood the law of maritime war, and the duties and privileges of neutrals. The New York Times calls the action of Captain Wilson "an exceedingly neat little bit of business"—it is not of much consequence now what the New York Times said of the "neat little bit of business" executed by Captain Wilkes—and our contemporary adds, "but "it will require from England reparation as "complete and satisfactory as that we "frankly rendered in the instance of the "Trent. All the credit of surprising and "treacherously caging men, who, confiding "in known principles of maritime law and "honor, were wholly unsuspicious and unprepared, these three heroes may freely "enjoy. But the jest, merry as it is, will "demand a very pretty indemnity."

Of course! and as soon as the British Government applauds and the British Parliament sanctions the conduct of Captain Wilson, and the British Press threatens war rather than abide by law, and the British people imitate all the vagaries that took place on this side of the water in honor of Captain Wilkes, then the Government of the United States demand the "very pretty indemnity." But in the meantime, it is just possible that the American public may learn a lesson, and that the ordinary legal tribunals of Great Britain will be amply sufficient to decide on the merits of Captain Wilson's conduct. On this subject, we quote from the "Manual of Maritime Warfare," by Hazlitt and Roche: "If a neutral master," says Lord Stowell "(the C. Elizabeth 5 Rob. 232) "attempt "a rescue, he violates a duty which is im- "posed on him by the law of nations to sub- "mit to come in for inquiry, as to the pro- "perty of ship and cargo; and if he violates "that obligation by a recurrence to force, "the consequences will undoubtedly reach "the property of his owner; and it would, "I think, extend also to the confiscation "of the whole cargo intrusted to his care, "and thus fraudulently attempted to be "withdrawn from the rights of war."

The case is almost as clear as the affair of the Trent, which was enjoyed so much by the United States and the "hero," Captain Wilkes; yet one may reasonably doubt whether the British Government will follow the example of the Press and Government of the United States and refuse a legal remedy, until Russia, and France, and all the nations of Europe shall protest energetically against violence, and wrong, and illegality. We shall see. At present, the affair is a matter between individuals, subject to legal decision by the Courts of Law, in which the British Government is not called upon to interfere.

TOM SAYERS, HIS TROOPS, AND HORSES TO GO TO AUSTRALIA.

(From the Supporting Life of London, April 23rd.)

Tom Sayers' company and horses are engaged, together with the veteran agent, to visit Australia. The great English boxer and his troops, consisting of 100 men, sixty horses, two elephants, go to Australia. The ship Alexandria, 1,500 tons burden, will convey the mighty hero and suite to the land of novelty, September 6, 1862, at the termination of the exhibition. Mr. Sayers is engaged at the sum of £54,000 ($425,000) for twelve months, exclusive of the voyage each way in the ship Alexandria. Therefore, under these circumstances, he will for a time bid farewell to the land he loves, the country he sent is with—that which, while he breathes, he will adore. When on the plains of Australia, and surrounded like Thomas will be as he was at Hambrough—not in the world's broad field of battle," and on the victory shone his countenance and beaten enemy graciously on, as will Tom Sayers—be glad to exist—his friends on "other side of the mighty deep, and like the warrior, he leaves the country only going to fight with the hearts of a fine England and worshipped on his breast, which will add to the comfort of his declining years, surrounded by the affection he so richly deserves, as one who has upheld to the letter the honor and gravery of his dear native land.

"When the fiery fight is heard no more,"

JEM MACE, "THE CHAMPION," ENTERS THE CIRCUS.

(From the London Supporting Life, April 23rd.)

Mr. Jem Mace, champion of the world, England's great gladiator, who knew unhesitatingly throws his gauntlet to the world, barring neither country nor color, for any amount up to 1,000, and the champion of England's belt, being intensely disappointed at not having a match on hand "for his trophy," has accepted a lucrative engagement to travel with Ginnette's Royal Circus, as a sparring tour. He being acknowledged by all judges the most scientific boxer living, the public may rely on seeing a display of science and skill in the manly art of self-defence, such, of course, as cannot be seen elsewhere, the greatest satisfaction being given by the Champion in all towns he has visited. The valuable presents given to the Champion in the towns of Bristol, Bath and Cheltenham lately have been greatly admired. The gallant and athletic Champion appears twice daily to the admiration of all who feel a pleasure in seeing science of the first water.

Mr. Harry Montague introduced the Champion, and also exhibits his original Champion of England's belt [not a copy, as shown elsewhere,] the Middle-weights belts, the most valuable and magnificent cups, tankards, goblets, rings, medals, and other pre-sents received by the Champion from some of his ardent admirers, these being the most magnificent and valuable collections of trophies ever won by or presented to a pugilist. The Champion of England will positively set to with his African, Art Hassan, twice daily. In conjunction with the Champion, the circus of Mr. Ginnette is noted for its riders, rope performers, &c. All the male and female star riders, both English and Americans, perform twice daily.

MR. JOHN C. HEENAN.

The great American pugilist—and is reality "the champion"—it will be recollected, is in France, it is said with the intention of entering a more civilizing arena, which seems destined to supersede the British "prize ring."

A rash young man has threatened to apply the Maine liquor law to his sweetheart, she intoxicates him so.

Ignorance and conceit are two of the worst qualities to combat. It is easier to dispute with a statesman than a blockhead.

It has been said that the three sweetest words in the English language are—happiness, home, and heaven. About these cling the most touching associations, and with them the sublimest aspirations.

Foote had attacked some pretentious person for his characteristic foible. "Why do you attack my weakest part?" asked the assailed. "Did I ever say anything about your head?" replied Foote.

A waggish old squire was one winter day walking with the minister, when he slipped and fell. "My friend," said the Rev. gentleman, "sinners stand on slippery places." "I see they do, said the squire, "but unfortunately I can't.

SLEEPING IN THE KIRK.—A Good story is told of Lord Elphinstone and the minister of Cumbernauld, which is quite characteristic, and if the minister preached without notes, it was not likely he could answer his lordship. "Wauken, wauken, my Lord Elphinstone!" "I'm no sleepin,' minister." "Then, what did I say last?" "Oh! just wauken, Lord Elphinstone." "Aye, but what did I say before that?" "I'll wager a guinea, minister ye canna tell that yersel."

SHREWED GUESSES OR LUCKY HITS. According to a translation from Michael Nostradamus' "Seven Centuries of Prophecy," it appears that he not only prophesied the death of Charles 1. of England, the establishment of the French Republic, the death of Henri IV. and Louis XVI, of France, gives the exact dates of each, but that, in 1861 a war would arise in a country beyond the seas, that many would perish, that there would be the most intense hatred manifested, that the war would last four years, when both parties would be utterly prostrated and almost ruined and then would embrace each other with great joy and love. Nostradamus died in 1556, so far as known, he appears to have been a true prophet.

THE DIFFERENCE.—The following anecdote is related of Queen Victoria: "The incumbent of Osborne had occasion to visit an old parishioner. Upon his arrival at the house, as he entered the door where the invalid was, there was sitting by the bedside a lady in deep mourning reading the word of God. He was about to retire when the lady remarked: 'Pray remain I should not wish the invalid to lose the comfort which a clergyman might afford. The lady retired, and the clergyman found lying on the bed a book with texts of scripture adapted to the sick; and he found that out of that book portions of Scripture had been read by the lady in black. The Lady was the Queen of England."

PLANTS IN BEDROOMS.—It should be known to all persons, that to have plants in a close bedroom at night, is a practice detrimental to health. Even plants not in flower, and without smell, injure the air during the night, and in the absence of the sun, by supplanting it with nitrogen and carbonic acid gas. A melancholy proof of this arose from leaving accidentally a Hyacinth in bloom in a bedroom at Huddersfield, England. Mr. Sturbridge having frequently had the misery of being awakened from his sleep, determined to sit up and watch. He accordingly placed himself, with a pleasing feeling-piece, in the green-house, where it is supposed he fell asleep, and in the morning was found dead upon the floor, with all the appearances of suffocation, evidently occasioned by the fragrance of the plants during the night.

Sons of Temperance Column.

Drunkenness vs. Crime.

That drunkenness is a crime, no sane person will attempt to deny. The man in consequence of his habitually committing this crime, has become an outcast from society, a miserable, degraded wretch, lost all his sense of morality, and whose very heart is "seared as with a hot iron" against the manly feelings which should joyously beat within him, cannot place his palsied hand upon his heaving breast and say, he really believes drunkenness is not criminal? Dare that man who has brought himself to the gallows, and his family to utter, irreparable ruin say, drunkenness is not a crime? Dare that young man who, in the flower of his youth, and with fair prospects and long happy days apparently looming in the future for him, has by drunkenness brought his father's gray hairs with sorrow to the grave, ruined the happiness of his sisters, and blasted the fond hopes of his affectionate, doting, and now broken hearted mother, and himself to an early death-bed, dare he say drunkenness is not a sad crime? Parents, who through drunkenness, have neglected the proper training of your children in the days of their youth, and now have them cursing you to your faces for your neglect, and for the horrible example you set before them, dare you say drunkenness is not a heinous crime? Will the most hardened, the most vile, degraded criminal, the "hard case," the abandoned female, or any slave to drunkenness, speak the dicta es of a conscience, perhaps it may be almost annihilated within his or her breast, and say it is not a melancholy, degraded crime, to become a drunkard? Yes drunkenness is a bestial, aye, a hellish crime, and no person will honestly gainsay the truth of the assertion. Intemperance is Death's Prime Minister, and it is Satan's most zealous, active, persevering Agent. Without the Agency of the intoxicating cup, Satan's conquests would be few indeed, compared with what they are through it. Thousands upon thousands through drunkenness are yearly hastened ushered into the gloomy regions, where the second death has to be suffered for ever and ever! Alas! alas! that it is true! What are drinking clubs but Satan's nurseries, the begining of debauchery and crime? And what are drinking Saloons, but the same? With what a hypocritical, almost demoniacal smile the selfish sottish Saloon keeper welcomes the young, unwary, wavering, young man to partake of his poison, how he flatters him as being "a good hearted fellow," until he gradually gets him to become a confirmed drunkard, and his ruin is accomplished. Does the poison vender flatter him then? Ah! no, he calls him a drunken beast and spurns him away from him, for now the poor youth has lost the means for paying for poisonous draughts, and the very man who has been the main instrument in bringing him to ruin and disgrace, will not now give him a piece of bread to soliche the cravings of hunger. Poor deluded young man will you, can you, dare you, say drunkenness is not a foul desolate crime? No, poor unfortunate you will not, for bitterly do you feel the effects of your having so frequently committed it, and your mind shall be racked with anguish on every remembrance of it. Alas! that the crime is legally permitted and encouraged!

Poor Fellow.

A few evenings since as we were passing along one of the principal streets of the city, we met a poor, trembling, bloated individual, whom we had known in better days. Once an honored business man, the centre of an interesting circle of sincere and trusting friends—now a shattered wreck, drifting down the fatal stream to a dishonored tomb. Once as lovely a woman as ever God gave to man, called him by the endearing name of husband, who now with her fatherless children has fled to a parent's home, for food and shelter. His blasted, scarred and seathed frame staggered before us, and we paused. His eyes fixed themselves upon us with a half idiotic stare, and stretching his fevered and trembling hand he grasped ours, and in a drunkard's drivel, addressed us, "How are you Cary? God bless you, my dear friend." Without waiting for a response, he continued, "Ah! Cary, I know what you are thinking about, and what you would say, but it is too late. Oh! if I had taken your advice six years ago, I might be a man, but I am undone." We made an effort to speak, but he interrupted. "Its no use to talk to me, go on, God bless you, Cary, you will save others, but poor John is beyond your reach." The drooling drunkard shed the drunkard's tears profusely; conscious of his galling chains and assuring us that he loved us more than any other man on earth, staggered away.

Noble, generous-hearted, companionable fellow, we pity, we pray, for you; but while villains stand ready to hasten you on the road to perdition, there is no hope of salvation.

God's curse rest upon the wretches who, with deliberate and premeditated malice, are robbing society of its ornaments and dooming a soul.

☞ Bayard Taylor says—"I was in a shop for sale of wine, or rice whisky, in Hong Hong which bears over its door the following inscription:

"The joys of Paradise are exciting that a state of perpetual drunk."

The poor heathen, who knew nothing of the plan of redemption, may be excused for their unreasonable notions of the enjoyments of Paradise, and it will be more tolerable for them in the day of Judgment, than for those who, in the broad blaze of the sun of righteousness, live and the pagan doctrine was true.

In this enlightened country, men are willing to sacrifice health, character, reputation, life, and give up all prospect of participating in the "joys of Paradise," to gratify an appetite that would disgrace a brute. It is not only a declaration of the Bible, that a drunkard cannot enter heaven, but our reason tells us that if Heaven is a pleasant place, a liquor drinker would pollute it by his presence. The heathen who, in his blindness, bows down to gods of wood and stone fashioned in accordance with his own lusts is to be pitied, but how can our bowels of compassion yearn for a man brought up under the pure dispensation of Christianity, who yields himself to the destroyer.

AN ARBITRATION.

AN IMPORTANT COMMERCIAL CASE.

Willson vs. Corby.

An action brought to recover damages for not delivering to Plaintiff a quantity of flour according to a contract in writing, the substance of which is as follows:—

"Plaintiff bought for Defendant 500 "barrels 'Alma Mills' flour guaranteed to "pass No. 1 inspection in Montreal at $5. "25 per barrel. Storage free until open- "ing of navigation. Payment to be made "by Plaintiff's note, at 6 months from date. "Flour not to be removed until note paid. "Any flour passing less inspection than No. "1, to be paid for at a proportion rate. "Belleville, 11th January, 1861."

Plaintiff gave his note for $2,625, at 6 months; which became due on the 14th May following. On that day flour which afterwards passed No. 1 superfine was offered to Plaintiff's agent at Belleville, but as he chose not to pay the note, he did not receive the flour, but renewed the not for 10 days; which fell due on the 27th May, 1861. The former note was made by the Plaintiff, and endorsed by the Defendant. The renewal note was made by R. D. Collis, Inspector of flour in Montreal, and endorsed by Plaintiff. 400 barrels were inspected in Montreal by R. D. Collis on the 1st, and 100 on 5th June, 1861.

All inspected No. 1, excepting 145 brls. Plaintiff employed one Aubin to sell the 145 barels, who sold it on the 10th June, 1861, at $4 per barrel. The first intimation of the rejection and sale of the flour, was the receipt by Defendant, by Post, on the 22nd June, of the account sales, charging Defendant with $1.25 loss per barrel, being the difference between the contract price and what it sold for, and also charging him with the expenses, such as freight, insurance, inspection, &c. The Defendant disputed Plaintiff's right to sell the flour without giving him an opportunity of disposing of it, and replacing it with No. 1 flour, which he might have bought at $5. 25, on that Defendant should be allowed to make the 145 equivalent to No. 1 superfine, by paying Plaintiff the difference between the market value in Montreal, within a reasonable time after he delivery in Belleville, and the then market value of No. 1 superfine being a proportionate rate, according to contract. And that as flour had dealt on in Montreal markets, Plaintiff, by receiving such difference, would have realized exactly what he would have received for the 145 barrels had it passed inspection No. 1 superfine, and consequently that he ought not to be charged with the expenses. The Defendant further contended that there was collusion between the Inspector and Plaintiff, and that he rejected large lots of flour, because Plaintiff, owing to the fall of flour in the market, was likely to lose on his contracts; and took this course to get rid of the contract, and ask for his $5.25 back again and the expenses—thereby saving himself from the fluctuation in the market value of the flour, and shifting the decline of flour in the market upon Defendant. There was much evidence taken under a Commission in Montreal, proving the result of the inspection, the custom of trade and the difference in the market value of flour, from the 11th January, 1861, to the 14th June following. It was proved by one of the firm of James & Oliver, produce brokers in Montreal, that from the 14th of May (the day the note fell due) to the 11th June, Alma Mills rejected superfine flour sold for from $4.85 to $4.90, and the then market value of No. 1 superfine was only $4.80, showing that Defendant's flour, notwithstanding it was marked No. 1 superfine rejected—sold within 5 cents per barrel of what No. 1 sold for; excepting on the day 500 barrels rejected were sold for $4.85, when No. 1 superfine was sold for $4.90. The same witness proved that the flour ought to have been sold between the 27th of May and the 11th of June, 1861; and if it had been, it would have realized within 5 cents of the market value of No. 1 superfine. That on the 14th June, 1861, flour declined in value suddenly, from $4.90 to to $4.80 or wholesale; although he sold Defendant's flour in small lots at $4.90. That Plaintiff, after the flour was inspected ought unreasonably to have telegraphed to Defendant for instructions, and that if the flour had been turned over to him, could have sold it within 5 cents of No. 1 superfine.

The case came before the late Judges in Belleville, and was referred to arbitration. Mr. Justice Burns appointed Mr. Dalton, of Toronto, the Arbitrator. The following is a synopsis of the evidence taken before the Arbitrator on Wednesday, the 7th instant. Mr. A. B. Dougall appeared on behalf of Mr. Corby; and Mr. Crombie of the firm of Read & Hall, for the Alma Mills Plaintiff, the first witness sworn was

Mr. Dudley Dupont, who said he was the agent of Messrs. Willson, in Belleville. He took the note given for the flour with Mr. Corby, and signed the memorandum on behalf of Mr. Willson. The note made by Mr. Willson to pay most for the flour was not paid at maturity—it was renewed for ten days, and then paid by him. I told Mr. Corby the day when the note was paid, whereupon he shipped 400 barrels, and in a few days afterwards the other 100 barrels were sent forward. The Inspection charged upon the flour was at the rate of 68 cents on the $100, amounting to $4.15 upon 116 barrels.

Mr. Dougall objected to the evidence of expenses of insurance, freight, &c., on the ground that in estimating the damages, the expenses were not the natural result of the breach of contract.

Plaintiff tendered evidence of a contract of sale of the flour, to another party at a higher rate than what he paid for it to show loss of profit.

Mr. Dougall objected to evidence of loss of profit as inadmissable; which, if the flour had all turned out No. 1, might have been obtained under another contract for the sale of the flour made by Plaintiff in Montreal at a higher price than $5.25, on the ground that at the time Wilson and Corby made this contract no notice was given to Corby that the flour was bought to fill a contract, and was not therefore at that time in contemplation of the parties. He cited the case of Hadley vs. Bayndale 9th Ex. 341, and that the correct measure of damage was the differ ence in the market value of the flour such as it turned out to be rejected, at the date of delivery to Wilson in Belleville, namely on the 27th May, 1861, or the average value between that date and the 10th of June, 1861, (which allowed 15 days for transportation, correspondence with Corby, and sale of the flour) and the market value of No. 1 Superfine, on the 27th May, or the average market value within the 15 days afterwards; and that the market value of Corby's rejected flour as sold by James & Oliver, between the 27th May, 1861, and the 10th June, 1861, being $4.90, and No. 1, Superfine, $5 25, showed the difference to be 5 cents per barrel, as the proper measure of damage. (He also cited the case of Dolor vs. Kaikull, 27th Law Journal, C. P. 27.) And that upwards of 40 cents per barrel had been paid into Court to be certain of paying enough.

The Arbitrator asked if they were bound to dispose of flour which did not pass inspection.

Mr. Dougall.—Yes, either to dispose of it, or correspond with us. They should have notified us at once when it did not pass inspection.

Mr. Corby said as soon as he heard of the rejection of the flour, he went down to Montreal to satisfy himself about it, and Mr. Collis explained that while they had to reject it as No. 1 Superfine, it was a good as article to brand No. 2.

Mr. Dougall.—There was a secret about this matter which would show fresh before the investigation was concluded.

Mr. Dupont's examination resumed.—The usual commission charged by Mr. Willson for selling flour is 2½ per cent, unless a special arrangement is made. The commission charged by the trade varies according to circumstances from 1 to 5th per cent. Willson & Bro. and the buyer a fair any less. Cannot say whether under circumstances Mr. Willson was justified in selling the flour as he did, as I was not in the trade. We have had several transactions with other merchants in this section of country, among them Mr. Baker, Mr. Alport and others, and I may state that I never had any trouble with any of them with the exception of Mr. Wallace and Mr. Corby.

Cross Examined.—I do not know whether the flour was deposited when the contract was made—does not think the flour was then in existence. At the expiration of the four months do not know where the flour was—at the end of the three day's grace cannot say positively whether there was any flour in the storehouse or not. I had no instruction of any kind respecting the matter except to ask Mr. Corby to renew the note. The note was protested in full. I know the maker of the note was Mr. Thomas Willson. It was made payable to Mr. Henry Corby.

Mr. Dougall.—Was there not an endorser on the note?

Mr. Crombie objected to such questions.

The Arbitrator took a note of the objection, but allowed the testimony to proceed.

Mr. Dupont.—There was no endorser on the note. I took the note, showed it to Mr. Corby, and sent it to Montreal.

Mr. Dougall.—Who is R. D. Collis?

Mr. Dupont.—He is R. D. Collis, I suppose; that is all I know about him.

Mr. Dougall.—But do you not know that he holds some office in Montreal, and was he not one of the endorsers on that note?

Mr. Dupont.—Mr. Collis is the flour inspector of Montreal. He was not an endorser on the note; the only endorser was Mr. Corby. I cannot say whether I examined the flour or not.

Mr. Dougall.—Was Mr. Collis ever in partnership with Mr. Willson?

Mr. Crombie submitted that this evidence was irrevelant, and read the notes in proof of his position.

The Arbitrator said he would take down the objection, but he did not think himself justified in refusing the evidence.

Mr. Dupont.—Collis was in partnership with Willson some years ago; the partnership was dissolved in June, 1859. I dare say that Collis may have endorsed the paper of Wilson since then; in fact I know of such transactions. To the best of my knowledge and belief, Collis was not an endorser on the note in question. I can't swear positively that he was or was not an endorser. If you will produce the note I will tell you.

Mr. Dougall.—Do you know when the flour was sold?

Mr. Dupont.—I don't know; I heard say that the 145 barrels were sold. It must have been sold within a period of fifteen days or three weeks. I was in Belleville at the time it was sold. They did not send me the account sales. The value of No. 1 and No. 2 flour might vary in the market. Cannot say what difference there was in the price in Nov. 1 and 2 between the 14th of May and the time the flour was sold. So far as I know Mr. Collis has never had any transactions in flour since he was Inspector. Mr. Collis has endorsed Mr. Wilson's paper since the 21st of May, 1861, and I presume he has since the 1st of January, 1862. Mr. Wilson has drawn on Mr. Collin to obtain money.

Mr. Dupont to Mr. Crombie.—Mr. Collin had no personal interest in this transaction. nor has he the slightest interest in Mr. Wilson's business.

Mr. Corby said he would show the transaction. When I heard that my flour was rejected, I went down to Montreal, and Mr. Collin and myself went together to look at the flour. I told him that I could not detect anything wrong with the flour. He asked me if there was not some peculiar smell about it. I replied that I could not detect it. When I returned home I went to my storehouse, and had the Smithville brand put upon a quantity of the flour, which was immediately shipped to Montreal with some branded Alma Mills. The flour was all of the same quality, made from the same wheat, but the Alma Mills was rejected and the Smithville brand passed inspection No. 1 superfine.

Mr Crombie contended that Mr. Corby's statement was not evidence.

The Arbitrator said that he was not taking it down.

Mr. Crombie.—But I observe a gentleman taking notes of the case, and as it would doubtless be published, he thought the statement was inadmissible.

Mr. Corby continued.—I then went to obtain a supply of flour to fill a contract I had in Montreal. I made an agreement with Mr. Merritt of St. Catharines.—As I had agreed to furnish Alma Mill bread, I asked Mr. Merrit if he had any objection to have it branded Alma Mills. He replied, "No, I don't care what it is branded, for my flour always passes inspection No. 1." I had 1000 barrels branded Alma Mills, and shipped it with a quantity from the same mill owned by Mr. Merritt, and beheld when it reached Montreal, the lot marked Alma Mills was all rejected, while Mr. Merrit's passed inspection as No. 1 superfine. That is the manner I was treated by the Montreal shavers. It was perfectly clear to my mind that no flour branded Alma Mills would ever pass inspection in Montreal, no matter what might be the quality.

Mr. Dougall then called for the defence.

Mr. Q. Annesley, manager of the Bank of Montreal in Belleville, who upon being sworn said, that as Mr. Dupont had admitted that transactions had taken place between the Plaintiff and Mr. Collin, he did not think he was called upon to give a statement of Bank transactions.

Mr. Crombie objected, and Mr. Dougall insisted that he should state the transactions between the parties. The Arbitrator agreeing with Mr. Dougall.

Mr. Macalister said transactions had passed through the Bank since the 1st of Jan. 1861, between Mr. Collin and Mr. Wilson. Money had been paid to Mr. Baker, obtained on discounts, upon which the names of Mr. Collin and Mr. Wilson appear.

Mr. A. Thomson sworn.—Is manager of the Commercial Bank in Belleville. I discounted a note on the 18th of January, 1861, made by Thomas Wilson, endorsed by Henry Corby, and dated 14th of January, 1861, payable four months after date. It was due on the 14th of May, and discounted on account of Henry Corby. The note was paid by renewal. R. D. Collin was the maker of the renewal, and it was made payable to the order of Thomas Wilson.

Mr. Dougall.—Who is R. D. Collin?

Mr. Thomson.—He is the flour inspector of Montreal. During the year 1861 Wilson was in the habit of drawing on Collin. This was done frequently. I objected to the renewal of the note at the time. Mr. Corby came to me and declined to renew unless further security was given, as flour had declined in price.

Mr. Jas. Glass, sworn.—Has had considerable experience in the grain and flour business. From the 14th of May, 1861, to the 1st of June, 1861, the highest figure paid for Superfine flour at Montreal was $4.85 and $4.90. From this rate was deducted freight and charges for inspection. If I buy flour here, and send it to Montreal I pay all expenses. On the 12th of June the price had declined considerably; it was then $4.25. Some favorite brands would get more than unknown brands. About the 10th of June, flour suddenly went down nearly as much as a dollar a barrel. After the 14th June I was offered $4.00 a barrel.

Mr. Dougall then read the contract between Wilson and Corby, and asked witness whether, under the circumstances, Wilson should not at once have notified Corby of the rejection of his flour.

Mr. Glass said he should have expected Mr. Wilson to have notified him at once, if the flour did not pass inspection, and he should not have sold it without giving Mr. Corby notice. After the flour had been shipped at Belleville, it should be at Montreal at least in a week's time—it could arrive in two days, and would be inspected within 24 hours. In his opinion, Wilson should then immediately have notified Corby of the result of the inspection. Sometime in the end of May, Mr. Baker and I went to look at the flour. I considered it as good as any that left this market. I could not discern any smell. Mr. Baker remarked that it was better flour than his.

Examined by Mr. Crombie.—On 14th May, 1861, the value of superfine No. 1 was $5.00 to $5.10, for well known brands. Last summer I had some flour rejected—probably 100 barrels altogether. I thought the Inspection was very partial, for of one lot of 100 barrels which I shipped, ground from the same quality of wheat and all ground at the same time, three were 20 barrels rejected. There could not possibly be any difference in the flour. Mr. Collin was Inspector when my flour was rejected. When I examined this flour of Mr. Corby's I could not detect the slightest smell.

Jas. Wallace, sworn.—Is a miller. I sold Mr. Wilson a lot of flour, which I guaranteed as No. 1, superfine, some of which was rejected. He wrote me, informing me of the fact, and made a difference in the price. He did not charge expenses of transportation. Don't think it right for Wilson to charge Corby with freight, insurance, &c. I have a suit with Wilson of a similar character. I don't think Wilson has pursued a straight forward, honest course in this matter.

James Corby, sworn.—Am book-keeper for my father—have been in that position for 5 or 6 years. The contract between Wilson and Corby was produced, which was interpreted by witness. On the 14th of May the latter drew about 600 barrels of Alma Mills superfine, at least we supposed it to be that quality. I tendered to Mr. Dupont, the agent of Mr. Wilson, a delivery of the 600 barrels, provided he took up the note. Out of that 600 barrels, 200 barrels were sent to Routh & Co. I received a telegram from them stating that the flour had passed inspection No. 1. I telegraphed 200 barrels of Alma Mills flour to Routh & Co. Mr. Dupont came to me, and asked me to go to Toronto, at the Queen's Hotel, and get the note removed. I went to the Bank, and believe the manager elected the note to be over till the next morning, for Wilson's accommodation. Dupont told me he could not take up the note. We were at that time shipping occasionally. I think we had shipped 1000 barrels up to that period, to James, Oliver & Co. On the 16th of May there was a quantity of flour in the storehouse not branded. A portion of it was branded "Smithville Mills," and was sent to Routh & Co., Montreal. It passed inspection. The flour was made at Alma Mills, and was of the same quality as that rejected. Our object in putting that brand upon the flour was to test the inspector. I believe the flour to have been as good as any which went from our mill. Flour suddenly declined in price after the first of June. Navigation has just opened on the 27th of April—we shipped on the 2nd of May. After the opening of navigation we charged storage for the flour, in accordance with the term of the contract—we charge 5 cents per barrel, the same as other wharfingers.

It being now about one o'clock, the arbitration was adjourned an hour for dinner.

At half-past 2, the consideration of the case was resumed.

James Corby was recalled.—I got a letter on the 22nd of June, intimating that the flour was rejected. I received no telegraph. At the request of Mr. Dupont, I shipped the flour. Mr. Dupont consigned the flour to Mr. Wilson. My father purchased one thousand barrels of flour to went to fill a contract made with a party in Montreal. It was all branded "Alma Mills."

Mr. Crombie objected to this kind of evidence as having nothing to do with the question.

Mr. Dougall.—It has a very important bearing on the question. We want to show that all the Flour with the brand of Alma Mills upon it will be rejected, even though it be XX or XXX.

Mr. H. Corby said there should be some alteration in the law, by which Inspectors when they reject flour should be compelled to give their reasons for doing so.

The Arbitrator.—Would it not be better, Mr. Corby, if we had Inspectors in Upper Canada?

Mr. James Corby continued.—That flour was purchased by my father of *Mr. Mer.*itt, of St. Catharines. It was all rejected, I suppose on account of being branded Alma Mills.

Cross Examined.—300 barrels were consigned to Routh & Co., for which we got the full market value. About the 14th of May, the value of No. 1, Superfine was from $4.95 to $5.00. During that season we shipped altogether about 1800 brls. of flour, and with the exception of 276 brls. all was rejected. We consigned 1000 brls. to James, Oliver & Co., all of which was rejected. The flour sent to that firm was partly on wholesale and partly on retail.

George Easterbrook, sworn.—Am Mr. Corby's miller; was in his employ in Jan. 1861, in the Alma Mills. We commenced grinding that year on the 5th of February. There were three bins for wheat in the mill. The best quality of wheat was kept in No. 1 and 2; bin No. 3 was kept for an inferior quality of wheat. I heard something about the contract made in *Mo.*ntreal. To supply the flour for that contract we used the wheat from Nos. 1 and 2 bins; the wheat in these bins was all about the same quality. The first I heard of the rejection of the flour was after Mr. Corbys return from Montreal. We were very particular in keeping the best qualities of wheat separate from the inferior. We used some but the best quality of wheat for that flour, for Mr. Corby told us that he had made a good contract, and was anxious that the character of the mill should be kept up. No middlings was ground with flour. At that time an old miller had charge of the mill, and he pronounced the flour to be of superior quality. I understood a portion of that flour was branded Smithville Mills." The wheat that was in bin No. 3 was ground up afterwards, branded Smithville Mills, and shipped to Montreal. Although inferior to the other flour it passed inspection No. 1, Superfine. All of the latter flour was branded at the mill.

Cross Examined.—The first lot of flour was branded at the storehouse—that made from No. 3 wheat I branded myself at the mill with the Smithville brand. Did not keep an account of the number of barrels.

Thomas *Mc*Donough, sworn.—I have known Mr. Glass for some time, and believe him to be a good judge of flour. Recollects something about Mr. Glass and Mr. Baker talking about the flour; this was after it was rejected. I know something about the flour because I was then engaged in the storehouse, and had to cooper the barrels when they came from the mill. Occasionally the hoops would get loose, and the heads fall out, and it was my business to cooper them up. I frequently noticed the flour, and thought it an excellent quality. The first lot that went to Montreal was branded Alma Mills. After Mr. Corby returned from Montreal, he came into the storehouse and said his flour had been rejected, and that it was evident no flour with the Alma Mills brand on it would pass inspection in Montreal. He then went out and got the Smithville brand and directed me to put that brand on the remainder of the flour in the storehouse not already branded. I did so, and that together with some branded Alma Mills, were shipped to Montreal. The flour was all made at the Alma Mills, and seemed to be all of the same quality. I heard Mr. Corby say that the Smithville brand passed inspection No. 1, Superfine, while the other was rejected. Subsequently a quantity of flour came down from the mill with the Smithville brand on it, which I heard was made out of inferior wheat, and which passed inspection No. 1, Superfine.

Cross Examined.—There were probably between two and three hundred barrels branded Smithville Mills. The flour was in new barrels; some of them might have been a little fresh, but not enough to injure the flour.

Mr. Hickie, sworn.—I have no recollection of going with Mr. Glass to look at Corby's flour; I may have gone, but do not recollect it. After flour is inspected, and if it is rejected, I should consider it the duty of the party in whose it is consigned to notify the consignor at once; he should do it before he sold the flour. I never heard that Mr. Corby's flour was not good until last spring. Green stuff in barrels will sour or less affect the flour. I know that in this county we have been short of good barrels, and have been occasionally obliged to use green stuff.

Mr. Dougall.—Does not Mr. Corby's flour rank equally as good as any other in the County?

Mr. Baker.—I do not know anything about other people's brands, but I know that my own stands as high in the market as any in the County. I sent Mr. Collin at my own house some time after Collin & Wilson had dissolved partnership; he and Wilson were travelling together. Collin's business with me was of a private nature. He told me that Wilson would continue the business in future.

Mr. Dougall asked Mr. Glass if Mr. Dupont had not admitted to him that Collin had an interest in Wilson's business?

Mr. Glass said he did not wish to retail a private conversation.

Mr. Dupont.—I have not the slightest objection to tell what conversation occured between us. We were talking about a contract I had made to deliver a certain quantity of barley. Before the time for delivery I found I could not purchase at the figure for which I had contracted, so I did not supply the barley. We were called upon to make good the difference, and in conversation with Mr. Collin about the matter, he advised me to charge it to profit and loss. Mr. Collin was acting for Mr. Wilson while the latter was in England. He went away between Christmas and New Years, and returned last Saturday. Collin has transacted Wilson's business during his absence.

To Mr. Crombie.—Mr. Collin has had no interest in Mr. Wilson's wheat or flour transactions to my knowledge, since he became Inspector, certainly not since I have been in Mr. Wilson's employ.

This closed the case, and the Arbitrator announced that he would give his decision in a few days. The award has not yet been given.

THURSDAY, 29TH MAY, 1862.

The New Administration.

We have this week the pleasure of announcing the downfall of the Cartier-MacDonald administration, and the existence of a new one in its stead. The resignation of the former took place last week in consequence of an adverse vote on the Militia Bill,—a measure selected it is said for its dissolution and by which it went to the wall rather gracefully than otherwise. Be this as it may friends as well as foes seemed to consider its downfall during the present session as inevitable, and it has departed with scarcely a sigh, from any but the recipients of its reckless liberality. It made a virtue of a necessity, and the Governor General accepted the resignations and charged John S. MacDonald with the task of forming a new administration, which he did in a few days, and on Saturday last the members of which were sworn in as follows:

UPPER CANADA.

Mr. J. S. MacDonald, Atty. General,
Mr. Howland, Minister of Finance,
Mr. Foley, Postmaster General.
Mr. MacDougall, Crown Land Com.
Hon. Mr. Morris, Receiver General,
Mr. Adam Wilson, Sol. General.

LOWER CANADA.

Mr. Sicotte, Atty. General,
Mr. Abbot, Sol. Gen ral,
Mr. A. A. Dorion, Secretary,
Mr. D'Arcy McGee, Pres. Ex. Coun.
Mr. Evanturel, Bureau of Agriculture,
Mr. Tessier, Com. of Pub. Works.

The Canada Gazette of Saturday last contains the notice of the appointments as above.

We may now say that the Government of Canada is in new hands, most of the members are comparatively novices in government affairs, and the country will watch with some degree of interest their efforts in the difficult task before them. Theirs is indeed an onerous and unenviable task, commencing with fearful pecuniary burdens and a bankrupt exchequer, with contracts and engagement entered into by their predecessors, whereon the public benefit was but of secondary importance—in short with every thing topsy turvey at the commencement of a session to, with scarcely anything accomplished.

As to the exact policy of the new administration, while we write we find it extremely difficult to state what it is, owing to the conflicting statements in the Leader and Globe. The correspondents of each paper at Quebec, in noticing the policy of the new government, gives a version of the Representation question, different from each other. That of the Leader stating that the new Government would "carry out the question of Representation by Population, preserving the present existing federative system;" while the Globe's correspondent says, that the cardinal question of the day is to be laid over by them for the present parliament. The Globe of Saturday and Monday read a very severe lecture to the four Upper Canada ministers, who, it says, have violated their principles and professions by thus agreeing to set aside a principle superior to any other in the opposition creed. We observe that the Leader speaks very favourably of the Government, and seems more disposed to give them its support as otherwise, and even our neighbor of the Review seems to think that "in the present state of the country any government that may be formed would be entitled to a good deal of consideration."

Our friend of the Globe in his severe strictures on the MacDonald-Sicotte Administration, reminds us of its conduct in 1862, when he commenced his Opposition career. At the same time we are free to confess if the policy of the present Government be as characterized both by the Globe and D'Arcy McGee, Friday, Wilson, and Macdonald, here, be changed against them, such is a step not seen often in opposition, that a Ministry refusing to make Representation by Population a Cabinet question, should be voted down, they have placed themselves in a very unenviable position indeed. We shall patiently await the developments of the Government before offering any opposition to them. We are sincerely disposed to give them a fair trial before passing a verdict against them. And we cannot escape the conviction that the wiser course for the Globe to pursue would have been to wait a while before writing down untried men on his own side of the House. If, as we have before intimated, the Globe is correct in its statements of the sayings and proposed conduct of the four leading men from Western Canada, does not their conduct in joining this administration touch a lesson to all not to entertain steps as impracticable schemes? Does not every intelligent man in Canada know that no Ministry could exist at present which will make Representation by Population a Cabinet measure? The question has to be settled, but it requires time and patience, and in our humble opinion the extremists who advocate its sans diute adoption, and those who refuse to entertain it are the greatest impediments in the way of its final triumph. Was not the secularization of the Clergy Reserves a question of vital importance to Upper Canada? And did not its representatives in Parliament by bills and resolutions affirm the principle, and yet how long had the people to wait for its consummation? and even to go to England and beg for it as we may have to do in any adjustment of the existing Union of the Provinces—or at all events a two third vote will be required to alter any matter affecting the Union.

Sunday Labour Bill.

The following is a Bill introduced by Mr. Haultain, to which we referred last week:

An act for closing the Canals on the Lord's day, and for prohibiting the running of Trains or Railways, and the departure of Steamers and other vessels from Port on that day.

WHEREAS it is the undoubted right of all men in a Christian community, in accordance with Divine command, to abstain from labour on the Sabbath; and whereas the denial of this right is alike injurious to the physical and moral well-being of this Province; Therefore, Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of Canada, enacts as follows:

1. The Locks on all Canals in this Province shall be closed from Saturday at midnight until Sunday at midnight.

2. No railway Train or Engine shall run on Sunday, under a penalty of two hundred dollars for each offence.

3. No steamer or other vessel navigating in the inland waters of this Province, shall depart from Port on Sunday, under a penalty of two hundred dollars for each offence.

4. The penalties imposed by the preceding sections may be recovered, with costs, by summary conviction, before a Justice of the Peace, on the information of any person proceeding either for the Crown alone, or as well for the Crown as for himself, against the company owning the Railway Train or Engine run in contravention of this Act, or the Conductor or Engine Driver of such Railway Train or Engine, or against the master or owner of the Steamer or other vessel contravening this Act, as the case may be; and the amount of the penalty recovered shall belong to the Crown, or be divided equally between the Crown and the informant, as the cause may require.

THE WEATHER during the past and present week has been variable. On Wednesday evening last week it rained hard; Thursday was a fine day; Friday it was windy, cold, and uncomfortable; quite a frost on Saturday morning, and through the day clear and cool. On Sunday a bright hot sun, with a husky wind, which was very trying to the crops just peeping through the ground; Monday opened with threats of rain, which did not come; Tuesday commenced cloudy and a few drops of rain fell about 7 o'clock, and although threatening rain all day, no more fell; Wednesday was clear and pleasant. Since Sunday the temperature has risen, and we have now summer weather. The fields, woods, and gardens seem to rejoice in the present genial weather; and wherever we turn our eyes we are reminded of the homely lay of a rustic bard,

"Dame Nature slumpers like a lass,
With go-to-meeting gown on."

A shower of rain would assist the crops coming through the ground.

☞ The Editor of the Omemee Warder seems to think very little of taking away a man's good name. To say that a man, because he leaves home for the scene of an election on Saturday, electioneers on a Sunday, is a conclusion as absurd as it is unjust. We charge the Warder with tradecing the character of George Brown unwarrantably, and we think he should either withdraw his charge or prove it. In either case we protest against being brought up as an evidence. We supply nothing, the onus probandi lies with the assailant, and other proof than the ipse dixit of a person who knows nothing of the case is required. As to our ignorance of the "article" we can only say that our opinion was formed by the effects produced. A man that steals another's good name is deserving of being termed a small soul or something worse.

☞ On Tuesday night the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, delivered a most excellent lecture on Temperance to a large and intelligent audience in the Town Hall. The Rev. gentleman is unquestionably a very popular and pleasing lecturer, and displayed more than ordinary intelligence on the great subject of his lecture. Although speaking for an hour and a-half, he appeared not to be aware that he could have continued much longer, and the attention of the audience evinced the appreciation of what he said.

We sincerely hope that the friends of the Temperance cause in Town will seek to secure the Rev. gentleman's services again at no distant day to lecture in Peterborough.

—Forty-five ladies are now employed in Washington in clipping treasury notes. Among them is one whose annual adoration cost $50,000.

☞ In referring to the speech of the President of Victoria College at the Convocation held lately at Cobourg, the Sun very severely rebukes that gentleman for stating that no political influence had been used to obtain for the College grants funds. The chastising could no more severe than merited.

POSTSCRIPT.

Peterborough, May 28th, 1862.

To Mr. ALEXANDER GRAHAM,

Sir,

I hereby demand the name and address of the writer of the libel upon my character, which appeared in the last number of your Journal, bearing date May 22nd, 1862.

(Signed.)
WILLIAM JAMES HICKIE.

Just as we were going to press we received the above communication, which we give for the benefit of our readers. If in our last issue any one can find the "libel" referred to we will readily acknowledge our obligation to him. To assert there is a libel on one's character, and to demand the name of the writer of a communication, not designating it, is not business like. If Mr. Hickie wishes to muzzle a free press, we beg to notify him he can not do it in these parts. The muzzle is as harmless as the man. If Mr. Hickie or any one else has been assailed in our columns we open them readily for their vindication.

Alexander Birnie.

A melancholy illustration of the passage "The way of transgressors is hard," has just been given to the world in the death of the above mentioned individual, editor of the Falkirk Advertiser, Scotland. Relinquishing his editorship he wended his way to Edinburgh, in the expectation of obtaining some employment. There, after drinking deeply, he fell into one of those dens of infamy which abound in all large cities, and was robbed of the money he had left. Seized with remorse he procured Laudanum and attempted to poison himself, but taking an overdose, his stomach rejected the potion, and his life was for a time saved. He then continued his journey Southward towards Newcastle, but finding his strength failing, he crept into a straw-stack, in the neighborhood of Morpeth, and covered himself with straw intending either to sleep or starve himself to death. In this condition he was found. He was removed to the hospital of the workhouse, and every necessity ministered to, but all to late. Mortification had already set in his feet, and finally carried him off. We subjoin the diary which he kept during the fortnight of his wretchedness, and which is one of the most touching recitals of human misery, remorse, and final hope, that we ever remember to have read:—

"February 8th.—Whoever finds me, send word to Falkirk, to James Wyse, Ironmonger. I was robbed last night of about $3, all I had, and a suit of clothes. The Cock of the Steeple.

"February 10th.—The third day, and have not had a morsel of food.

"Tuesday, February 11th.—I have had but a piece of coarse bread since Monday last. Surely the bitterness of death is past. Since then I have travelled from Edinburgh. My existence has been a curse to myself and to every body connected with me, through my own folly. Send word to James Wyse, Ironmonger, Falkirk, that the Cock of the Steeple was found dead, and where. Send word to James Graham, Chester-le-Street, Durham, my wife's brother. God help her and my poor children. I drank laudanum on Saturday, in Edinburgh, but vomited it.

"Wednesday, February 12th.—Another day and not a bit of food; five days—only a bit of coarse bread. Nothing stronger than water has entered my lips. My clothes have never been off, nor have I been in a bed. The side of a hay-rick or a plantation has been my bed. But I am justly punished. Don't bury me like a dog; my articles and speeches in this book will show that I deserve better. I had no idea that the body, especially one as feeble as mine, was capable of so much endurance. Since Saturday morning last I have lived on about two pennyworth of bread, with no other drink than water. I have never been in a bed, seldom under a covering, and then only some straw, save one night I lay in a pot hat.

"Thursday, 13th.—I have now lain under some straw, by a hay-stack, near Morpeth, last night and all day; God knows if ever I shall be able to proceed any farther. I would like to have got to Chester-le-Street, to be buried there, that my poor wife, when she looked on my grave, might forgive and weep.

"Friday, 14th.—Still lying here, but very weak. Just a week since I left Falkirk Manse. I could only raise £3 10s. to pay my printer's account. What a..... of suffering it has been, but I trust it has been for my good. Speak kindly of me to my children. I am not able to walk, but I still have strength in my ordinary sense. I do not feel, but a painful drawing of breath every time I breathe. Friday afternoon, Feb. 14.—Life is a torment. I have misspent it. No man had ever better opportunities, or made worse use of them. Send word to Falkirk, say the "Cock of the Steeple is dead." I forsook God, and he has forsaken me. Let my wretched fate be a warning to all, especially that they may never drink strong drink; it and unlawful lust have been my ruin. O God have mercy upon me for the sake of Jesus! Five or six days and nights alone, with conscience on the past life, and God, have a wonderful effect upon the mind. If I die now, I die not without hope—I believe, but with trembling.

"One week my punishment has lasted. I still lie here, but very weak and much pained in the bowels.

"Sunday, 16th.—Another day without food or drink; cold. When will the trial be over?

"Monday, 17th.—O God grant me patience.

"Tuesday 18th.—Alone, without a soul to see or speak to, a bit of bread, or a drop of drink for six days and nights; how long can it be?

"Wednesday, 19th.—This cannot hold out long. Help, O Lord!

"Friday, 21st.—The 9th day without food; got a drink of water last night.

"Saturday, 22nd.—Eleven days; my legs are numb. O God, when will it end?

"Monday, 24th.—Oh, I am weary; one part of my body appears to be dead. I cannot go for a drink now. 26th, Feb.—Seventeen days' suffering, during that time had twice a piece of bread, twelve days without a morsel.

Tuesday, 25th.—Death comes on; I must him without fear. Jesus is all. Oh, he has saved me, put me as by fire, these thirteen days. O bless him for them; to Him I commit my soul, my memory, my family, my all. Amen.

"ALEXANDER BIRNIE."

OUR QUEBEC CORRESPONDENCE.

Quebec, 21st May, 1862.

To say one cogitation of what was passing within the halls of the Legislature, it was apparent that the Cartier-Macdonald Cabinet was growing every day weaker, and one by one ministerial supporters were declaring their determination no longer to retain in power, men who had so grossly abused the trust committed to them by the Country. Existing were the looks and words of Messrs. Cartier and Macdonald, and their followers at the beginning of the Session. They seemed to have become emboldened by success, and strange political doctrines were unblushingly broached, and political crimes haughtily defended by those men, at whose signal a subservient majority was generally found to rise in their defence. But the Opposition hammer ceased not to deal blow after blow upon the apparently immovable pillars, until disintegration took place, and finally, the indignation of the majority could no longer be repressed—although the desire was generally entertained to adopt without delay an effective militia system, yet so determined were the majority to express their want of confidence at the first opportunity, that they without giving expression to their desire and determination, relative to the defence of the Country, prevented the second reading of a bill, when by so doing they ejected from office those who had for so long a time abused their sacred trust.

On Monday the 20th, Mr. Cartier announced that the Militia Bill would be proceeded with the next day, and the second reading be pressed to a vote. A long debate was naturally expected, and many members had girded themselves for the battle. On Tuesday morning the Opposition held their meeting, and after deliberation, they agreed to move resolutions embodying their determination to provide for the defence of the country, but expressing their dissatisfaction at the scheme submitted.

Tuesday came, and in due course the Militia Bill was brought up for its second reading. As is often the case, there appeared some awkwardness on both sides to commence the debate, and more quickly than usual, the Speaker ordered the members to be called in, when by the rules of the House, no further debate is permitted. This unexpected position took a large majority by surprise, and was one of real difficulty. The Government evidently courted defeat on the Militia measure, and out manoeuvered their opponents. It appeared that the disaffected supporters of the late ministry were prepared to move an amendment to the resolutions of the Opposition, involving a vote of want of confidence, by which it was feared that the cause would be thrown into the hands of Ministerial supporters to be followed by a continuance of their policy. At the last moment, a few among the leaders of the Opposition altered their plans, and believing that they could thereby defeat the Ministerialists, resolved to test their strength on the bare reading of the bill—although several strong opponents of the late administration felt called upon to support a measure involving the defence of the country, so thoroughly was the ministerial party broken up, that they suffered defeat under circumstances most advantageous to themselves. Had the resolutions alluded to been proposed, and a direct vote of want of confidence been submitted to the House, there would have been a majority of thirty against ministers. No doubt there will be a cry of want of patriotism raised against those, who ventured to defeat the late Ministry on the first opportunity. That this might have been effected on any occasion readers is a matter of regret, that it was not done in a different manner or at another time.

For some time past, each week seemed to reveal fresh acts of ministerial wrong doing. The public money most unblushingly plundered. Ministerial supporters receiving in some instances, either for themselves or for their masters, three or four hundred per cent. above their just dues—willful mismanagement palpable in the various departments—large sums expended without consent of parliament—several hundreds of thousands of dollars on the Ottawa buildings—nearly five hundred thousand advanced to the Grand Trunk during the past year, in spite of the oft repeated dissatisfaction of the people—and at the last moment, the rebuilding of Spencer wood, when a removal to Ottawa was professedly contemplated. Add to all this an amount of six millions to be provided for, almost equal to the whole annual revenue of the province, and a proposed scheme of taxation calculated to derange all commercial interests of the province, and it is not surprising that retribution, though long delayed, should at last reach the gigantic wrong doers. We do not yet know what may be the true financial condition of the province, and it is clearly the duty of all, to have in abeyance for the time important questions involving Constitutional changes, and invite all parties in the endeavour thoroughly to investigate the past, and to provide for the wants of the future. The just demand of Upper Canada for a re-adjustment of the representation is thus necessarily delayed for a season, and let the blame rest upon those men who have so grossly betrayed the trust committed to them, and have brought the Country to the verge of insolvency. They have done their best to strengthen the hands of the French Canadians. They may have delayed, but perhaps only to strengthen the determination of Upper Canada, to obtain their just position. The present administration cannot be all that is satisfactory to the West. On the contrary the Premiership of Mr. Sanfield MacDonald is as unjust as it is unfortunate. As is usual on such occasions, the Governor no doubt acted upon the advice given by the outgoing administration, and up to the last moment they sustained their characters as traitors to Upper Canada. They thought as to embarrass the opposition, that an administration could be formed, and the ball would be again rolled into their own lap, or into the hands of their friends, who would screen or support their misdeeds. Had they succeeded, it would not have been the first time.

What is the position of Mr. Sanfield MacDonald, the gentleman selected by the Governor General, by the advice of Messrs. Cartier & MacDonald, to organize Upper Canada, and to become Premier of the Cabinet? He is an eccentric politician—he prides himself upon his isolation—he deals his blows with equal prowess against Ministry and Opposition—he has not a single follower—he represents no party, no interests beyond the little town of Cornwall and its vicinity. He is a Roman Catholic, and has uniformly opposed the just demands of Upper Canada on the Representation question, and yet Messrs. Cartier & Macdonald reason-aided Sir Etienne, lately arrived amongst us, and therefore necessarily more dependent upon his advisers at such a juncture—they recommend His Excellency to send for Mr. Sanfield Macdonald. "Is it possible for the plain understanding to find in among the object they had in view. It appeared therefore the first day of the Opposition to defeat their designs, and laying aside their party dignity, to co-operate with any and all in order to rescue the country out of the hands of its betrayers. Great difficulty was experienced, and only the serious circumstances into which the Province has been brought, would warrant the temporary abandonment of principles, which have been so ably and stoutly maintained. If these principles have sustained damage, let the blame and responsibility rest upon their heads who have brought the country into so grave a position—impoverished and crushed.

The Necessity of Compromise.

Will our readers excuse us of using too trite a truism in saying that society is founded and can exist only on a system of compromise and conciliation; and that a series of violences, however successful for a time, is at last always arrested by violence, or terminated by exhaustion too? Self-evident and common place as this assertion appears, it is, nevertheless, too often forgotten or despised by the politicians, who, under any and every form of government, attain to the power of the State; and it is to the oblivion of this maxim that the convulsions which have been attended by civil war, in any and in every country, may justly be attributed. The man who deserves the name of statesman has this fact constantly in his mind; and whether as an emperor, a constitutional monarch, or the president of a republic, measures carefully how far and how much the authority of the actual government may be strained; and how far and how much the forbearance and submission of a political opponent may be tampered. There are three notable examples of the effect, respectively, of compromise, conciliation, and violence, within the memory of most our readers; and the conduct of Louis Philippe, Louis Napoleon, and Sir Robert Peel, under circumstances which, in their results, are a sufficient proof of our assertion, may be referred to as a satisfactory illustration of the necessity of forbearance, and of the consequences of violence in the administration of government. Louis Philippe lost the crown and kingdom because his Parliamentary majority, controlled by M. Guizot, refused to the minority under M. Thiers, electoral reform, and the right or privilege of a public procession and banquet; and when it was whispered in the House of Commons that Louis Philippe, as "John Smith," had arrived in England from Havre, Mr. Hume opposed the House and told the news to Sir R. Peel, who, eighteen months before, had repealed the Corn Laws. "Ha!" said Sir Robert, as he pointed over his shoulder to the Tory gentleman behind him, "these gentlemen would have led me into the same sort of difficulty." The return of Louis Napoleon is too known, but is not less remarkable; and some of our readers who entertain peculiar notions as to the manner in which the Emperor governs France, will perhaps be surprised at learning how much the popular will governs the Emperor; and that the system of centralization, which seems formed expressly for the exercise of absolute power by an individual, is really a means of ascertaining the wishes and opinions of the people. When any great public question agitates the public mind, such as war or peace, a commercial treaty, or a political change, the Emperor at intervals of every ten days ascertains the opinions of nearly every one of the millions who acknowledge his authority or live under his rule. Every prefect of police, every mayor of a canton, every sous-prefect of a department, ascertains the popular tendencies of the inhabitants of his district, arrondissement, town, or bourg; and returns and reports, condensed and arranged, are transmitted to the Minister in Paris. Thus, during the Crimean war, the sudden change of the Emperor's mind from war to peace, which was attributed to sick qualms, insincerity, or fraud, was really submission to the will of the French intervention will be caused by the action of the popular mind on the will of the Emperor. Hitherto, the millions who, in France, Belgium, and especially in Great Britain, are suffering, in want of work and deprivation of the absolute necessaries of life, brought upon them, have borne with patient hope the penalties inflicted by other men's mind-ede. Heretofore, the tradesman, the mechanic, the artisan, and the laborer of Europe has stood with folded hands and aching eyes, watching in quiet self-restraint, the gradual decay of health and strength and happiness in his wife and his little ones. Day after day the loom has been idle and the shuttle still. Hour after hour the comforts and the small luxuries of the hard-handed, strong-muscled, nature's true noblemen of Great Britain have decreased. Want has tempted that democracy of labor with which too many republicans only affect a hypocritical sympathy; and, whilst the press of the United States, in profligate untruth, accuses the aristocracy of Europe as encouraging the internecine war, which has been occasioned by the stupid incompetency of politicians in the United States, the democracy, the working-men of Europe, silently suffering from the difficulties and distress brought upon them by the great republic. Hitherto it has seemed that the European artisan must console himself like Æsop's patridge, who, when pecked and ill-treated by the poultry in the barn-yard, solaced himself with the reflection, that as the cocks and hens had little consideration for each other, it was not to be expected that they would be very polite to a patridge; and so, whilst, the Americans are cutting each other's throats, no one must expect that they will be very attentive to the necessities of other nations. Nevertheless, a nation like an individual, is a member in a society; and unites like individuals, the ends together, only by adopting a system of compromises and concessions. It seems as if the words of De Tocqueville had a fuller bearing than he intended when he wrote: "In this society, so proud of its "morality and philanthropy, one meets with "complete insensibility, with a cold unconcerned "passionate egotism. The true owners of "this continent, they say, are those who "know how to turn its resources to account. Satisfied by this reasoning, the "American goes to church to hear a minister of the gospel repeat to him, that all "men are brothers, and that the Almighty "who made them all on the same model, "has imposed on all the duty of helping "each other." (Vol. 1, p. 367). This fearful sarcasm which DeTocqueville had in reference to the treatment of the Indians, appears now applicable to the conduct of the United States equally towards each other. Yet DeTocqueville did not make this observation il-naturally, or with the intention of giving offence. On the contrary, he says, "I have endeavored to "describe the natural tendencies of opinions and institutions in a democratic society. I have pointed out the dangers to "which it exposes man. But I have never "said that these tendencies, if discovered "in time, might not be resisted and those "dangers averted." (Vol. 2, p. 13.) Following at a humble distance, and with unequal steps, the example of the author of a book of which Harper Collard said, "since Montesquieu there has been nothing like it," we respectfully urge on the attention of our readers, the necessity of watching with disregard of the wishes, the waste, and the rights of others, which entirely enfeeble that either a nation or an individual has a complete title to him self, or can exist in society on any other system than one of concession and conciliation. The observation of President Lincoln, in his inaugural address, has lost none of its force. "You cannot fight always," he then said to the assembled wisdom of his country, "and when after "much loss on both sides, and no gain on "either, you cease fighting, the identical "questions as to terms of intercourse are "again upon you." In other words, if you would live in society together you must concede to each other. At present there does not seem any probability of that foreign interference in the affairs of the United States which some of our contemporaries are foretelling. Nevertheless, the distress which the working people of Europe are suffering in consequence of the American civil war, demands the attention, asks our sympathy, and cannot safely be treated with carelessness or indifference.

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1862

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A. H. St. GERMAN to circulate five thousand copies of the 'Toronto Evening Journal' to parties named by us containing our advertisement.

ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the 'Toronto Evening Journal' will receive one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly "Journal," a large first class paper established in 1857, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

The terms for advertising are less than has ever been offered to the public before, viz; three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without changes) will be inserted at one dollar per line by the year, when they contain six lines or less

A NEW STORY.

IN THE

SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:

A FIRST-CLASS

INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 9th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled

DELLBURN HOUSE,

A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1745.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers.

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the British people and their families from all parts of the old country residing on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its Home and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal, and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspaper. Another most important feature of this journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	350,980 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantee	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,543 2 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	98,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,831 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 1s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 23 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued.	No. of Policies		New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

ALBION HOTEL,
MONTREAL.

L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.

IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST-PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made are commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

MATHEWS' VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE.

THIS CELEBRATED DYE WAS FIRST prepared in 1845; since that time it has been used by three scores, and in no instance has it failed to give perfect satisfaction.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the cheapest in the world. Its price is only 50 cents, and each bottle contains double the quantity of dye contained in those usually sold for one dollar.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the safest composition of its class. It is warranted not to injure the hair, or the scalp, in the slightest degree.

THE VENETIAN DYE

works with rapidity and certainty. It causes no annoyance or trouble to those who use it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

produces any shade that may be desired—one that will not fade, crock, nor wash out; one that is as permanent as the hair itself.

THE VENETIAN DYE

does not, in any manner, interfere with the natural softness of the hair; it neither scorches nor dries it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the best, cheapest, safest, most convenient, most successful, and most permanent Dye ever used.

THE VENETIA DYE

having gained an extended reputation, the public are cautioned against purchasing any prepared in the same style, under the name or different names, as they are mere imitations, and liable to be injury.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. In the extensive range of Blood diseases for which a remedy is required, there is hardly a case in which the superiority of this Sarsaparilla is not manifest to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it, both in the early stages of development and when the system is saturated with the poison, the public are already informed. It is offered as a positive antidote for that Poison in the blood which develops itself in such fearful forms on the surface of the body, and within fills every part with corruption and death. Under the influence of this Sarsaparilla the vitiated blood is changed to healthy nourishment, the sores it would heal, and the place of impurity is filled with the pure principles of life. THIS FOUND WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

has long been needed. After earnest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it STRIKES AT THE HEAT OF THE ailment, ARRESTS IT, KILLS IT, ERADICATES IT, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and 'one than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

THE FIRST GUID DAY.

BY DAVID WINGATE.

It is the slowery April—
The spring-time has begun,
And o' the comin' summer
There's a promise in the sun'.
The hawthorn buds are burstin',
The birds, in cheer's gay,
A hymn o' thanks as warblin'
For the First Guid Day.
The breeze is warm and westlin',
The fir tree saftly rustlin',
The doves amang them nestlin'
Say, "Winters past away,"
While clouds o' downy lightness
Float on its snowy whiteness,
As if to aid the brightness
O' the First Guid Day.

It is the herald, April—
The farmer looks abroad,
And thinks how such a sunshine
Will dry the wettest clod.
Stoor-cloud he sees in fancy
Ahint his arrows play,
While dreams of wealth are whispered
By the First Guid Day.
And see! by yonder plantin',
Arbort the lassie-regrantin',
Wi' tails in air tossed wanton,
His stirks leap jauntily.
And why are they sae canty,
While grass is yet sae scanty?
They feel the comin' plenty
In the First Guid Day.

It is the buddy April—
The roads wi' hairns are throng,
Whase fairy glee is burstin'
In rude and rapturous sang;
Ilk little face but lately
Sae joyless and sae blae,
Is wreathed wi' smiles and roses
On the First Guid Day.
And hark! that gentle burnnin'
From yonder cottage comin',
Is it the careless thrummin'
O' fingers skilled to play?
Oh no! it is the singin'
O' bees around it wingin',
The gladsome tidings bringin'
O' the First Guid Day.

It is the joyous April:
We feel—we ken it hoo—
As if the world were better,
And our lease of life were new.
Our hearts are beatin' lightly,
And on life's brambly brae
The upward path seems smoother
On the First Guid Day.
The lark on wings untirin',
To reach the lift aspirin',
The bard below is firin'
To sing a crowning lay.
All nature says: "Be cheary,
O' gladne a never weary,
But banish all things eerie
Frae the First Guid Day."

Miscellaneous.

A Philosophic Darkey.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from the Cumberland river gives the following colloquy with a philosophic darkey:—

I noticed on the hurricane deck to-day an elderly darkey with a very philosophical and retrospective cast of countenance, squatted on his bundle toasting his shins against the chimney, and a patently plunged into a profound meditation. Finding upon inquiry that he be onged to the Ninth Illinois, one of the most gallantly behaved, and heavy losing regiment at the Fort Donelson battle, and part of which was abroad, I began to interrogate him upon the subject. His philosophy was so much in the Falstaffin vein that I will give his views in his own words, as near as my memory serves me.

"Were you in the fight?"

"Had a little taste of it, sa."

"Stood your ground, did you?"

"No sa, I runs."

"Run at the first fire, did you?"

"Yes, and would hab run sooner, had I know'd it war comin."

"Why, that wasn't very creditable to your courage."

"Dat isn't in my line, sa—cookin's my perfeshun."

"Well, but have you no regard for your reputation?"

"Reputation's nuffin to me by the side ob life."

"Do you consider your life worth more than other people's?"

"It's worth more to me sa."

"Then you must value it very highly?"

"Yes, sa, I does—more dan all de world—more dan a million ob dollars, sa, for what would dat be wuth to man wid de bref out ob him? Self-preserbashun am de fus law wid me."

"But why should you act on a different rule from other men?"

"Because different men set different values upon dar lives—mine is not in de market."

"But if you lost it, you would have the satisfaction of knowing that you died for your country."

"What satisfaction would dat be to me when de power ob feelin' war gone?"

"Then patriotism and honor are nothing to you?"

"Nuffin whatever, sa—I regard dem as among de vanities."

"If our soldiers were like you, traitors might have broken up the Government without resistance."

"Yes, sa, dar would hab been no help for it, wouldn't put my life in de scale 'gainst any Government dat ever existed, for no Government could replace the loss to me."

"Do you think any of your company would have missed you if you had been killed?"

"May be not, sa,—a dead white man ain't much to dem niggers, let alone a dead nigga—but I'd a missed myself, and dat was de point wid me."

It is safe to say that the dusky corpse of that African will never darken the field of carnage.

—Fifty millions of lucifer matches are daily consumed in England. Those employed in making lucifers are liable to a fearful disease called "necrosis," caused by the fumes of the phosphorus, which attacks the jaw-bone, sometimes quite destroying it. This disease has induced a philanthrophic inventor to invent a "safety match," in which no phosphorus is used.

A Fortunate Loss.

Many years ago a lady sent her servant, a young man of about 20 years of age, and a native of that part of the country where his mistress resided, to the neighboring town, with a ring which required some alterations, to be delivered into the hands of a jeweller. The young man went the shortest way across the fields; and coming to a little wooden bridge that crossed a small stream, he leaned against the rail, and took the ring out of its case to look at it. While doing so it slipped out of his hand and fell into the water. He thought it fell into the hollow of the stump of a tree under water, but he could not find it. The time taking in the search was so long that he feared to return to tell his story, thinking it incredible and that he should be suspected of having gone into evil company, and either gamed it away or sold it. In this fear he determined never to return, left wages and clothes, and finally ran away. This seemingly great misfortune was the making of him. His intermediate history I know not, but this—that after many years' absence, either in the East or West Indies he returned with a considerable fortune. He now wished to clear himself with his old mistress. Ascertaining that she was living, he purchased a diamond ring of considerable value, which he determined to present in person, and clear his character, by telling his tale, which the credit of his present position might testify. He took the coach to the town of——, and thence set out to walk the distance of a few miles. He found I should tell you, on alighting, a gentleman who resided in the neighborhood, and who was bound for the adjacent village. They walked together, and in conversation, this former servant, now a gentleman with graceful manners and very agreeable address, related the circumstances that made him leave the country abruptly many years before. As he was telling this they came to the very wooden bridge. "Here," said he, "it was just here that I dropped the ring; and there is the very bit of old tree, into a hole of which it fell—just there." At the same time he put down the point of his umbrella into a hole of a knot in the tree, and on drawing it up, to the astonishment of both, found the very ring on the ferule of the umbrella. I need not tell the rest, but make the reflection—Why was it that he did not so easily find it immediately after it had fallen in? It was an accident like one of those in Parnell's Hermit, which, though a seeming chance, was of purpose and most important.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Quite to the point.

Some years since a black man called on a clergyman in Western New York and avowed himself a fugitive slave, and asked for food and shelter, which was freely accorded. Two or three persons being cognizant of the fact, called to see the "runaway nigger," when the following interesting dialogue took place:—

"S'pose you had plenty hard times down South; licking a plenty?"

"No—never was whipped."

"Wasn't?—well you had to work awful hard?"

"My work was very light."

"I guess your clothes were not very nice?"

"I was well clothed—a good servant?"

"I reckon your victuals were not uncommon fine?"

"As good as I desired."

"Well, I should give it as my opinion that you were a mighty big fool for running away from such a place as that, just for the sake of shirking for yourself."

"Gentlemen, my place down South is vacant. Any of you can have it by applying for it."

There is a world of logic in that.

An Incident with a Moral.

A chaplain in one of the regiments on the Potomac narrates the case of a sick soldier which strikingly illustrates the reasoning of many men in the camp, and out of it. Some one had mentioned to the soldier the case of the Vermonter who was sentenced to be shot, for sleeping at his post. During the evening following, the sick man imagined he was to be shot. The surgeon being called, the following conversation ensued:

"Doctor, I am to be shot in the morning, and wish you to send for the chaplain. I desire to make all necessary preparations for my end."

"They shall not shoot you; I'll take care of you. Whoever comes to take you from here, I shall have them arrested and put under guard."

"Will you, dear doctor? Thank you, thank you—well then, you need not send for the chaplain just yet."

HOMELY TRUTHS FOR WIVES.—Although your husband may neglect to give you a good dress, do not seek revenge by giving him a good dressing. Do not hesitate between the choice of an expensive mantle and your husband's affections; the former may be dear to your back, but the latter should be dear to your bosom. Should your husband bring a friend home to partake of the remains of yesterday's meal, do not be churlish, but let a warm smile season the cold repast. Prefer country rambles to town lounges; the colour of the roses are brighter than the hues of silk, and the dewdrops outshine the jeweler's gems. Be careful in brewing "the cup which cheers, but not inebriates;" strong tea is better than weak argument. The hand which is pledged at the altar is not disgraced in sewing on a button; and remember as you sow, so shall you reap in more senses than one.

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE.—On dit that the wife of a Yorkshire baronet, distant cousin of her present attractions, has very recently left her husband's home in Yorkshire, under the protection of a young gentleman for whom she had formed a passionate attachment whilst he was being entertained as a guest by her husband. The baronet was formerly an officer in the army and the lady is the daughter of a clergyman.

Hard Times at Red River.

We have, time and again, adverted the evil consequences of last year's flooding. Another picture is just presenting itself to view. A large number of people are destitute of seed-wheat for the current year, and unless they get assistance from others will have to go without a crop. In many cases, they have no bread even now, much less can they store up a sufficiency for the months that must elapse ere the next harvest furnish its abundance. The times are really hard in Red River, and, to our certain knowledge, there is at this moment very serious destitute in some districts. Thus is the very worst season for the poor. Those who depend for a livelihood upon fishing will find relief as soon as ever the ice breaks up; and in seven or eight weeks our buffalo-hunters will be able to feast upon their favorite roasts and tongues. There is, moreover, always a good supply provided in full season for the winter, but the supply too generally becomes exhausted about the month of February or March. Thus March and April are the hardest months for fishermen or hunters. It is these consequently, who are now passing through a trying ordeal. The regular, professional farmers—those who make it their business to farm and depend upon it mainly or exclusively for a livelihood—are, of course, not so "hard put to," but even they have nothing to spare. The failure of the crops last year has caused the general scarcity, and this scarcity of things must continue until the summer's hunt and summer's harvest furnish their supplies.

We are happy to learn that the Hudson's Bay Company are doing much to relieve the pressure, by making advances to the poor. It is really much to their credit that in seasons of general scarcity, they come forward liberally with their bounty. Last spring, during the flood, they advanced an enormous quantity of pemican to the poor, many of whom, it was well known, would not pay and have not paid. So they are doing this year, and we have no sympathy with the man that cannot give credit for such generous conduct.—Nor'-Wester.

"The Rest of Mankind."

That erratic genius, Parson Brownlow, beholding the end of the rebellion rapidly approaching, and not having had enough of strife and bloodshed, is quaffing in the prospect of a possible war with England and France as a means of glutting his sanguinary appetite. The effect upon him of the fearful scenes through which he has lately passed has been something like the effect of a taste of blood upon a ravenous tiger—it has roused all the brute in him. In a speech, delivered a few days since, he showed himself a true believer in "American invincibility," threatened to "lick" perfidious Albion, and to "kick France out of Mexico;" and, in addition to these Herculean labors, to "whip the world, and the rest of mankind." Now, while we admire the man's devoted loyalty to his country—while we esteem him as a brave man, we incline to think that his popularity as a patriot and a soldier is owing as much to natural pugnacity as it is to intelligent convictions or devotion to the constitution and laws. But be this as it may, men like him make foes as readily as they quell them; awaken hard feelings among friends with as much ease as they deal hard blows to their enemies. Any commonwealth may be proud of having such men in her armies, but while they do well with the weapons of steel, they are at best but dangerous friends when they resort to the use of that little fleshy instrument which, as well as the sword and the gun, has "life and death in its power." Such papers as the New York Herald, the London Times, and other journals, big and little, do quite enough of that sort of thing, and Parson Brownlow, and all good men, should remember and follow the example of the "Father of his County," who "was first in peace" as well as "first in war." A true patriot not only stands ready to interpose his person between his country's foemen and his country's heart when the war cloud bursts, but, knowing the terribly disastrous effects of war upon victor as well as vanquished, he wisely uses all his energy, influence, and eloquence, in endeavouring to promote peace on earth and good-will among men.—Baptist.

TO PREVENT FLIES FROM TEASING HORSES.—Take two or three small handsful of walnut leaves, upon which pour two or three quarts of soft cold water, let it infuse one night, and pour the whole next morning into a kettle and let it boil for a quarter of an hour. When cold it will be fit for use. No more is required than to wet a sponge, and before the horse goes out of the stable, let those parts which are most irritated be smeared over with liquor, viz: the flank, etc. Not only the lady or gentleman who rides out for pleasure will derive a benefit from the leaves thus prepared, but the coachman, the wagoner, and all others who use horses during the hot months.

"ALIVE AND KICKING" AGAIN.—The Peterboro' Examiner after a few weeks sleep has arisen again, and may now be classed among the "living papers" of the day. Mr. Alexander Graham, the present Publisher and Proprietor, is a practical printer, and well known around that section of the country. We hope he will be more fortunate than his predecessor, in conducting the Examiner—that is financially.—Port Hope Guide.

PETERBORO' EXAMINER.—Peterboro': Alexander Graham, Publisher.—It gives us great pleasure to notice this well-conducted journal. Our want of support in former proprietor had to desperation point. Seems it has come onto Mr. Graham's hands now life and spark has been infused into it. Its principles are liberal and enlightened, and we wish our contemporary every success.—Canadian Post.

Capt. Blakely thinks that a shot weighing 700 pounds would crush in the sides of any iron-plated ship.

Sons of Temperance Column.

A Soliloquy.

"Say Doctor, may I not have rum
To quench this burning thirst within?
Bless on this cursed bed I lie,
And cannot get one drop of gin.
I ask not health, nor even life—
Life! what a curse its been to me!
I'd rather sink in deepest hell,
Than drink again his misery.

"But Doctor, may I not have rum?
One drop alone is all I crave.
Great this small boon—I ask no more—
Then I'll defy—yes, even the grave;
Then, without fear, I'll fold my arms,
And bid the monster strike his dart,
To haste me from this world of woe.
And claim his own—ruin ruined heart.

"A thousand curses on his head
Who gave me first the poisoned bowl,
Who taught me first this cause to drink—
Drink—death and ruin to my soul.
My soul! oh, cruel, horrid thought!
Will well I know thy certain fate,
With what instinctive horror shrink
The serpent from that awful state!

"Lost—lost—I know forever lost!
To me no ray of hope can come:
My fate is sealed, my doom is——
But give me rum: I will have rum.
But, Doctor, don't you see out there?
In that dark corner low he sits:
See! how he sports his fiery tongue,
And at me fiery brimstone spits!

"Go, chase him out. Look! here he comes,
Now on my bed he wants to stay;
He shan't be there. O God! oh God!
Go way, I say! go way! go way!
Quick! chain me fast, and tie me down:
There now—he clasps me in his arms;
Down—down the window—close it tight:
Say, don't you hear my wild alarms?

"Say, don't you see this demon fierce?
Does no one hear? will no one come?
Oh save me—save me—I will give—
But rum! I must have—will have rum.
* * * * * * *
Ah! now he's gone; once more I'm free
He, the boasting knave and liar—
He said that he would take me off
Down to—but there! my bed's on fire!

"Fire! water! help! come, haste—I'll die,
Come, take me from this burning bed:
The smoke—I'm choking—cannot cry;
There now—its catching at my head!
But see! again that demon's come;
Look! there he peeps through yonder glass
Mark how how his burning eyeballs flash!
How fierce he grins! what brought him back?

"There stands his burning coach of fire,
He smiles and beckons me to come.
What are those words he's written there?
'In Hell we never sup for rum!'
One loud, one piercing shriek was heard;
One yell rang out upon the air;
One sound, and one alone came forth—
The victim's cry of wild despair.

"Why longer wait? I am ripe for hell;
A spirit's sent to bear me down.
There, in the regions of the lost,
I sure will wear a fiery crown
Damned, I know, without a hope!
(One moment more, and then I'll come!
And there I'll quench my awful thirst
With boiling, burning, fiery rum."

Advertisement of an honest Rumseller.

Friend and neighbors! Having just opened a commodious shop for the sale of "Liquid Fire," I embrace this early opportunity of informing you that on Saturday, I shall commence the business of making drunkards, paupers, and beggars, for the sober, industrious and respectable to support.

I shall deal in "familiar spirits," which shall excite men to riot and robbery, and blood; and by so doing diminish the comforts, augment the expenses, and endanger the welfare of the community.

I will undertake at short notice, for a small sum, and with great expedition, to prepare inmates for the asylum, the poor house, the prison, and the gallows.

I will furnish an article which shall increase the number of fatal accidents, multiply the number of distressing diseases; and render those harmless incurable.

I will furnish a drug, which shall deprive some of life, many of reason, most of property, all of peace; which shall cause fathers to be fiends, wives widows, children orphans and all mendicants.

I will cause the rising generation to grow up in ignorance, and prove a burden and a nuisance to the nation.

I will corrupt the ministers of religion, obstruct the progress of the gospel, defile the purity of the church, and cause temporal, spiritual and eternal death; and if any be so impertinent as to inquire why I have the audacity to bring such accumulated misery upon a comparatively happy land, my honest reply is necessary.

The spirit trade is the most lucrative, and some professing Christians give it their cheerful countenance.

I have license from the court, and if I don't bring these evils upon you, somebody else will.

I live in a land of liberty.

I have purchased the right to demolish the character, destroy the health, shorten the lives, and ruin the souls of those who choose to honor me with their custom.

I know that the Bible says: "Thou shalt not kill; that it pronounces a woe upon him who giveth his neighbor strong drink; and I also read in the Divine record that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven, and I cannot expect the drunkard maker to share a better fate. Yet what can I do?

FRIENDS OF HUMANITY! as you look at the horrid writhings of a fellow mortal in the grasp of the demon, and hear his cursing and his cries, and remember that he is a brother in the flesh for whom Christ died and who, but for rum, might have had a triumph over death and an eternity of glory; have you no compassion? And when you read the advertisement of the hoary ruffian and see a wretch in your neighborhood commence this business, knowing the weeping and wailing every keghead of rum will occasion, the property it will waste, the quarrels it will engender, the pain it will inflict, the souls it will destroy, does not your soul burn within indignation, and do you not say give us a MAINE LAW—Down with the traffic, the accursed traffic.

LIQUOR SELLER! Look at the business in all its awful realities. The RUM MANIAC is no fiction of the imagination. Hundreds have seen it; a hell upon earth. It is your workmanship, "you supply the guilty cause; you see the drunken effect; you witness the drunken rave," and do you rests six thousand curses.

"A thousand curses on his head
Who gave me first the poisoned bowl,
Who taught me first this cause to drink,—
Drink—death and ruin to my soul."

MODERATE DRINKER! See your end. That poor wretch once stood where you stand, once took his first glass; once said he could tread the viper in the dust, but where is he now? and where may you shortly be? O pause! Pause in your downward course. Think of the drunkard's end. Escape for your life! Another drink may be ruin forever!

WHAT AN EXCUSE.—"If I dont sell liquor, somebody else will." So says the liquor-seller, who holds his head up and asserts a claim to respectability and honesty. There is not a criminal in the States prisons who could not have made the same plea before the Court and Jury who convicted him. In this sinful world, it must perhaps be that offences come, but "woe to him by whom the offence cometh." The keeper of a gambling hell or brothel, may say with some silence, if he did not tempt souls to perdition, others would; but does that fact diminish his guilt?—Crusader.

DURABLE FENCE POSTS.—We have, from time to time, published numerous facts to prove that posts put in the ground top end down, will last longer than when placed the other way. We now add another to the list. Yesterday, a gentleman told us that he had just been removing some posts and rail fence, which he built twenty-three years ago. The fence posts set three butt down were nearly all rotted off in ten years, when new ones were set, in the same way, below the old ones, in the middle of each panel, and the old ones allowed to remain. The posts set fourteen years ago were now all rotted; but some gate-posts set twenty-four years, accidently with the top in the ground, are perfectly sound their entire length, and will probably last twenty four years more! We may state that the gate-posts were cut off at the forks of the trees, which made the upper ends largest, and hence the largest ends were placed in the ground.—Ohio Farmer.

THE CENSUS OF THE TOWN OF BRANTFORD.—Mr. Andrew Wilson informs us that he has completed the taking of the Census of the town of Brantford. He did the work inside of fifteen or sixteen days, and the result of his labours gives Brantford a population of 6756—as follows:—

King's Ward	787
Queen's do	1282
Brant do	1612
East do	1275
North do	780
	6756

It will thus be seen that Brantford has an increase over the census taken last year of about 500 souls. It will now, we think, be conceded that our town, so far as population is concerned, is the largest in the Province of Canada. Mr. Wilson did his work well and promptly, for which he deserves the thanks of the public generally.

A MORE DIFFICULT TASK.—Mr. Milnes may carry his Bill for enabling a man to marry his wife's sister. But when shall we see a bill passed for enabling a man to enter in the same house with his wife' mother!

A purse without money is not so bad as a head without brains; the first may be filled, the second cannot.

A gay old bachelor says of a lovely woman:—"To her virtues we give love—to her beauty, our admiration—to her temper the whole pacement."

—The Oxford Herald says that either an otter, a sturgeon, or an alligator has made its appearance in a mill-pond at Ingersoll. The water was drained off on the 24th so that the animal may show itself.

—A report prevails in Ottawa that a raft of timber passed over the Long Sault rapids at Grenville, and that twelve out of twenty men composing the crew were drowned. We have not been able as yet to obtain particulars.

BRITISH PREPARATIONS.—The Paris Patrie learns that two English brigades leave on the 26th for Bermuda with ordnance and ammunition. The Patrie asserts that England is about to concentrate troops and war material at Bermuda.

It is the wish of the Pope to have an exhibition at Rome next year, and Signor Tenerani, the great Roman sculptor, who has gone to commemorate on the government to the London Exhibition, is empowered to take the necessary preliminary steps in advance.

—The members of the Montreal Cricket Club are making active preparations for a vigorous campaign during the coming season. Most of the officers of the Guards, and the 60th and 47th regiments have become members, and as there are several good cricketers among them some fine play may be expected.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, May 30.

The Herald's Fort Monroe correspondent mentions the fact that colonel J. F. Hanson, of a Kentucky regiment, who was sent by a flag of truce to be exchanged for the gallant Col. Corcoran, has become disgusted with the Confederates and the rebellion, and will take the oath of allegiance.

Gen. Butler, says a New Orleans letter, has taken the wife of Gen. Beauregard, who was found to be in New Orleans, under his care and protection.

A letter from Gen. McClellan's army says that 3,000 Georgians, whose terms of enlistment had expired in the Confederate army were told that they must continue in the service. They loaded their guns, and the officers and all refused to obey the order, and no one dare attempt to make them do it. The result was the Confederates have disbanded and gone home.

Another valuable prize was brought into port last night. The steamer Constitution, alias George Washington, captured off the North Carolina coast, by the gunboat Victoria on the 22nd inst. It is believed that she has a valuable cargo.

Washington, May 30.

A telegraphic despatch has just been received at the War Department from an unofficial source, stating that the Confederates left Corinth last night, and that Gen. Nelson occupied their entrenchments at 8 o'clock this morning.

The following has just been received at the War Department:—

Head-Quarters, Department of the Mississippi, Camp on the Corinth road May 28th.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War—

Three strong reconnoitering columns advanced this morning on the right, centre and left, to feel the enemy and unmask his batteries.

The enemy hotly contested his ground at each point, but was driven back with considerable loss.

The column on the left encountered the strongest opposition.

Our loss is twenty-five killed and wounded.

The enemy left thirty dead on the field.

Our losses at other points are not yet ascertained. Some five or six officers and a number of privates were captured. The fighting will probably be renewed to-morrow at day-break. The whole country is so thickley wooded that we are compelled to feel our way.

(Signed,) H. W. HALLECK
Major General.

A despatch just received at the war Department fully corroborates the former message that Corinth is evacuated by the Confederates and occupied by our troops. Prisoners say the enemy left last night for Okolona, a point about 150 miles South of Corinth on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

New York, May 30.

The Times' special says the reason why Gen. Huger would not exchange Col. Corcoran for Col. Hanson is that Cols. Corcoran Wilcox and others, are held as hostages for the privateer-men. The latter are already at Fortress Monroe, and now that the requirements of the Confederates are known, they will be speedily granted, and the Union Colonels and others released.

New York, May 30.

A special despatch to the Post from Washington says: The news from Corinth is read here with much enthusiasm, and is believed that Gen. Halleck's continuous movements through an extremely difficult country are about to be crowned with success. It is thought Beauregard has been obliged to retreat, because of a stoppage of supplies when Com. Farragut's fleet got up above the mouth of Red river of Texas, the great source of Beauregard's supplies was cut off, and as our fleet advanced up the Mississippi, the region from which the Confederates could draw food for their great army became daily less, so that the position at Corinth became gradually but surely less tenable.

Washington, May 30.

The following were received from Corinth, this p. m.:—

Near Corinth, May 30.

To the Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

Gen. Pope's batteries opened upon the enemy's entrenchments yesterday, about ten o'clock a. m., and soon drove the Confederates from their advanced batteries. Major-General W. L. Sherman established another heavy battery yesterday a. m., within 1,000 yards of their works, and skirmishing parties advanced at daybreak this morning. Three of our divisions are already in the enemy's advanced works, about three-quarters of a mile from Corinth, which is in flames. The enemy has fallen back on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

(Signed,) H. W. HALLECK,
Major General.

Near Corinth, May 30.

To H n. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:—

The enemy's position and works in front of Corinth were exceedingly strong. He cannot occupy a stronger position in his flight. This morning he destroyed an immense amount of public and private property, stores, provision, waggons, tents, &c., for miles out of the town. The roads are filled with arms, haversacks, &c., thrown away by his fleeting troops. A large number of prisoners and deserters have been captured, estimated by Gen. Pope at 2,000.

Gen. Beauregard evidently distrusts his army or he would have defended so strong a position. His troops are generally much discouraged and demoralized. In all the engagements for the last few days their resistance has been slight.

(Signed.) H. W. HALLECK.
Major-General Commanding.

Norfolk, May 30.

Two fugitives arrived here yesterday direct from Richmond. They report an army of 200,000 men in the vicinity, among whom, both officers and men, dissatisfaction was very general. They were living upon half rations of bacon and bread. The fugitives state that Jefferson Davis has been heard to say that he would make the streets of the city run with blood before surrendering.

Washington, June 1.

The following despatch was received at the War Department this p. m.—Field of Battle, June 1st, 12 m.—We have had a desperate battle, in which the corps of Gens. Sumner, Heintzelman and Keyes have been engaged against greatly superior numbers.

Yesterday at ten o'clock, the enemy taking advantage of a terrible storm which had flooded the valley of the Chickahominy, attacked our troops on the right flank. Gen. Casey's division, which was in the first line, gave away unaccountably and disgracefully. This caused a confusion, during which the guns and baggage were lost; but Generals Hatzelman and Casey most gallantly brought up their troops, which checked the enemy. At the same time, however, we succeeded by great exertions in bringing across Generals Sedgwick's and Richardson's divisions, who drove back the enemy at the point of the bayonet, covering the ground with his dead.

This morning the enemy attempted to renew the conflict, but were everywhere repulsed. We have taken many prisoners, among whom is General Pettigrew and Col. Long.

Our loss is heavy, but that of the enemy must be enormous. With the exception of General Casey's division, the men behaved splendidly. Several fine bayonet charges had been made. The second Excelsior Regiment made two to-day.

(Signed,) G. B. McCLELLAN,
Maj-Gen.

Exporting the Battle from a Balloon.

Washington, June 1.

During the whole of the battle this morning, Prof. Lewis' balloon was overlooking the terrible scene from an altitude of about 2,000 feet. Telegraphic communication from the balloon to General McClellan, having direct connection with military wires, was successfully maintained, Mr Park Spring of Philadelphia, acting as operator. Every movement of the enemy was obvious and instantly reported.

This is believed to be the first time in which a balloon reconnoisance has been successfully made during a battle, and certainly the first time in which a telegraph station has been established in the air, to report the movements of the enemy, and the progress of a battle. The advantage to General McClellan must have been immense.

Corinth, May 31, via Cairo, June 1.

Special despatch to N. Y. Tribune—Yesterday morning our reserved divisions were brought up, and our entire front moved forward, the men having two days' rations in their haversacks. During the day we kept up a tremendous cannonading, shelling the roads; the rebels hardly showed themselves, but replied feebly with a few shots. Last night we threw up breastworks along our entire line, and slept on our arms within 100 yards of the enemy's breastworks.

At 6 o'clock this morning, Gen. Pope entered Cornith without the slightest resistance, and took possession. The rebel rear-guard, under Bragg, 10,000 strong, marched southward at midnight. The citizens assert positively that Beauregard was there in person, and left with the army.

Chicago, May 13.—A special dispatch from Cairo says, an Arkansas refugee arrived from the fleet to day, and says that Little Rock is fully occupied by the Federals, and that the white citizens who remain are decidedly loyal. The Arkansas State Legislature have scattered, and the Governor fled from the State. Helena now at Jackson, Miss.

Vicksburg has surrendered to the Federal fleet.

New York, June 2nd.

The Tribune's Washington dispatch says:—Lieutenant Frank C. Davis, was dispatched on Sunday last with a small squad to open communication between the land forces and the gun-boats, opposite City Point on James River. He accomplished his errand in a style so handsome, and surmounted such difficulties in doing it that he has been thanked by the Commanding General.

The Lieutenant reports that the Galena, which he visited is very much cut up by the enemy's shot. She will be obliged to go into dock before she can go into action again. A lot of shot are still sticking in her below the water line.

The World states that the Government has decided to accept all three months' militia regiments that will offer up to June 10th. They are to report themselves for duty at Washington, D. C., Columbus, Ohio, and St. Louis, Mo.

THE LATEST.

New York, June 3.

The Federal loss at the battle before Richmond was 3,0 0 instead of 300, as wrongly transmitted by the telegraph.

Our army has moved forward to Fair Oak, five miles from Richmond.

Jeff. Davis and Gov. Letcher were both at the late fight.

Head Quarters, Monday, 9 p.m.

Gen. Hooker made a reconnoisance today on the Williamsburg Turnpike to within four miles of Richmond without meeting the enemy in the face. Their pickets kept in sight but retreated at his approach. Every one feels sanguine of the fall of the Confederate capital when our troops advance for an engagement. The fight of Saturday and Sunday seals the fate of that city. They threw the main body of the army composed of the best troops on our left wing, with a view of crushing it. They were defeated after two day's hard fighting, and forced to retreat.

Gen. Fremont's Head Quarters,
Woodstock, Va., June 2.

Gen. Fremont after occupying Strasburg last night was obliged by the darkness and tremendous storm, and the fatigue of his men to delay his advances till morning. At six o'clock the pursuit of the retreating enemy was resumed and vigorously continued during the day.

General McDowell's advance, being part of a Brigade under General Bayard, reached Strasburg this morning, and was ordered forward by General Fremont to join in the pursuit with the cavalry and artillery. The enemy, to retard pursuit endeavored to make a stand in three strong positions with artillery, but were driven rapidly and with loss from each.

Jackson's rear guard passed through Woodstock this p. m.—the head of his column having reached it at sunrise.

Colonel Piken, Chief of Artillery on General Fremont's staff, is wounded.

The roads and woods were strewn with arms, stores and clothing, and a large number of prisoners have been taken.

General Fremont's rapid march and Gen. McDowell's movement, has wholly relieved the Shenandoah valley and Northern Virginia.

Jackson will be overtaken and forced to fight, or must abandon his ground entirely.

DISTRESS IN THE ENGLISH MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS. — Unfortunately, the distress in the manufacturing districts shows no sign of diminution. At the weekly meeting of the Preston Boards of Guardians yesterday, the returns stated that £579 17s. 10d. had been spent during the week in out door relief, being four times the amount expended for the same purpose during the corresponding week of last year. By a similar comparison, it appears that the number of workhouse inmates has nearly doubled. Over 1,200 men have been engaged on the roads, under the Union, on the Ribchaster, and in the neighbourhood of the Union. To make matters worse, the failure at the service of the Guardians are exceedingly few. The cotton trade in Preston is still in a prostrate condition.

Prospects of the New Administration.

A short time ago the London Free Press, the Brockville Monitor and other papers hinted plainly that the opposition of the Globe to the new Ministry arose from the fact that its proprietor was not consulted in the formation of a Cabinet—or to his personal hostility to the Premier. To some of these allusions the Globe states that they are without foundation, that his opposition was "untinctured by the slightest shade of personal disappointment." It is unfortunate that the Globe, of all the papers in the Province, should be so severe at the outset, when its friends had undertaken the management of the country. But it is a failing with the Globe that it has been frequently "running a muck" when it might as well keep in clear water. Its wonderfully altered tone in ten days must strike the most casual observer. It is with grief we have so often to differ from our able cotemporary, but truth and consistency are in our estimation superior to party politics. After reading the severe castigations of last week let the reader turn to its deliverance this week and he will be struck with the contrast. It thus refers to the support accorded to the new Cabinet:

"The facility with which the organ-grinders here changed the stops and commenced new tunes is exceedingly amusing. All the prominent supporters of the late ministry in the press give their aid to the new Government. The old coalition has not a defender left of any mark. The Leader, the Quebec Chronicle, the Montreal Gazette, the Kingston Whig and News, and the London Free Press are all going on the same track. To the execration in which the late Government is held by the public is partly owing this sudden change of policy, but many of those journals hope that the pay and plunder they received from the old Government may be continued to them under the new. In the meantime there never was a Government which received so strong a support from the press as that now in office."

In the face of this admission it will be difficult to remain any longer in opposition, and we shall expect to see the Globe where it ought to be, supporting its friends and not offering a factious opposition any longer. We feel curious to know where the opposition press is to come from. Surely the House will have an opposition, and this will be composed chiefly of the old members of the Government and their most prominent supporters. But seldom has an administration had more concessions and consideration from the opposition in the House than the present. Meantime the members of the Government are before their constituents, with every prospect of their return. We observe that Mr. Wilson's explanations in North York before a large assembly resulted in a vote of confidence and support—seven only dissenting. We have not yet discovered a journal but is disposed to treat with consideration and forbearance the new ministry in their very difficult and trying position, and we have no doubt that they will act worthy of the confidence reposed in them and not betray it.

Church Rates in England.

From recent British papers we learn that the annual bill for abolishing the hateful impost of Church Rates in England, was introduced into Parliament and defeated by the exceeding narrow majority of one.

This measure has for years been brought up, and has yearly approached nearer the devoutly wished consummation of its advocates, and there is little doubt but the next essay will be a successful one. A greater curse can scarcely befall a people where the Clergy have secular control, and where a Church is united to the State. The tyranny exercised through clerical interference caused a revolution in England 200 years ago, when the people rose in their might and shook off the chains in which they were bound.

Again they were enslaved, and the present is the bicentenary which witnessed 2000 of the best of England's Clergy ejected from the Church, for refusing to submit to the act of conformity—a measure enforced by a bigoted King, at the instance of bigoted Bishops. From that period to the present the iniquitous impositions of State and Church have one by one been blotted from the Statute Book, and we shall hail the passage of the Church Rate abolition bill with pleasure. It is within our recollection that the law required any person holding a commission of the peace or a commission in the Army or Navy to take the Sacrament in the Church of England every year. This was abolished by Lord Sidmouth's Bill, in 1816.

Posterity will look back with astonishment at the enactments, to manifestly unjust as the present Church rates in England. It will be guessed to read teh of the efforts made in this colony to fasten upon us the incubus of a State Church. That the party seeking to do this had the cupidity and audacity to claim the entire seventh of the country, and wealth, if they could, have accomplished it entirely.

The names of such men as Sir John Trelawny, who have sought to free their country from the burdens imposed upon it by clerical aversion and bigotry, deserve the lasting gratitude of the future, and we devoutly hope that another year will see that wholesome, unjust and odious measure among the things of the past.

☞ The Victoria Herald in a recent number, under the caption of "Divorce Court practice in Victoria," reflects severely on the County Judge's conduct in "allowing the Courts under his jurisdiction to degenerate into speculative concerns." A very grave charge this is, indeed, but very possibly the Judge is not aware of the malpractice referred to, and should not in that case be blamed. The Herald's authority may be the "best" for these statements, but we are inclined to think it takes a round about and a most objectionable way of introducing the subject. If default is made in any court by any official, let the party complaining institute the proper proceedings and let the complaints be sifted, then the blame can be laid upon the proper shoulders. There is nothing like outspoken bluntness when those in official situations defraud the public. Let the charges be specific and not so general as the Herald has them, and until the proper steps are taken and made public we think the Herald should not have censured the Judge or indeed any one else. It has been said in our hearing that there is one Court in Victoria than which a better is not in Canada. We wait further developments before saying any more on this subject.

☞ Many of our readers are aware that the subscribers for Stock in the first talked of Railroad to the front, have been sued for the amount of the stock so subscribed. A Bill for their Relief was introduced into the House, but was defeated in the Private Bill Committee. We find in late proceedings the following:

NOTICE OF MOTION.—Mr. Haultain, on Friday next.—That the Committee on Private Bills be instructed to report the evidence which guided them in declaring the preamble not proved of Bill (No. 91) "An Act for the relief of certain persons alleged subscribers to the Stock Books, under the original Act incorporating the Peterboro' and Port Hope Railway Company."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—It is now two weeks since we have had any rain, during which time we have had a deal of high winds drying up the moisture in the ground. The effects of the drought are visible in the fall wheat and meadows. We never remember hearing so many complaints in any one season, by so many reliable persons, of the appearance of the fall wheat and the meadows. The latter seem past recovery, though with timely moisture and heat they might mend, but the fall wheat with the most favorable weather will not be a third of a crop around this neighborhood. A great deal has been ploughed up and sown with spring grain.

UNION EXCURSION.—The different Divisions of the Sons of Temperance of Smith are going to have, on Friday the 13th inst. a splendid Union Excursion on the back lakes, on Mr. James Wallis' steamer Ogemah, to Sturgeon Point. Should the weather turn out to be favorable those wishing to see the beautiful scenery of the back lakes should avail themselves of this opportunity. The steamer will return in good time to Bridgenorth, so that every one will reach home before a late hour. See advertisement in another column.

☞ The Square Timber business so far has been successful. With the exception of about 400,000 ft. all that has been made will be got to market tolerably early. The running on the River was never better than at present. Several concerns have left this en route for the Bay of Quinte. About 3,000,000 feet will find its way to Quebec this year from the Trent, which will be something like a million less than the estimate. The prospects are not very flattering, but we imagine our Lumber Merchants owing to the advantages of cheap "furnishing" this year will do very well. We wish them success.

☞ We have received some correspondence from Quebec by a "Member of the Reform Press," on the Policy of the McDonald-Sicotte Administration, but we are unable to insert it this week having only received it shortly before going to Press. It appears carefully drawn up, and it shall receive due attention from us next week.

POSTSCRIPT.

After a part of this day's impression was struck off, the following telegram was received:—"Election Committee decided in favor of Col. Haultain retaining his seat."

TEA MEETING.—The River Road Union Sunday School, Smith, intend holding a Tea Meeting on Wednesday the 18th day of June inst., near the Presbyterian Church. See advertisement in another column.

STEAMER OGEMAH.—It is with pleasure we announce that this steamer commences on Monday next to run her regular trips between Bridgenorth, Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and Lindsay.

CRICKET.—We are informed that a match will be played on the Cricket ground in Ashburnham, on Tuesday next, between the Lindsay and Peterboro' Clubs; wickets to be pitched at 11 o'clock.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—The great ship will leave this port on Saturday. She will take out a large amount of freight on her return voyage to Liverpool. Over seven thousand bushels of grain were hoisted on Saturday into one of her ports from barges alongside; and so vast are the capabilities of her machinery for loading that only one-fourth of this machinery was employed in shipping this quantity of cargo in one day. It is estimated that the ship engines, the four cranes, and other machinery, with full attendance, would take on board forty thousand bushels, or one thousand tons, in a single day. The work performed without jarring or disagreeable noise of any kind. Although the Great Eastern could easily carry ten thousand tons of freight, only five or six will be taken, in order to enable her to cross the bar. Captain Paton, to whom we referred in our last, remains almost constantly on board, and the coming voyages of the Great Eastern under his able management promises to be a complete success.—Scottish American Journal.

The Ministerial Policy Debate.

Below we give the speech of our worthy representative on this exciting topic. Its perusal will convince the most active opponents that he worthily represents the views and wishes of the people of this section. If ever there was a time in the history of our Province when the real friends of the country require to speak out, that time is now; and in view of the very serious responsibility of members of Parliament at the present critical juncture, we feel pleased that Colonel Haultain speaks out like a man, rebukes the unblushing conduct of the ex-ministers in involving the country in its present fearful financial difficulties, and blames them for the present anomalous position in which some of the U. C. members find themselves. We bespeak for the speech a careful perusal.

Col. HAULTAIN said:—it must not be matter of surprise if the members of this House are desirous of placing on record the reasons that have guideded them as to the position they have assumed in the present embarressing circumstances of the Province. I must confess that I heard the announcement of the proposed policy of the new Administration with deep regret. (Hear, hear.) As a representative from Upper Canada I feel that no ordinary sacrifices have been imposed upon us. But Sir, it becomes our duties to enquire into the causes that have led to those sacrifices, and upon whom must rest the blame that such was required. I would briefly allude to the origin of the change that has taken place in the Government of the Province. A vote adverse to the late Administration was given on the second reading of the Militia Bill, which resulted in their resignation. Although I felt it my duty to vote for the second reading of a bill that might be supposed to involve the proper defence of the country, I feel bound to say on this occassion, that I did not approve of the scheme that was proposed. (Hear, hear.) It appeared to me to be crude and ill-adapted to the purpose, and one that was not likely to meet with the concurrence of any body of gentlemen, who were really acquainted with the wants and the genius of the inhabitants of this Province. During the past few weeks much has been brought before the members of this House that warrants them in believing that more than ordinary mismanagement prevailed in almost every department. (Hear, hear.) In the carrying out of the public works, great incapacity, if not worse, has been manifest. Buildings estimated to cost six hundred thousand dollars, we are informed, will require an outlay of three or four times that amount to complete them. It appears that in frequent instances prices have been paid many times above what were justly due, resulting, we may fairly say, in a gigantic spoliation of our resources. (Hear, hear.) It is also ascertained that during the last twelve-month some for hundred thousand dollars have been advanced to the Grand Trunk Railway, (Hear, hear.) and this in defiance of the oft repeated remonstrances of the people. One of the last acts of the late Administration, without any sanction from Parliament, has been to make a contract, involving a large outlay, in order to rebuild a government house at Sherwood, Quebec, when we are supposed to be on the eve of removing to Ottawa. (Hear hear.) I must now allude, Sir, to facts that have come under my own observation, as a member of the Public Accounts Committee, facts disclosing departmental mismanagement of no ordinary character. Large bills of stationery have been incurred where three, and in some instances six times the just prices have been paid to favoured individuals. For one item of printing I find that one thousand dollars has been paid, by the special order of the head of the department, for which, according to the estimate of the printers of the House, one hundred and fifty dollars would have covered the expense. Another item in the largely swelled accounts for stationery I will refer to. A special order amounting to $6,000, was, by the dictation of the head of the department, handed over to a certain bureau. The gentleman through whom such matters passed, felt called upon to guard himself in the reception of so startling an amount, (I use his own expression,) by making a note at the bottom of the requisition, that the supply he was ordered to receive was sufficient for the two ensuing years. But, Sir, it is not necessary for me to enter into details; it is sufficient for my purpose at the present moment to show that frauds, either through the incapability or complicity of some of the members of the late Administration have been perpetrated, and it appeared to me of the first consequence, that the government of the country should be placed in other hands, and a thorough investigation be made as to our real financial position, and as to the conduct of those who appeared to have so grossly betrayed the sacred trust committed to them by their countrymen. And more especially was it necessary from the enormous deficiency to be made good, probably not much less a sum than six millions of dollars. In alluding to the position I now occupy as an Upper Canadian, and as one who not long since spoke strongly and encouragingly of the prospects of that section in obtaining her just demands, I am compelled to allude to a gentleman now occupying the high position of Premier of the Government. I disclaim absolutely all personal feelings on this question. I have a high regard for the honorable gentleman I have just mentioned, and honor him for the straight-forward persistency that he has maintained on certain important questions, but, Sir, it is this very persistency, as opposed to the views and wishes of the large majority of Upper Canada, that must necessary cause dissatisfaction, at his having been selected to form an administration, as representing Upper Canada and the Opposition. His peculiar position in the House made his selection all the more extraordinary. (Hear, hear.) But to whose influence must such an unusual selection be attributed. It is well known, sir, that on the resignation of a ministry, the premier of the out-going administration is generally consulted by the sovereign, or by her representative, as to his successor.

Hon. J. A. MACDONALD—No; that would be unconstitutional.

Col. HAULTAIN—Notwithstanding the opinion of the honorable member for Kingston. I must repeat, that such a practice is uniformly followed, and the whole scheme will therefore be palpable to the plainest understanding. Were not these gentlemen lately occupying the treasury benches, quietly enjoying the inevitable embarrassments that would be placed in the way of the Opposition forming a cabinet under the present premier, owing to his hostility to the great question of representation by population? Is it not manifest, that in thus advising his majesty's representative, doubly sending, owing to his recent advent amongst us, the impartial and honorable counsels of his late advisers—(hear, hear)—is it not manifest, to-day, that these gentlemen were playing an old game, and were inwardly chuckling at the idea that very soon the ball would be rolled into our own laps again, and another term of mal-administration be imposed upon a betrayed and indignant people. Taking all these circumstances into consideration, what alone could be the action of those called upon to serve their country under such embarrassing circumstances? Their first duty, sir, as I have before said, was plainly to keep out of office, until so unworthy of it, and if the position of Upper Canada be a humiliating one, and no one perhaps feels it more keenly than myself, and if it were thought desirable, owing to our grave financial position, to keep in abeyance a great constitutional change, justly demanded by Upper Canada, let the blame rest upon their heads who alone are guilty, viz., upon those members of the late administration who have entrapped us into that position. (Hear, hear.)

We copy the following very interesting presentation with pleasure. It is seldom indeed that such a rare case occurs of an individual holding an office for so long a period—and the interest is enhanced from the fact, that the venerable couple name! in this notice are the father and mother of our respected townsman, Mr. George Brownlee:—

STITCHEL.—PRESENTATION.—At the close of the weekly prayer meeting in the session-house of the U.P. Church here, on the evening of Wednesday the 30th ultimo, a presentation of somewhat unusual interest was made. The Rev. David Cairns, in name of the U.P. congregation, presented to Mr. George Brownlee, Hume Mill, a very handsome copy of Dr. M'Farlane's edition of "Henry and Scott's Family Bible," with illustrations, after David Robert's, Esq. The interest of the present arose chiefly from the fact that for the long period of nearly 57 years Mr. Brownlee had without interruption been a member of session in the Stitchel congregation, and by his courteous and conciliatory manners, unfeigned piety, and unwearied services in that office, had obtained a good repute among all men, and secured and obtained the confidence and esteem of the whole congregation. At the same time a few female members of the church presented a shawl to Mrs. Brownlee, in token for their respect to her as one who had in no small measure obeyed the apostolical injunction, to be "faithful in all things." The age of the venerable pair is now verging towards four score years and ten. Mr. Brownlee, in a few touching and appropriate words, expressed his sincere thanks for the kindness that had been shown him and his, and gave utterance to his fervent prayers for the continued welfare of the congregation. It is a comparatively rare thing for a minister to reach his jubilee, and it is still rarer for an elder to do so, owing to a more advanced period of the life he has generally reached at his ordination. But to be in the office of his eldership for the much longer period of 57 years is more uncommon still, and indeed may be considered almost a singular case, and it is well that a suitable recognition of it should be made. The bible contained the following inscription:—"Presented to Mr. George Brownlee by the members of the U.P. Church, Stitchel, as a mark of esteem for his unblemished character; and as a small acknowledgment of the valuable services he has rendered to the congregation, as a member of the session, during the almost unprecedently long period of fifty-seven years. Leviticus xix. 32. "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honor the face of the old man." 1 Timothy v. 17, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor."—Kelso Chronicle.

Destructive Fire.

The calamities of Saturday last, the anniversary of the Queen's Birth-day, will be longer remembered than the usual enjoyments which accompany such a day. As early as four o'clock the inhabitants were aroused by the alarm of fire. The morning was exceedingly calm, otherwise we believe it would be our painful duty to record for a second time the almost total destruction of Lindsay by fire.

The fire originated in Gen. Moore's carpenter shop, behind William Street on the west side, and spread with great rapidity over the other buildings attached. The occupants of the various rooms above the stores had barely time to escape with the little clothing they could pick up when the flames shot through the apartments and filled them with smoke. Messrs. Ward & Cadwell, and Mr. Sweenie were enabled to remove a portion of their goods in a damaged condition. Mr. Pearson had nearly all his property destroyed. Mr Veitch, who had his premises newly fitted up only a few days ago, had everything consumed.

By five o'clock the fire assumed such dimensions that it was feared the fire engine would be unable to arrest the progress of the flames. The heat became so intense that the buildings on the opposite side of the street were completely scorched. The unremitting efforts of the fire brigade were successful in saving Mr. Wilson's premises, which were situated within two feet of the buildings consumed. Many of the merchants occupying stores in buildings adjoining those on fire, removed their goods to a distance. In the hurry a sufficient guard was not set over the goods, and it was found that some boxes of fruit and provisions were stolen, and as yet they have not been recovered.

It is believed that the fire was the work of an incendiary, as for a week previous to its occurrence there was no fire in Mr. Moore's shop, where it originated.

An inquest was held in the Town Hall before Coroner Fidler and a jury, but no evidence could be brought forward to substantiate a charge against any one. The inquest was adjourned till Friday next, so as to give full opportunity to sift any information which may lead to the detection of the perpetrators of the outrage.

We subjoin a statement of the various losses sustained by the parties who suffered from the fire:—

Stores occupied by Mr. Sweenie and Messrs Ward & Cadwell, Saloon occupied by Mr. Pearson, Blacksmith and carpenter shop in the rear occupied by Mr G. Moore—buildings valued at $1,500, insured for $1,100.

Mr. Sweenie's loss is about $2,500, and is fully insured.

Ward & Cadwell's loss about $500, fully insured.

Mr. Pearson's loss about $500, no insurance.

Mr. Veitch's loss about $600, no insurance.

Messrs. Wilcox, Maguire, Watson and Kennedy had some of their goods damaged by removal, all of which were fully insured.

Messrs J. Sutherland and W. H. Mitchell also lost by removal; Sutherland no insurance, Mitchell's loss about $100, fully insured.—Canadian Post.

Murder at Mono Mills.

(From the Orangeville Sun.)

About three years since, a young man named Isaac Eastbury, residing near Mono Mills, was married to a widow and barbariously murdered by some person unknown. Suspicion immediately fastened upon a man by the name of John Irwin, of Mono Mills, who was supposed to have committed the atrocious deed for the sake of gain. The man was said to have been on intimate terms with Mrs. Eastbury, the mother of the murdered young man, a woman of more than 70 years of age, who was in the house when the crime was committed. For this deed, the accused, John Irwin, was tried at the Toronto Assizes, and acquitted for want of sufficient evidence. The whole country, however, still regarded him as the perpetrator of the foul deed. Immediately after his acquittal, Mr. Irwin married Mrs. Eastbury. She possessed a considerable amount of property, the desire to possess which seems to have been the principal motive for the commission of the crime. In the early part of last summer, the proceeds of the sale of this property amounting to $2,000, were obtained by Mr. Irwin, and were by him deposited in the Bank of Upper Canada.—On the 23rd day of August last Mrs. Irwin came to her end in a sudden and mysterious manner. The husband stated that he left her in her usual health, and on returning some five hours afterwards, he found her lying on a narrow sofa, dead. An inquest was held before Joseph Corbet, M. D., and a very respectable jury. The cause of death not being apparent, a post mortem examination was made by Dr. Griffith, of Mono Mills, and it was determined that an analysis of the stomach and contents should be made. The viscus and its contents were accordingly transmitted in a proper manner to Prof. Croft, of Toronto, for analysis and the inqest was adjourned. No poisonous matter was found in the stomach by Prof. Croft, and the cause of death was still unknown.—The deceased may have died from some of those affections of the heart which leaves no trace behind. But even if guiltless of her death, the conduct of Mr. Irwin was most exceptionable; for at the inquest, as the partner of his life came before him in the fearful, rigid majesty of death, this depraved man became brutishly drunk; he suffered the remains of his wife to be cared for and buried by strangers; and he outraged the ordinary decencies of life, by refusing to follow to the grave the ashes of the unfortunate woman whom he had sworn to cherish and protect.

The London "Times" on the Capture of New Orleans.

New Orleans is in the hands of the Federalists. How this has happened, what resistance was made, what fights were fought, what loss was sustained, no one as yet appears to know. The electrical power of instantaneous speech passed away from the Southerns when, like the Brazen Head of Roger Bacon, it announced that all was over. The subtile spirit then changed masters, and became the slave of the Northerners.

It is scarcely worth while to speculate how so very probable a circumstance has happened. The last accounts we had from the Confederates at New Orleans told us that the cannon of the forts and the impediments placed in the river were sufficient to prevent the approach of any fleet up to the city, and that the fortifications on the narrow passage between the lakes were strong enough to prevent the transit of troops to the landing-places near the city. Upon the efficiency of these works the defensibility of New Orleans depended. It would seem that, like almost all other defensive works, these proved unavailing. The fort upon the river could not prevent the passage of the gunboats, and the forts which guarded the passes from lake to lake were, we are told, destroyed or abandoned, so that General Grant and his land forces were able to push up in transports to within five miles of the city. If this be so, there was a fleet of gunboats in the middle of New Orleans ready to shell the place, and a land force on the shore, five miles off, ready to advance and take it.

This is another hard blow to the Confederates. It is another triumph to the Federals. It is another proof that the Federals can do more harm to the Confederates than the Confederates can do to the Federals. It is a proof that in the contest now going on as to which shall have the largest share in the destruction of the country which our grandsires nursed to be a nation that Northerners will bear away the palm. The strongest can always do most damage. If a man and his wife illustrate a domestic quarrel by the destruction of the furniture of the common home, the sturdy rust and can always do more damage than the most hysteric and distractively-disposed wife. After the mirrors and the ornaments are gone, it requires the thews and sinew of the irrate lords of creation to break up the chairs and dislocate the tables. The strong North can do more in this way than the frantic, febrile South, ever can effect.—But they can both do enough, if they continue, to reduce the matrimonial professions to a very worthless heap of chips. Up to this time they seem to have done their utmost. It is not, however, only that public and private property has been destroyed, that the great industries of both nations have been destroyed, that railways have been broken down, and towns sacked, and districts ravaged. It is not, even, that the profits of very distant years have been anticipated, and that the industry of generations yet unborn has been mortgaged. It is that hatreds have been sown which must endure forever. Our quarrelsome couple may buy new mirrors and get new tables and chairs, but after a few scenes of this kind they had better go to Sir Cresswell Cresswell at once, for their lives will be only a reiteration of similar outbursts. The capture of New Orleans is to the Confederates a great damage, no doubt. If we could hear that it had been followed by any proof of submission, we might think it was something more than a damage. But—again protesting against any too serious reliance upon American news—it would appear that the Southern heart is by no means softened by this new punishment. The cotton for which the Northern fleets convoy capacious hulls was not brought down to the coast or shipped in the river. "All the cotton and steamboats, except such as were necessary to transport men and ammunition, were destroyed." Eighteen millions of dollars in specie were carried off as the invader appeared, and this was a prize which Mr. Stanton must eagerly have longed for. The Federals in getting possession of a city which in time of peace is the most valuable city, perhaps, on the whole continent, for it is in the natural port of the most fertile railways which are connected by the internal waters of the American Continent. Hitherto it has only been months since this city has been as worthless to the world as any village on the shore of Lake Superior.

How will this new exploit affect us? The American Minister at London and Paris are, we are told, to demand the Colonels of St. Jean's and the Tuileries that plans are now being matured for the mitigation of the blockade and for facilitating the transmission of letters. This promise has been made from time to time at Paris for some weeks past, and, as we can well understand, with the most sincere desire on the part of the Federal Government to fulfil it. If the Federals are in possession of New Orleans, there is, of course, an end to the blockade of that city. All the world can go in and go out, and, paying the appointed duties, import and export wherever they can find buyers and sellers. There is only one thing now wanting, and that is but the cotton should come down to the New Orleans market. If the Southern planters should resolve to trust their cotton to the guardianship of General Butler's volunteers or of Commodore Foot's gunboats, we shall, no doubt, get sufficient to give some relief to our Lancashire manufacturers. But if these obstinate planters remove or destroy their stocks, or even if they refuse to bring them to market, it is hard to say what any one has gained by the capture of New Orleans. The capture of this city is creditable to the skill with which the Northerners use their naval supremacy; it is also an item in the great revenge of the Federal people; but if New Orleans is now to be blockaded on the land side by the Confederates as it was before, and if the cotton is not to reach us, we fear we shall not gain much by this long-promised "mitigation" of the blockade.

—The largest oil well yet found in Enniskillen was struck last Monday, by Messrs Brown, Smith & Co., who, when they hit upon the unctious liquid, so great was its force, that the working men at the rocks were severely burned in the face, and yet by the strength of the gas. It is computed that from fifty-five to sixty barrels an hour flowed from the well for several days after it was found, before the proprietors were able to keep it within bounds.

THE STEAMSHIP SCOTIA.—This splendid specimen of naval architecture arrived at this port last week from Liverpool, being her first voyage. It may therefore be said with truth that two of the noblest ships that ever floated on the deep are now lying in this harbor, the result of the energy, commercial enterprise, and national spirit of the British people. The builder, in planning the Scotia, evidently aimed at combining the useful with the beautiful. With her hull long and slender, gracefully curved at bow and stern, her general appearance is most pleasing, and suggests an idea of speed and buoyancy in a more remarkable degree than every British steamer we have ever seen. The Scotia may, without any qualification, be regarded in every respect as quite an improvement upon any specimens of naval architecture which has reached this port. Although we have, some months ago, given a description of this steamer, we may repeat the general dimension: Extreme length, 364 feet; extreme breadth, 47 feet 6 inches; depth, 31 feet; her gross tonnage is estimated at 3,871 tons; registered tonnage, 2,362. The weight of iron in her hull is 4,030 tons, at which she draws 22 feet of water. The keel consists of bars of iron nearly 35 feet long, joined by long scarfs, and is 14 inches deep by 6 in thickness. She has two side-lever engines, with 100-inch cylinders and 12 feet stroke. Her paddles are 40 feet 8 inches in diameter. Every possible provision is made for the safety of the passengers and the freight. The two compartments in which the cargo is stowed have a double bottom, designed to protect the goods in case the outer plates should be broken. She is amply supplied with fire engines, hose, and life buoys. Her main saloon is richly and tastefully furnished, while both judgment and a munificent outlay are visible in the fitting up of the fore saloon, the library and smoking room, the one hundred and twenty

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.
CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1862

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A. H. St. GERMAN to circulate five thousand copies of the 'Toronto Evening Journal' to parties named by us containing our advertisement.

ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the "Toronto Evening Journal" will recieve one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly "Journal," a large first class paper established in 1857, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

The terms for advertising are less than has ever been offered to the public before, viz: three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without changes) will be inserted at one dollar per line by the year, when they contain six lines or less

A NEW STORY
IN THE
SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:
A FIRST-CLASS
INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 8th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled

DELLBURN HOUSE,
A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1745.
BY THE AUTHOR OF
"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the British people and their families from all parts of the old country resident on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its Home and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal, and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspaper. Another most important feature of this journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurances during the year, contained in 1480 Proposal £454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued.....359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies.....11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees.....22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES.....1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS.....373,562 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE.....86,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James Downes, Esq, Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquenulal period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £32,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and net premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 33 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement shewing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued.	No. of Policies Issued.	No. of Policies in force at 31st January.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, NAUSEA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HEART BURN, ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have good for believing it has virtues which are invisible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.

A perfect Antidote, Specific and Cure for

RHEUMATISM & NEURALGIA

has long been needed. After an honest and patient research, this has been triumphantly discovered. It is called

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING!

Watson's Neuralgia King reaches the source of the trouble, and banishes the disease from the system. Unlike the untold number of Liniments and Embrocations which merely stimulates the surface, are but temporary in their effects, and are, at best, of doubtful virtue, it attends at the seat of the ailment, arrests it, kills it, eradicates it, and leaves no trace behind.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

also cures GOUT AND DYSPEPSIA, in all their forms. It is now giving relief to thousands who have been suffering form these diseases, and who have tried all other remedies in vain.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

has received the highest testimonials from the highest sources in regard to its wonderful efficacy. It operates with equal success in mild and chronic cases, never failing to work out a speedy and permanent cure.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

costs but one dollar a bottle, and less than a bottle often effects the end desired.

WATSON'S NEURALGIA KING

is the only Specific and cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

JUDSON'S

Mountain Herb Pills.

AGENTS, we present you with a perfect Mountain of Treasure. A chest of a tribe of the strange Aztec Indians, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlets and Almanacs—to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The Inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over nine years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "Mountain Herb Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life; and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and as the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity at the fountain head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring from which run a tiny stream, in a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. So quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lamp of life soon dies out.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body; they are, therefore, unrivalled as a

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Liver Complaint, Bad Breath, &c. The Anti-Bilious Medicine known are MILD, THOROUGH and SAFE. They cleanse, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and sweet, clearing and reconstituting the vital organs.

Pleasant indeed, is it, to us, that we are able to place within your reach, a medicine like the "Mountain Herb Pills," that will pass directly to the affected parts, through the blood and fluids of the body, and cause the sufferer to brighten with the flush of beauty and health.

Judson's Pills are the Best Remedy in existence for the following Complaints:

Blood Complaints, Debility, Inward Weakness,
Scrofula, Fever and Ague, Liver Complaints,
Coughs, Female Complaints Leanness of Spirits,
Colds, Measles, Pills,
Chest Diseases Indigestion, Blotches and Humors,
Ointments, Influenza, Sanitary Spring
Injections, Rheumatism, Mixture,
Diarrhœa, Dysentery, &c. &c. &c.

GREAT FEMALE MEDICINE

Promises who value health, should never be without these Pills. They purify the blood, remove obstructions of all kinds, prevent the sale of all pimples and blotches, and bring the rich color of health to the pale cheek.

☞ The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very surprising way among the Tennessee, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Get the Almanac of our Agent, and you will be filled with delight, the very interesting account it contains of the "Sacred Mountain" of the Aztecs.

Observe.—The Mountain Herb Pills are put up in a Beautiful Wrapper. Each box containing 50 pills, and Almost of as much per box. All genuine, have the signature of B. J. JUDSON & CO., on each box.

A FIRST CLASS FAMILY NEWSPAPER

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF SCOTCHMEN IN AMERICA, AND TO THE DISSEMINATION OF SCOTTISH LITERATURE AND NEWS.

FIFTH YEAR.

ON January 23rd 1862, was commenced a new volume (V.) of the Scottish American Journal; and in future the numbers issued between the first and last days of each year will constitute a complete volume, of convenient size for binding; and each number will contain a most entertaining and instructive repertory of reading matter, calculated to interest all readers of British origin. The Scottish American Journal, though decidedly international in its constant efforts to promote peace and prosperity between the people of Great Britain and America, is yet emphatically Scottish in its copious records of all events occurring in Scotland that can be regarded of the least interest to natives of that country residing in America; and to this "news from home" is added, weekly a summary of general intelligence from England, Ireland, and other parts of the world.

A distinguishing feature of the Scottish American Journal is its regular re-publication—verbatim et literatim—of the "leading articles" of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the most important topics of the day. This feature is a unique one, and has been found very acceptable to the people of British North America, as it supplies a long needed desideratum in the Provinces. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledge their intrinsic worth and force by copiously extracting from our columns and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper published in America. A concise weekly summary is also given of the principal items of American news, and a similar narrative of events transpiring in the various British Provinces, the latter feature supplying a deficiency which was felt in several of the Provincial Intelligencers as to what was transpiring in other parts of the British possessions.

In the forthcoming volume of the Scottish American Journal increased space will be devoted to the literary department in the form of serial tales and sketches, vividly illustrating the customs, habits, sentiments and general characteristics of the people of Scotland; such tale emanating from the pen of an author of celebrity. A new orders, particular care will be exercised in the choice of original poetry, composed by writers unsurpassed for genius and purity of thought, resident here or abroad. The first number of the new volume contained the commencement of a deeply interesting tale, entitled

THE LIEUTENANT & HIS SON.

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and will be appreciated by all classes of readers.

LUNCH AT ALL HOURS.

WARD & CADWELL.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may break out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous habit is peculiarly capable of unnatural disease, low living, bad or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" unless it assists to lay the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by depositing tumors in the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, scrofulous; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. These foul corruptions, which exist in the blood, depress the energies of life, so that scrofulous consumptions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the assaults of other diseases, and quickly fall victims to them. Other diseases, which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all people are scrofulous; in their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must remove the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise.

Poetry.

LINES.

BY JOHN MACHAR.

Written on the death of the infant son of Mr. Wm. Weir, of Peterborough. To the affectionate parents these lines are most respectfully inscribed.

Dear friends, I sympathize with thee,
In this thine hour of gloom;
Since thou hast lain thine infant son,
Within the lonesome tomb.

Full well I know your loss you feel,
With sorrow true and deep;
Perchance your grief your eyes did seal,
That you could scarcely weep.

And she, doubtless, who bore to thee,
This son of hope and joy,
Full long will mourn the memory,
Of her lost darling boy.

Lost, did I say? Oh no, not lost!
Thank God! but gone before;
Another cherub from earth's gloom,
Crossed to the "Other Shore."

Another cherub wafted through
The gateway of the tomb;
To join the anthems of the Blest,
In fields of endless bloom.

We cannot hear his glad step tread,
The chambers of the Lord,
But yet we know his voice has flowed,
Into the song of God.

Though God afflicteth thee, my friend,
And lays on thee his hand;
He opens to thee a path whose end
Lies in the Better Land.

Thine infant son may be the light,
To mark thy devious way,
And guide thee through life's dreary night
To realms of endless day.

Norham, April, 1862.

Miscellaneous.

LIGHT OUT OF DARKNESS.

BY AUGUSTA MOORE.

In a high, wide, old-fashioned apartment richly but oddly furnished, sat a woman and several girls. They were all pale and wretched looking; but the mother had such a crushed and heart-broken expression as one could not behold without pain. They had all been weeping. Was some one that they loved dead? Yes, dead indeed; dead in trespasses and sins.

The door swung open and a large, stern man, with heavy tread, great fist, cold, steel-gray eyes, and bushy brows that met above his nose, trampled in. All fear in the room bent lower over the work that each woman held, as this human thunder-cloud, just now, to be sure, quiet and harmless, entered. He was not so much interested in the study of the faces of his household as to read them readily, even had they fairly met his gaze.

He paused a moment at his desk to select a few papers that he wanted and while he was thus employed, he remarked: "It may be that my young villian, Victor, will turn out good for something after all. I just came by the blacksmith's shop and saw him, sleeves up, hammering away at the white hot iron. He worked well, better than I could the day after being sick a-bed. If there is anything in the boy he shall not ask for help bye-and-bye; but I want to see him drilled into habits of industry and perseverance before I undertake for him. When he has held out well for a year or two he shall be helped up in life."

That is a strange way for a father to deal with a child—stand aloof while his boy is young, foolish, and weak, and come to his aid after he has proved himself able to stand alone. Yet more than one parent is guilty of such conduct. What pity do they deserve if their hearts are broken by the wickedness of their children?

Meeting with no response, Capt. March strode from the room again and left the house. He was not disturbed at not being answered. He seldom was replied to in that house.

An hour later and Victor, having been charged by his father with his misconduct, and having been unmercifully beaten as his reward, was flying, nearly frantic, towards the sea.

Captain March had hardly closed his own door behind him ere he met a man, commonly considered undermitted, but who was well known to be very correct in all the information which he imparted, particularly if it was unpleasant information. The man related to the astonished and indignant father the particulars of more than one drunken revel in which his son had been engaged. "You ought to see the boy, Captain. He is a smart, handsome fellow. Too bad for him to go towards the horrible pit and miry clay in this fashion."

Away went the Captain, foaming with rage, and the result—part of it—we have seen.

It was midnight, dark and stormy. The thunder roared, the lightning flashed, and the wind howled dismally. The rain fell in furious torrents. It seemed that the windows of heaven must be open. Suddenly and with a bang, down went the heavy fire-board in the sleeping-room of Constant, the city cousin.

The noise of the storm had but lulled him to sound slumber; but the fire-board's fall awakened him. He felt the house shake to its foundations; but he knew that he was in a strong New England mansion not made "to let," and he enjoyed the rocking of the storm. Then his thoughts turned to the sailor on the sea. How could any vessel ever outride in safety so wild a tempest, thought he; for 'tis as natural for a landsman to feel glad, during a storm, that he is on solid land, as it is for a mariner to thank God that he has "a wide berth out of the way of trees and chimneys."

But as Constant lay musing on his bed he began to hear, or think he heard, voices other than those of the storm. Loud hoarse tones, like those of rough and tipsy men, seemed mingling with the noises of the elements. Knowing how easily one's imagination is misled at night, especially in a storm, Constant was about composing himself again to rest when there suddenly came sounding up from the shore, rising shrilly and fearfully clear, over all the tumult of the storm, the appaling cry:

"Murder! murder! murder!"

Three times it rang through all the streets and dwellings of that sea-side town, and that it was not idly raised all knew who heard it (and who that heard it can ever forget that midnight cry?), for there was blood and the anguish of death in every tone.

Horror-struck, the young man leaping from his bed, sought in the blackness of his room for clothes. Ere he could get even partially dressed, the flying feet of men went past, and the cry was raised:

"Help! help! come down to the ship!"

Gaining the street Constant followed the throng sweeping towards the shore.

There was a large ship lying at anchor. It was speedily overrun by men. There had been a drunken row and one was killed; another desperately wounded. Lights were procured. The murderer was ironed and taken to jail; the other insubordinates ironed and cast into the hold, and the wounded man, or boy, for he was not 20 years old, was taken to his home.

"And where was that?" asked the girls as Constant and their father told the story—when they had returned to the house.

"At Captain March's, for his name is Victor," replied the father.

At this they all groaned.

"O his mother! his sisters! what will they do?" cried the girls.

"What is the nature of his hurt?" asked the mother.

"His back is broken. He had no share in the fight except to try to quell it; but the murdered man, insane from rum, caught him up and slung him against a stone in such a manner as to make him a cripple for life, even should he live."

* * * * * * *

The scene at Captain March's when the mangled form was brought and laid upon its bed, neither tongue nor pen could describe. It was heart-rending.

Victor had time to reflect on his ingratitude and wickedness, for never again did he put foot to the floor.

He lived several years; but lay perfectly harmless until the day of his death.

Sudden and awful was the retribution which befell this wicked lad; but the goodness of God, as it often does, converted the curse into an ultimate blessing.

For a year or more, the gall and wormwood of an embittered and desperate nature (originally sensitive and deep), of a poisoned heart and a dashed mind, overflowed at Victor's lips. It was absolutely awful to hear him. His father would not go near him; his poor mother and sisters could not endure to have any one else hear his blaspheming language, or witness his impotent rage at being so punished for his sin, and his utter ingratitude for all that was done for him. Poor crushed worm! there he lay writhing in torment of body and of mind, cursing the day of his birth and the one that made him. The expression of his face beautiful even yet, was always agonizing.

What harder trial than this could the faith of loving hearts experience? Yet the mother and the sisters were upheld from despair.

They ceased to remonstrate with him, or to speak at all of spiritual things in his hearing; for they could not bear the scorn and hatred with which he met every such attempt. They could do no more now than to pray in secret and "hope in God."

At last Victor raved no more for "rum," and after that he became gradually more gentle and endurable.

At first no one dared to say it; but at last it was a settled fact, Victor was changing. He began to ask them to read to him, and wonder of wonders! he one day asked Dovey to read from the Bible. At this surprise the poor girl burst into tears.

"Don't cry, Dovey" Victor said gently, his large dark eyes growing dim, as they looked up at hers. "Perhaps, dear, your long watch for my worthless soul will not be quite in vain."

Not daring to make any reply, Dovey choked back her tears, and though trembling from head to foot, she read as well as she could such passages as she thought he might wish to hear.

Not many days after this, poor crushed Victor (how poorly named was he!) was found weeping and lamenting over his sinful and ungrateful life. He begged the pardon of his parents; he grew humble, patient, and sweet-tempered; in short it was evident to all that the Lord had wrought his own peculiar work in the cripple's heart.

O then what joy and praise there was in the house. That mother's heart could not she utter "now lettest Thou thy servant depart or remain in peace, since mine eyes have seen thy salvation!"

Those sisters! all their sorrow was forgotten. The desire of their hearts was given them, and their lips overflowed with thanksgiving.

Even Captain March was visibly touched by the reports that reached him of the change in his son, and he was heard to say that there must be power in the religion which could "make a good boy out of that rascal, Victor."

By-and-bye he ventured to visit his son's chamber that he might judge for himself in regard to what he had heard.

He had not seen his boy since the night on which he was brought home with his back broken.

Victor, at the sight of his father, began to weep, and tried to cover his face.

Captain March took no notice of his emotion; but related him as though he had seen him every day, with

"Well, Victor, my boy, how do you find yourself this morning?"

The tenderness of the tone assured the sufferer that it was not a friend his father came then for the first time to be bedside.

Thenceforward not a day passed without the red rough Captain seated beside his white-lighted child, beautiful exceedingly in his decay, and gentle and patient now as before he had been violent and impatient.

It was late, but at last the Captain tenderly loved his only son, and would have laid down his life to save him.

Ah! had he but felt this at the first, Victor might not have needed to be broken to be healed—to be slain to be made alive.

Captain March learned now what heartache is. And he learned something better.

With that white face, those earnest, lustrous eyes that rich, damp hair, that dying child before him, with that gentle, pleading voice in his ears, the hitherto hard and self-sufficient man learned such things of Jesus Christ and his religion, as he had never known; and months before the sufferings of Victor were over, he too had experienced the Christian's love, and assumed the Christian's name.

And then, after all it proved that the boy was rightly named; for through Him that loved him he died Victor.

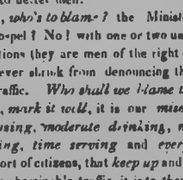
The Lord Chancellor and the Ghost

We give the following story from the London correspondence of Saunder's News Letter, without in any way vouching for its veracity:—

'Really, what with Mr. Hume, Mr. Foster, and Sir Bulwer Lytton's 'Strange Story,' London society seems just now afflicted with a general phantom-mania. The last new phase of the malady is a ghost story, which has lately obtained extensive currency in what are called the "upper circles," and which claims for its believers two counsel learned in the law, and the Lord High Chancellor himself! I don't pretend to vouch that the story can pretend to the "ghost" of a foundation for its existence—I merely testify that it is being talked of, be "everybody," and that the first question asked at most dinner-tables is, 'Have you heard of Lord Westbury's ghost?' The story runs thus: Lord Westbury lately purchased Hackwood house, an old mansion near Basingstoke, the property of Lord Bolton. Snatching a spare day or two, to rob him a more minute inspection of his investment, he took with him two of the gentlemen belonging to his official establishment, both members of the learned profession. On separating for the night, the bed-room destined for one of them, a Mr R——, was found to be on the opposite side of the hall to those of the other gentlemen; he therefore shook hands and said "good night" in the hall, leaving the others talking there. He did not been very long asleep before he felt himself awoke, but could neither hear nor feel anything. By degrees, however, he became conscious of something luminous on the other side of the room opposite his bed, which gradually assumed the appearance of a woman clothed in grey. He at first thought it was an optical illusion; next that his companions were playing him some phosphoric trick, and then turning around he composed himself to sleep again. Further, on in the night he was awoke again, and then at once he saw the same figure brilliantly conspicuous on the wall. Whilst he was gazing at it it seemed to leave the wall and advance into the middle of the apartment. He immediately jumped out of bed, rushed to it, and of course found—nothing. He was so impressed with the power of the delusion that he found it impossible to seek any more sleep, and as the day was beginning to break, he dressed and made his way into the grounds, where he walked about for some time, pondering over the illusion so forcibly produced upon him. On his return to his room he wrote out an account of what he thought had been seen, it being then quite clear to him that it was no trick played by others, but simply an hallucination of his own brain. At the breakfast table, however, he began to fancy that he had been cleverly imposed upon by his friends, as they commenced at once bantering him on his 'night's rest,' 'broken sleep,' and so forth. Wishing to detect them if possible, he pretended unconsciousness, and utter ignorance of their meaning, when to his horror, one of them exclaimed, 'Come, come, don't think we didn't see one of the women in grey follow you into your room last night!' He rushed up stairs, produced his written account, which he gave them to read, and the consternation became general. On inquiry, of course, they found the legend of a murder done in the days of yore; and the Lord Chancellor is supposed to be exceedingly vexed at an incident which has decidedly shut up one room in the house for ever, if not, in all probability, tabooed the mansion altogether. Thus much do the 'upper ten thousand' ever—how truly is quite another question."

A PERSIAN BUTCHERY.—The Gazette du Danube gives the following details of the execution or rather the butchery, on the 26th February, of 57 Turcoman prisoners at Teheran, already briefly mentioned:—"At an early hour in the morning the doors of the prison were opened, and the captives, tied together by cords, and conducted by soldiers, were taken to the exercising ground, close to the barracks. The prisoners had been strong, athletic men, but appeared to be worn out by fatigue and hunger. One of them, an old man, with white hair, was supported by his two sons. Stakes had been driven into the wall of the barrack-yard, to which the prisoners were attached, the left foot of each being raised up and fastened to the right one of the man next him, so that each had only one leg to stand on. After that operation, which lasted an hour a detachment of infantry posted at about sixty paces distance, were ordered to fire, but not one of the prisoners was hit, all the balls striking the walls over their heads, for the soldiers, who had murmured at being employed to act as executioners, purposely aimed high. The colonel in command sheathed his sword with indignation, and loudly complained of having been called on to perform such a duty. The soldiers were then advanced to within forty paces distance, and fired a second volley, which only wounded a few of the prisoners in the legs, and at a third discharge four fell dead. Eight detachments of 100 men each were brought up in succession, and each fired three rounds, so that 2400 shots were fired at 57 men tied fast, and at the end of that time three still stretched outwarked, and having released themselves from their heads, had fallen on the ground. Their heads were cut off by the executioners, an operation which was afterwards performed on all the others. The heads were afterwards stuck on spears, and carried in triumph, while the bodies were tied by the legs to the tails of mules, and dragged to a ditch, where they were buried."

Sons of Temperance Column.



WHO'S TO BLAME!

That intemperance is greatly on the increase in the town of Peterboro is a fact generally admitted, but who's to blame for it is a question not so easily answered.—Some persons blame the Municipal Fathers, some the temperance men, and others more bold freely lay the guilt at the door of the christian community. And thus while each one seems willing to throw responsibility upon his neighbour, the traffickers in strong drink are waxing bolder and bolder, the victims are daily becoming more numerous, widows and orphans are being made, and wives are living in a state worse than widowhood, with debauched and heathen drunken husbands. Our young men are growing up a race of gambling, dissipated sots, and as a natural consequence, immorality, profanity and all kinds of demoralising amusements have become the order of the day, and Mechanics' Institutes, Libraries, Lectures and Mental Improvement Societies are institutions we may read of elsewhere, but they are without a local habitation or a name in Peterboro.

Who's to blame? This question may be best answered by showing first who are not to blame. The Sons of Temperance, the Good Templars, and the old veterans who work the Old Ship, are surely not to blame. No! for they faithfully held up the beacon light of Temperance, they have by precept and example, by lectures and tract distribution, by working in season and out of season, at all times and under discouraging circumstances never flinched from their duty, they cannot justly be blamed. The municipal authorities may be partly to blame, but they are only the representatives of the electors, and we cannot expect the stream to rise higher than the fountain, if the fountain is impure the waters which flow from it will be impure. But elevate the tone of public morality and our municipal authorities will have to rise with it or give place to better men.

But, who's to blame? the Ministers of the Gospel? No! with one or two unhappy exceptions they are men of the right metal, who never shrink from denouncing the unholy traffic. Who shall we blame then? Listen, work it well, it is our miserable, moralising, moderate drinking, money grabbing, time serving and everybody man sort of citizens, that keep up and build up this abominable traffic, it is to them that we owe the present state of morals in the town of Peterboro. Men who can grow eloquent upon our social evils, and utter pious ejaculations upon the profanity of our street rowdies, and then go and sign certificates for any number of saloons and groceries, for the sake of the custom and patronage of the dealers in Rum. Men who are ever ready to engage in any enterprise that will make money, but who never spend a dime of their money or a moment of time to advance Temperance Societies, Debating Societies, Intellectual Improvement Associations, Mechanics' Institutes, or any of these things of good report which invariably tend to elevate the masses, and would at least cause crime and intemperance and vice to shrink from the public gaze instead of exhibiting their hideous forms in our best blocks and most public thoroughfares, causing the town to become a reproach and a bye-word to strangers who may, from business or pleasure sojourn among us. There may be unpalatable words to some, but it is the truth, and they are only written for the purpose of appealing to the right minded influential men of the town to assist temperance men in putting down this strong drink traffic and its attendant evils. This drink that lights the torch of the incendiary, steels the heart for the commission of every crime, produces coarseness, vulgarity and oaths, dries up the desire for everything that is pure and holy, and finally sends its victim to a hopeless grave. Men of Peterboro, will you help to roll back the tide of intemperance?

—What is that which saps the morals of youth, kills the germ of generous ambition, desolates the domestic hearth, renders families forlornness, digs dishonored graves? Drunkenness. What makes a man shunned by the relatives who loved him, condemned by his contemporaries who outstripped him? Drunkenness. What fills your asylums with lunatics, our rivers and ponds with suicides, our jails with thieves with robbers and murderers, our streets with vice? The same destructive habit. He who by precept, whether oral or written, shall succeed in rendering it detestable, and sobriety an inviolable virtue throughout the land, will confer on society a boon beyond all price. What makes drunkards? Moderate drinking. Until this cause sobriety will never become inviolable.

Three Old Disciples.

MR. EDITOR,—Having lost out of our Peterboro' church, during the ecclesiastical year, three of our oldest members, one of whom commenced her relation to Methodism before the death of Wesley, and the other two shortly after, I thought will, on Sabbath morning last, to preach a memorial sermon to comfort their bereaved friends, and to stimulate all to an imitation of their virtues. At the close of the sermon, the following obituaries were read, which you will have the kindness to publish, and oblige their friends and

Your obedient brother,
JOHN CARROLL.

April 14th, 1862.

MRS. JANE PEARCE, of Peterboro',

And mother of Peter Pearce, Esquire, of Norwood Circuit, an active and esteemed family resident Wesleyan, was born in a small sea-port town on the coast of Cornwall, England, called Newquay. Her maiden name was Bond. It is highly probable she was favoured from infancy with all the advantages furnished by that form of christianity called Methodism, for which her native country has been so remarkable since the days of Wesley, as she is said to have experienced the "peace and joy of faith" so early as her fifteenth year, and connected herself with the society, of which she continued a member till the day of her death, during the long period of sixty two years. At the age of twenty-nine she married Mr. —— Pearce, a Wesleyan. He was a miller by trade, and part of his life a mill-owner, in very respectable circumstances. This worthy couple with their family, held it among their most cherished recollections of their lives that they had enjoyed the company of preachers, travelling and local, in their weekly visits to this out-lying appointment of the circuit.

The failure of wordly enterprise and the decay of trade, from time, subjected them at sundry times to serious trials; but it was remarked of this good woman that she paid out to those whom she chanced to owe, when due, the last penny, although she knew not where the next meal for her family might come from. But pursuing that honourable and christian course, she was never left to want,—although the relief trusted for came often only in the last extremity. Some of these providential interpositions in the recollection of her children, were among the most extraordinary ever recorded.

In 1839, the family came to this country and experienced all the vicissitudes usually attended on such an undertaking. But in all, this steadfast woman maintained her integrity. Although I the writer knew little of her personally, she is remembered by her leader and class-mates as punctual to the means, till age and infirmity prevented; and as one possessed of a clear and active mind and great freedom and appropriateness of language in speaking and prayer. Her course was terminated by a gradual decay of body and mind. During her last illness, which was short, her mind, during its lucid intervals, dwelt on the subjects embraced in the "ruling passion,"—religion, in connection with herself and family. Her last and only solicitude was manifested for the safety of an unconverted child. To her steadfast, religious son, she said, "The Lord will be with you and bless you." To a son-in-law, with whom she had once some slight misunderstanding, she said, "There was once a cloud between us, but it is now passed away." When she closed her eyes at any time, she would still affirm, that she could see her departed husband,—as if waiting to receive her. She said, "I am going home to heaven." Thus did she solace herself while going down into the dark valley of the shadow of death. Two days before her departure, she became totally insensible to joy and grief, pleasure and pain. And on the 20th of October, 1861, she fell asleep in Jesus, aged nearly 77. Surely we may say to God, with Wesley,

"In age and feebleness extreme,
Thou dost a sinful world redeem."

MRS. CATHERINE GRAHAM,

Whose maiden name was Breen, was a native of Ireland, born near the town of Innishkillen, of loyal and Protestant ancestry. Her father was a converted man and identified with Methodism before she was born, and one who lodged the three days moring itinerant, in his turn with others, on the occasion of the preacher's periodical visits to the neighborhood. The godly example of a pious, and the heavenly conversations of his almost angel guests, were not lost on the childish mind of little Catherine. From infancy she feared and sought God, as all our children would do if they were under equally auspicious influences. At the early age of thirteen she consciously experienced the mercy of God in Christ; and ever after maintained the life of love by watchfulness and the use of the means of grace, including a steady and punctual attendance at class, during the long period of 73 years. About two years after her conversion she experienced a signal and encouraging manifestation of God to her soul, under a sermon from the quivering lips of the veteran Charles Graham, from Matt. iv. 2, 4: "But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall."

At the age of twenty-three, in 1786, she entered the honorable and holy estate of matrimony with Mr. Francis Graham. So soon as they commenced housekeeping, they then residing in the county Tyrone, ugh), they imitated the example of their parents in making their cottage a "lodging place for way-faring men."

In 1824, they emigrated to America and settled in the woods of Otonabee, when they soon made a comfortable home and again welcomed the Methodist itinerants to enjoy their hospitality, while prosecuting their arduous pioneer labours. They not only feed and warmed them, but stood by and defended them against their defamers, and took part and lot with them against those who tried to alienate the flocks they had gathered from their pastoral care.

Infinite Wisdom has pleased to take her companion to Himself, who passed triumphantly away, so long ago as 1839; after which she pursued her pathway alone,—being the assiduous attentions of a maiden daughter, whose filial pity was positively above all praise.

For the last thirteen years our sister Graham had resided in Peterborough, to be nearer the public means of grace; of which, however, increasing infirmity of late years entirely deprived her. Although a most faithful exemplary christian all her days, she never entered into the fullest liberty of the children of God,—a deliverance from every doubt and fear, and cloud, and corruption, till about seven years before her death. This took place while in a state of body, she was receiving the final visit from a much loved pastor, the Rev. J. Gemly, then removing from the circuit, in company with a pious physician—would that they were even more common! And it perhaps ought to be remarked, for his encouragement and others, that it was while Dr. Lavell was engaged in prayer, that she thought she had evidence to believe, "The God of peace had sanctified her wholly throughout body, soul, and spirit." And all who knew her intimately believed she was "preserved blameless" till the Lord Jesus came and took her away. Certain it is, that henceforth her every breath seemed prayer and praise. Mr. Thomas Mulberney, who often visited her, says he 'never saw so happy a person." Her interviews with the Rev. David Hardy, who paid her great attention while his family resided in this town, were said to be seasons of holy rapture, "quite in the verge of heaven." For my own part, I never found her otherwise than on the "mountain top."

Her friends were not favoured to listen to many words from her dying lips, so suddenly and gently was she removed. But those words were not needed to assure them of her happiness. On the evening of the 18th of November last, she retired to her room and bed in apparently more than usual health, with the maternal benediction on her lips, "God bless you all, and make you happy!" In the morning she was found speechless and senseless. The pastor and a pious physician was summoned, but nothing could or needed to be done for soul, or body. She continued to breathe still slower and heavier till the afternoon of that day, the 20th, when she exchanged mortality for life, aged nearly 86.

"There is light on the hills, and the valley is past,
Ascend happy pilgrim! thy labours are o'er!
The sunshine of heaven around thee is cast,
And thy weak, tottering footsteps can falter no more."

"O pilgrim! that hill richly circled with rays,
Is Zion! Lo, there is the city of saints;
And the beauties, the glories, the region displays,
Inspirations own language imperfectly paints."

MRS. JANE BAXTER, of Ashburnham,

Was born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, on the 29th of April, 1783. Her maiden name was Erskin. She was of pious parentage; her father being an exemplary Methodist class-leader. To parental fidelity, and the visits and conversation of the self-denying preachers of that day, who sojourned with them from time to time, we are no doubt, under God, to ascribe it, that she was converted at the early age of 15, which state of gracious attainment she never forfeited till the day of her death, embracing a long Christian course of sixty-four years. Ten years after her conversion, she was married to an exemplary member of the Church of England, who, though he never united with the Methodists, joined with his pious wife in giving the Wesleyan preachers a cordial welcome to his house, one night in the four weeks, in their circuit rounds.

Thirty years ago, the family immigrated to Canada, where she immediately identified herself with the people of her early choice, and became known for her exemplary deportment and fidelity to the means of grace, particularly the class-meeting. And when she became too infirm to go out, by a considerate arrangement of her leader and class-mates, that meeting was taken to the house of her daughter, Mrs. Foster, with whom she spent her last years, and who performed her duty to her mother with true filial devotion. The class was held at an early hour on Sabbath mornings, very much in the style she had been used to in the Old Country.

Mrs. B. never made very confident professions of enjoyment, but never spoke of herself and her attainments with modesty and self-condemnation. Still she had an humble and abiding confidence in God. And this rather strengthened than diminished to the last.

Throughout the nine days which comprised her last illness, there was no expression upon her lips but those of patient resignation, substantial joy, and unshaken confidence in God her Saviour. She died on the 28th of March, 1862, aged nearly 79. Thus has passed away another one of the few lingering cotemporaries of Wesley's last years, from the United Kingdom, whom we have had sojourning us of this generation.

"Give glory to Jesus our Head,
With all that encompass our throne,
A widow, a widow indeed,
A mother in Israel is gone!"

"The winter of trouble is past,
The storms of affliction are o'er;
He struggle is ended at last,
And sorrow and death are no more!"

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT.—We have to record an extraordinary feat performed on the Island of Orleans by one of the sergeants of the 1st battalion, 17th Regiment, encamped there. The feat, which is a favorite one with the sporting fraternity, though decidedly difficult to perform, is as follows:—To pick up one hundred stones, placed a yard apart, each; and to bring one stone each time in succession, to the starting point. The extent of ground required to be gone over in these rapid trips, backward and forward, amounts to about five miles thirteen hundred yards. The time allowed was one hour but the active Sergeant succeeded in accomplishing the task in fifty-four minutes, thus having his distance by six minutes. To convince the spectators that he was not "dead beat," after the laborious effort, he ran twice round the camp ground, which is some four hundred yards in circumference—after placing the last stone at the starting point. The Sergeants name is Thomas Coolidge, aged thirty-seven, and he has seen nineteen years' service in the Regiment. His weight is 15 stone 8 lbs.—Quebec Chronicle, 5th.

Municipal Indebtedness.

Below, we give the Report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the Municipal Indebtedness to the Municipal Loan Fund. We find, in the statement accompanying it, that the amount subscribed by Port Hope, was $260,000; arrears of interest at 8 per cent, to 31st December last, $295,446.26; interest accrued on arrears, $68,025,87; arrears of 5 cents on the dollar to same date, $12,250,68.

Hope, amount of Debentures, $60,000; arrears of interest to Dec. 31, 1861, $20,890 57; interest accrued on arrears, $4,972, 99; arrears of 5 cents on the dollar, $6,168,-10.

Cobourg, amount Debentures, $500,000; arrears of interest to Dec. 31, 1861, $259,-818,27; interest accrued on arrears $53,-608, 34; arrears of 5 cents on the dollar, (being for 1861) $6,761, 30.

The Select Committee appointed to enquire into and report upon the best method for relieving the distress of certain Municipalities arising from debts contracted in the construction of Railways, report as follows:—

Your Committee find that the financially embarrassed Municipalities are divided into two classes; Firstly, those which owe the Province seven millions three hundred thousand dollars, borrowed from the Municipal Loan Fund, of which there is a clear explanation in Statement No. 20, of the Public accounts for 1861—Second part showing that at 6 per cent interest the arrears of interest, including Sinking Fund of two per cent, had at 31st December last reached the alarming amount of two millions six hundred and eighty-seven thousand five hundred and forty-three dollars and thirty-nine cents. An official statement of this, from the Office of the Receiver General, is appended to this Report, Shewing also the arrears which have accrued under the five per cent arrangement made by Parliament in 1859, (Consolidated Statutes of Canada, cap. 83, clause 68,) to be already the large sum of three hundred and forty-five thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight dollars and seventy-four cents, an amount which it is obviously impossible for them to pay all at once or without getting time. The second class of embarrassed Municipalities are those which owe individuals having sold their debentures to the public; these are,

The City of Hamilton....	$900,000
do London.....	220,000
do Ottawa.....	60,000
The Town of St. Thomas....	66,000
do Prescott.....	30,000
do Preston.....	36,000
do Caledonia.....	40,000
	$1,352,000

in all, one million three hundred and fifty-two thousand dollars. There was also sold, in the open market, a sum for the amount of Debentures of seven hundred and eighty thousand dollars, but the Municipalities issuing these are not embarrassed, viz.: The City of Toronto, four hundred thousand dollars; the Town of Berlin, twenty thousand dollars; the County of Simcoe, two hundred thousand dollars; and the County of Middlesex, one hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

Your Committee have satisfied themselves that these embarrassed Municipalities of both classes have the strongest claim on the sympathy and assistance of the Province, while they have a peculiar right to the consideration of the Legislature, and that their distresses having a legislative cause must necessarily have a legislative cure, although the unfortunate condition of the Provincial Finances renders the present an inopportune time to get this great subject the consideration to which it is entitled, looking to the interest of the Province generally, as well as what simple justice makes due to localities whose enterprise led them to involve themselves in public works of a provincial character.

Your Committee, however, have to report the necessity of immediate action to save these Municipalities out of the hands of the Sheriff, in which most of them now are and all will be before Parliament meets again after a prorogation, and also to save the financial character of the Provinces as putting a stop to the invasion of its revenue caused by the distress and depopulation of these important localities.

While insisting that the embarrassed Municipalities shall pay in full, principal and interest, so soon as they are able, from the increase of their assessable property or otherwise, and shall meantime assess themselves to the greatest extent incompatable with their continued rise as communities (an object essential for the sake of the Province and their other creditors), your Committee recommend relief being extended them by the Province giving them time to pay in the following manner; Firstly. In the case of the first class alluded to (those which have borrowed from the Municipal Loan Fund), their arrears of the five per cent., to be paid by them under the Act of 1859, should be settled by the Province taking payment in their Debentures at 20 years, bearing 5 per cent. interest, thus removing them out of the hands of the Sheriff. At the same time they should get notice that punctual payment will be enforced in 1863, and every subsequent year, although the five per cent. should be made payable on the present and future actual assessments (the present being the minimum). Secondly. In the case of the second class alluded to, of embarrassed Municipalities (those whose Debentures are in the open market), simple justice requires them to be put upon the same footing as those Municipalities which borrowed the province's money from the Municipal Loan Fund. And this can be arranged by Parliament empowering Government to loan to this second class of embarrassed Municipalities from time to time, re-payable in the same way by their Debentures bearing five per cent. interest, and at 20 years date sums amounting to the difference between five per cent. on their local assessments and the six per cent. which they have to pay on their Railway Debts; in the same way as the Government is empowered, by the 42nd clause of chap. 83, the Consolidated Municipal Loan Fund Act of 1859, to loan to the first class of embarrassed Municipalities, out of "The Upper Canada Building Fund," the moneys allowed to Upper Canada to balance the sums given by the Province to relieve Lower Canada from its Seignorial burthens, a Provincial evil of the same nature but not so great as the chronic distress under which the embarrassed Municipalities now groan. It may as well be explained here that having reference to the comparison between the Railway Debts and the amount of the assessable property of the seven embarrassed Municipalities belonging to the second class, it is found that the annual assistance by loan (and no relief is proposed in this report except by the way of loan) which, under this recommendation of your Committee, they might get from the Province, could not exceed $60,000 (thirty-five thousand dollars), a sum considerably less than the annual interest on the amount at credit of "The Upper Canada Building Fund," which will this year, have increased to over a million of dollars.

All which, nevertheless, is respectfully submitted.

ISAAC BUCHANAN, Chairman.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE MINISTRY.

The Attorney General East and West Solicitors General East and West, and the Commissioner of Crown Lands, have all been elected by acclamation, making the number of new Ministers re-elected, nine, leaving but Messrs. Dorion, Morris, and Tessier to pass the ordeal. So far everything has gone on smoothly with the new incumbents, and the almost universal feeling in the country is not to hamper or harass them, but to allow them to have every opportunity to develope their policy. The late Upper Canada Premier has set an honorable example of according to them British fair play, and if they fail in answering the expectations of the country, they will have to offer some other excuse than embarrassment from their political foes. Never has an Administration commenced with more serious responsibility resting upon them, than the present,—and it will be well for them to realize this.

Since the Baldwin-Lafontaine Government, the present is, strictly speaking, the only party government that has existed. Not only does the party it represents expect great things, but the Opposition, likewise expect that the measures propounded and urged will be those calculated to benefit the country. It is usual to have one or more leading subjects upon which a Parliament and a Government are elected—a platform, so called, upon which they are to stand. The present Government seems to have been formed upon one principle, and the House and country seem to concur in that view. Setting aside other important and cherished matters under the very peculiar nature of the case, the great practical question which comes home to every family in the country, had to be settled first—and that question was economy. The alarming deficiency for the past years, the ordinary expenditures exceeding the revenue, by some three millions annually, necessitated an additional burden of taxation which was about being felt more tangibly than formerly—led all friends of the country to be willing to trust the guidance of the Ship of State in the hands of the present men.

A very general, and almost universal impression exists, that serious leaks threaten its safety, and all eyes are turned to watch the conduct of the present guardians whether their first efforts are directed to this first, though most necessary and indispensible duty of stopping those leaks.

What we ask, is the reason why the late Administration were allowed to surrender their control—were in fact driven from the post they so recently were re-elected to—but the patent fact staring in the face of the entire community, that the Cartier-McDonald cabinet were so extravagant, so reckless of the public finances that bankruptcy and ruin threatened this hitherto prosperous country? It was this more than any question of Representation by Population, or of Constitutional Government, that secured its downfall. Such was the feeling evoked by the recent investigations in its financial administration, that it scarcely received a christian burial.

Eighteen months before, during a feeling tour through the Upper Province, this very Administration was feasted, was landed and extolled to the skies. Peans were sung, and leading men all over the country vied with each other to do honor to the men who so long and so well had ruled over them. Multitudes then would risk almost anything to defend and honor the men of their choice. How comes it in so short a period, when these very men cease becoming rulers—cease to exist as a Government—that not a soul is to be found to act the part of a mourner, or to exclaim "Peace to their ashes!" We answer that the cause of the general abhorence and indifference felt for them arises from this very point, that their extravagance and recklessness was burdening the country with enormous and oppressive taxation. The demand now made by the country of the McDonald-Sicotte Government is retrenchment and economy—keeping the ordinary expenditure of the country within the revenue—lopping off unnecessary offices and incumbents.—Stopping the leaks, and thus saving the Ship.

Nothing short of this, of the most rigid economy, will meet the expectations of either friends or foes—all other matters says the country—say the very members of the Administration—sink into insignificance to this. Let them then be sincere, and apply themselves honestly and earnestly to the important task committed to them, and they will merit and receive the thanks of the whole country. But let them lose sight of their responsibility, and fall into the errors of their predecessors—conduct public matters with a view to the furtherance of party measures, and individual interests at the expense of the public weal—and they will in that case deserve and receive the execrations of friends as well as foes—will be hurled from power with disgrace—for the simple reason that they know what is right, and what is required, profess to do these but do them not.

We have confidence, however, in the McDonald-Sicotte Ministry, that they will answer the expectations of the country, though we thus speak. Reformers they are by profession, and the great body in Upper Canada which they represent will render them support in carrying out the measures required of them. It has waived its cherished measure, and overlooked the apparent abandonment of it in their acceptance of the responsible duty of saving the country from financial ruin, with the assurance that they will do as they promise. Great and multifarious measures are not asked for or looked for—all measures sink into insignificance at the present moment beside this great, this momentous measure of economy of the finances of the country. Wealth is power, and the State that has it can accomplish great things; but wasting it, it is powerless.

The Public Debt.

The Leader of Monday has an article upon the liabilities of the Province on the 31st of Dec. last, as submitted to the Public Accounts Committee, which seems to set at rest the dispute hereto existing as to the correct amount. The figures are furnished by Mr. Langton, the Auditor General, and statements made by him should be above suspicion. The entire debt of the Province at the date above, funded and unfunded, is set down at $61,838,374—a round sum verily for so new a country to be burdened with. The writer in the Leader while appearing to extenuate the financial course of the last Administration, winds up in this fashion: "But the time has now come when it is desirable that we should annually make both ends meet, and we trust that the day of deficiencies is at an end." So mote it be.

☞ We understand that the Haldimand Baptist Association meets in the Baptist Chapel, Peterboro, next week, Friday 27th inst., at 10½ o'clock, a. m., when the opening sermon is expected to be preached by the Rev. Dr. Caldicott, of Toronto. In the same place there will be preaching on Sabbath 29th, at 10½ a. m., 2½ p. m., and 6½ p. m.

☞ The nomination day for Perth has been fixed for Tuesday, 24th inst., at one o'clock, p. m. The polling days will be the 1st and 2nd of July next.

TARGET PRACTICE.

On Friday afternoon a firing party of Captain Poole's Company proceeded out of town to have their first target practice this season. Although the day was rather bright and windy to be favorable for good shooting a marked improvement was observable.

The distance was 100 and 200 yards.—One hundred and eight shots were fired, and the points made were seventy-three.

We understand it is Captain Poole's intention to have a practice every fortnight during the summer months, as a liberal supply of ammunition has been obtained from Head Quarters.

The men are greatly pleased with their first day's practice, and look forward with pleasure to their next. It has created a feeling of friendly emulation in the corps, which will undoubtedly prove beneficial.—We believe a number of recruits have joined, induced doubtless by the prospect of these pleasant half holidays spent in so laudable a manner. We would like to see the community take an interest in the matter by offering prizes, no matter how small their intrinsic value might be, to be competed for, and which would have the effect of showing our Volunteers that their services were appreciated, and thus promote in fostering that spirit which at some no distant date may prove the means of defending our land.

☞ The Assessor of the Village of Ashburnham, it appears, had rated the property therein too high. The Court of Revision after getting through with the cases appealing against the assessment, directed that two assistant assessors who had not gone round with the assessor, and the Clerk, should meet and equalize the Roll, and report to the Council the result of their labors!

These officials met to compare and equalize the Assessments "as fairly as they could." Their Report was submitted to the Council, "received and adopted."

This is certainly a novel way of assessing a Municipality, and if acted on by others might save some travelling and expense. We are satisfied, however, that this way is illegal, and the ratepayers could easily avoid being bound by the Assessment so made. The law provide that Assessments shall be altered or amended only on complaint by parties interested therein. The Court has no authority to equalize or amend the Roll in any other way. It steps in, so to speak, between the assessors and the assessed, and decides upon evidence what shall be done in the premises.

MARRIAGE IN OLD AGE.

A pair were united in Wedlock last Monday, in this place, whose united ages reach nearly 160 years. Mr. John Schollard is bordering on ninety, and his wife, formerly Miss Elizabeth McFadden is about seventy.

BACK LAKES EXCURSION.—The Union Temperance Excursion which took place on Friday last, was a complete success. About 9½ o'clock, the Steamer Ogemah left Mud Lake for the Indian Village, where she took on board about fifty persons, which increased the number already on board to over two hundred. The day was very pleasant throughout. Bobcaygeon was reached at 12 o'clock, when a large number left the boat to have a look round the island; after a short delay of locking through, at the first sound of the whistle all were on board, and the vessel steamed up the Lake to Fenelon Falls, which place was reached about three o'clock, where the party disembarked for refreshments.

The day passed off very pleasantly, but for the lack of music.

The Steamer returned in good time, reaching Bridgenorth about 8½ o'clock.

THE WEATHER.—Since our last issue, we have had a magnificent rain. It commenced on the afternoon of Thursday, 12th inst., and continued for four hours with little intermission. After the rain ceased, and during the most of the next day, it continued cloudy, thus giving the crops the benefit of the needed shower. The Weather on Sunday was very cold for the season, and the early risers on Monday morning would see frost on the grass. On Monday and Tuesday it was clear, but quite cool, the winds having a raw, uncomfortable feeling.

On Wednesday it opened clear and warm but soon became overcast, with indications of rain. While we write black clouds indicate heavy rain—and we hope we are about having another very seasonable shower.

☞ The Square Timber is nearly all down, and in a few days more will be below this, on its way to Quebec. The season is marked for the despatch made of running the River, and the almost absence of accidents of a serious nature. We have heard of but one death on the river this year, and that was caused by a jam. One man, we hear was drowned at Burleigh. There are busy times at the Railway Station in the Sawn Lumber. A great many cars leave every day for the front. Our millers are sending off all their lumber, and we hope soon to see them reaping the benefits of their enterprise. The prices at Albany we hear are good—the only drawback is the exchange. Formerly, drafts at New York commanded a premium, now they are from 2 to 4 per cent discount.

☞ Edward Keenan was executed on the 12th inst., at Milton, for the murder of his mother. Christopher Boulton was also executed on the same day, at Niagara Falls, for the murder of his wife.

☞ His Excellency the Governor General has postponed his visit to Montreal. He will arrive in that city on the 1st July, hold a levee on the 2nd, and dine with the citizens on the 3rd.

We publish the following letter written by the Rev. D. Tully, Chaplain of the 77th Regiment N. Y. V. to his brother Rev. A. Tully in New Jersey. The letter is dated from a place eight miles from West Point, near Richmond, Va., May 12, 1862. The two brothers are sons of Mr. Andrew Tully, of Monaghan, and are well known around this neighborhood:

DEAR BROTHER:—

I believe we had the honor to be the only regiment in the brigade that had preaching. Some of the Chaplains have resigned, and others are as far behind in the rear. We have been exceedingly busy for the past nine days. A week past yesterday, while we were at breakfast, the regiment were ordered to enter the entrenchments of the enemy, and it was believed the forts were evacuated. Our regiment was the second in the Fort, against which we had been operating. Torpedoes, and percussion capped bombs, were placed in the ground, but were, fortunately, discovered and removed by our men. Not one exploded. The first one stepped on by one of the regiment was extinguished by water from a canteen, before it had time to explode, owning to the dampness of the powder. Their works were very strong. Howell Cobb commanded the troops in the Fort in front of us, but for ten days previous to evacuation, we did not allow them to load a gun. Our artillery and sharpshooters had entire control of them. The chivalry sent out negroes to load their cannon when it became dangerous. On the 5th (Sabbath) we were ordered to pursue the retreating rebels. Our advance came up with their rear a few miles below Williamsburg.

The cavalry and artillery had a skirmish on Sabbath, p. m. One of our batteries was badly cut up, the infantry not having yet arrived. The firing ceased with the shades of night. Our regiment was sent to support one of the batteries in the 2nd line of battle. Both armies slept on their arms that night. Five of us, Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel, Adjutant, Surgeon, and myself, slept sweetly in a pannel of a worm fence, with a rail in common for a pillow. We were awoke in the morning by a drenching rain, and at early dawn the enemy's guns announced their determination to give us battle. They met a speedy response from our pickets, and soon Gen. Hooker's Division opened the fire on our side on our left wing. The provision train had not come within many miles of our encampment, and I rode back to bring up provisions for our field and staff officers on horse back. The wagon train was not allowed to move in order that the artillery and infantry might push forward to the fray. Such roads you never saw. The rain poured in torrents, the men and horses plunging through the mud and water, knee deep. I returned to the scene of action about ten o'clock. The line of battle was rapidly extending, the booming of cannon, and the sharp crack of musketry had now become one continued long rolling sound. The enemy repulsed Hooker on the left, and one time threatened to turn it. Couch's Division was now sent forward to reinforce in the wood, where the battle was raging fiercely, and he in turn drove the rebels back. But they held a strong position indeed—much stronger than the line of defence at Yorktown. A narrow wood lay between the opposing armies, so that the contending armies could not see each other, except those in actual contest in the wood. The wood was west, and toward the York river, a small creek, or what the inhabitants here call a gut. It is a deep ravine across which they had thrown a dam, and filled it with water 15 feet deep.

On their side of the wood they had a slashing of trees, and a long line of rifle-pits dug in the days of the revolution, which they occupied with sharp-hooters and which was not perceived by our troops. Besides their artillery from several of their Forts were ranged on the roads through which our artillery had to pass in order to get a sight of their Forts at all. Our artillery was subjected to the fire of their sharp-shooters and artillery at the same time. Many of our regular artillery left their guns, and volunteers were sent to work them. The 93rd Pennsylvania, 55th N. Y. and one or two of the New Jersey Regiments sent out of the battle a large number of cowards. They came running out of the wood crying that we were whipt. The Quartermaster of the Regiment and myself, shamed 45 of them in a squad, and drove them back to their comrades. Our Division, Smith's, was sent out to feel the left wing of the enemy toward the York river, and if possible turn it. This Division is composed of Geo's. Hancock's 1st, Brook's 2d, and Davidson's 3rd Brigades. Brooks was sent to penetrate the woods to the right of Hooker, and Hancock took his own Brigade and two Regiment's of Davidson's (Davidson being absent by sickness.) Hancock commanded both Brigades. The 49th and 77th N. Y. left with Wheeler's Battery, as a reserve to be sent to his aid, or Brooks as necessity might require.—Hancock succeeded in crossing the dam with one Battery and seven good Regiments, opposite one of the enemy's Forts—he moved rapidly along a field of wheat beyond the 2nd Redoubt, and unperceived, and opened his Battery on the main work of the enemy, when a brigade (Early's of North Carolina) was sent to capture it.—As they approached Hancock withdrew it, and they shouted another Bull Run, when to their amazement the Battery wheeled, and raked their entire line with grape. The reserve was being hurried forward with the other Battery. Early ordered his men to charge—Hancock's whole line gave them a volley or two, and then charged with the bayonet, and the rebels broke and run, the victory was ours; darkness now closed in upon the scene and ere morning dawned the enemy had fled, leaving all his wounded without a Surgeon. In Williamsburg, every Church, College, and public building is full of them. The battle field was a sad sight next morning. The dead and dying lay everywhere. We first cared for our own men, and then theirs. We first buried our own dead, and then theirs. In one Fort I found 30 of their wounded, and 9 of their dead. The battle was a hard fought one, and the lost in killed, wounded and missing won't fall much short of 2,000 on each side. Their loss is rather the largest. Joe Johnson was the chief in command. General Longstreet was their commander in the field. The battle-field is in sight of Williamsburg, and but two miles distant from it. The city is an old one, and contains about 1800 aristocratic inhabitants. They are mostly disloyal. The State Lunatic Asylum, and Mary and William's College are the only fine buildings in the place. The streets are not paved, and like every place I have seen in the Peninsula is decaying. I mingle freely with what of the inhabitants that remain. I have dined, and taken bed by invitation with several of them. We spent two days in burying the dead, and caring for the wounded, and then marched for this place. Contrabands are seeking liberty in great numbers. I have not found a colored person on this Peninsula that can read. They laugh at our approach, and the whites look sad. The rebel army has ruined all the farms here. Cannons, Caissons and Wagons, dead horses and mules with knapsacks and old clothes indicate haste and terror in their flight. Franklin's, Fitz. J. Porter's, Richardson's and Sedgwick's division's went to the York river, and lie on our right. There must have been a change in the programme, produced by the evacuation of Norfolk, and our possession of the James river. We expect to march to-day. Excuse this hasty letter, we have long since thrown away chairs, and tables as unnecessary luxuries in these days of marching, and write on our knees. General McClellan assumed command at 4 p. m., and cheer after cheer ran along our lines.

I remain your affectionate brother,
D. TULLY.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

MEMPHIS, June 14.

The Granada mephis Appeal of the 12th inst, contains the following:—

AUGUSTA, Ga, June 11.

Fighting continues in the vicinity of Charleston. The papers from that city this morning contain the particulars of a sharp engagement on the James Island on Tuesday, p. m., which continued until dark.

The forces consisted of three regiments, a battalion of infantry and five batteries, under command of General W. F. Smith. The enemy were under the protection of felled trees and gunboats. Col. Williams, of the 46th regiment, was mortally wounded. Our loss is estimated at from 50 to 60, principally Georgians.

The loss of the enemy is thought to be much larger.

A federal prisoner taken on Monday reports the enemy's force on the James Island sixteen Regiments strong, and a few more were expected shortly.

It was reported at Charleston that the steamer Cecil, from that port for Nassau, with a cargo of cotton, had been captured by the enemy.

FORT MONROE, June 15.

The news of the naval fight on the Mississippi and the taking of Corinth and Memphis, and the advance of the Federals into East Tennessee, has just been published in Richmond, and created great consternation and depression.

NEW YORK, June 16.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, on board the steamer Brooklyn, off Baton Rouge, May 30, states that Fort Morgan had surrendered, leaving Mobile unprotected; also that Brig. Gen. Williams encountered a large body of Confederates outside the city and that a terrific engagement is transpiring; the result of which is unknown. General Butler is sending more men up in the Constitution and Mississippi.

Several crevasses had occurred in the Mississippi River. In some places whole towns and plantations were immersed.

The Hartford and Richmond has fired into Baton Rouge, killing and wounding several persons. It is the intention of the fleet to run by Vicksburg and attack the Confederate fleet on Azore River, one of which is iron plated.

The Post's special says Secessionists in Washington boldly predict another Confederate raid in the Shenandoah.

WASHINGTON, June 16,

Despatches of this date from Gen. Halleck have been received at the War Department. They present no new features with regard to Beauregard's army, which is supposed to still remain in the vicinity of Okolona, Overtown and Columbus.

Despatches from the army of the Potomac dated 7 o'clock this p. m., indicate that all is quiet in front of Richmond. Gen Dix informs the Department that the military telegraph has been completed to Norfolk.

THE WEATHER.—For many a year we do not remember such a dry season as this has been lately. No rain of any account has fallen for many weeks, and the farmers tell us most woful tails about their crops. The hay crop is gone almost entirely, and the wheat is so stunted, that it is feared it will not amount to much. Last Thursday, however, the clouds seemed to indicate rain, and towards evening quite a shower fell. This was very welcome to the farmers, yet in some cases the damage is so great that it cannot be averted, even though it should rain, abundantly. Before this great drouth all the crops looked exceedingly flattering; but now very lamentable accounts reach us about them. We sincerely hope, however, that the damage is not so great as it appears to be.—Brantford Courier.

A MONSTER SAW MILL.—The little village of Orono, on the Penobscot River, about 8 miles above Bangor, contains a saw mill which is not only the largest in the world. It takes 100 men to run it, and is called the "Basin Mill." It is situated between an island in the Penobscot and the bank of the river, and extends entirely across the stream, its length being 450 feet. There are in this mill four gang saws, eight upright saws, two large circulars, two lath machines, one clapboard machine, and one shingle machine—all propelled by water power. The capacity of this mill is 30,000,000 feet of lumber each season. An exchange says there are now at this mill about 3,000,000 of logs, and about 20,000,000 more up the river, all for this one concern.

☞ Two men named Day and Hart were sentenced, at the the last Cobourg Assizes, to be hanged, on the 9th, for rape. On the day in question a large number of people flocked into the town to witness the sad and mournful spectacle, but were disappointed, the sentences having been commuted to imprisonment—Duly for seven and Hart for five years.

Finance in the South.

As their commercial cities successively fell before our advancing fleets and armies, the veil behind which the blockaded populations concealed their sufferings and their squalor is suddenly drawn aside. The first vessel to New Orleans is hurried off by Government to feed a community now for the first time admitted to be nearly famished. Nashville was found to be unspeakably destitute. When Norfolk was occupied by our troops, it was discovered that provisions commanded prices such as no Northern community had ever heard of. The Federal army in Virginia, as it penetrates the heart of the rebellion, discovers multitudes of families without food enough to satisfy a single soldier. Many of the Rebel prisoners testify to the gaunt fare they had been compelled to live on. Evidence from all quarters of the Rebel districts shows that the people have been subsisting upon bog and swamp or even meaner food, such as even Northern mobsills, stupid enough to know how to build a locomotive, or brave enough to carry a load, would spurn from their tables. It is notorious that at Newberne our Generals have gratuitously been feeding hundreds of families who had neither work nor bread, many of whom belonged to traitors now in arms against us, while for months past a free market has been open at New Orleans, at which thousands, made paupers by the blockade, have been publicly fed. These spectacles remind us of the sufferings of beleaguered European garrisons. Our country has never witnessed them till now. What we yet know of them is but the general view. Hereafter the details will come thronging in to excite our horror, possibly our pity at the intensity of this self-imposed suffering. We shall hear narratives of good men made beggars by rebellion, of poor widows, with families of children, compelled to humble themselves to charity for bread, with details even yet more sickening when the local history of each of these blockaded cities comes to be written. If we already learn that great crowds stretch forth their hands to an outraged Government to save them from a famine which their leaders have invited into every household, who shall conjecture the agonizing minutiæ of which the vast aggregate of suffering is composed?

At New Orleans, the stoppage of trade and the stoppage of the food supply has for instance been frightful. We have seen every lying agency employed to

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Bavaria and the China.

Cape Race, June 14.

The steamships Bavaria, from Southampton on the 4th, and the China from Liverpool and Queenstown on the 5th inst., passed this point at 11 o'clock this morning, and were both boarded by the news yatch of the Associated Press.

The steamship Jura arrived out on the 3rd., and the Edinburgh on the 4th inst.

The general news contains no striking characteristics.

The divisions of the French army left at Rome consist of only three brigades, under General Montebello.

The Prussian ambassador has arrived at Paris. The silk crop in France is represented as most satisfactory.

The Montenegrins have been beaten by the Turks on the frontier, and four villages burned.

The British admiralty have granted to the Atlantic Telegraph Company the services of the cruers necessary for rewing and extending the former surveys of the route. The Cable is intended to be submerged on the route westward from the Irish coast for a distance of 500 miles, will be sounded at distances of about a mile apart, the previous soundings having been taken some 30 miles asunder. A good map of the bottom may in this manner be obtained, and thus facilitate the operation of laying the cable. A careful examination will also be made of the Newfoundland coast, and the English Government have consented to send free of cost the ships from which the cable will be paid out. Further negotations are in progress, the result of which will lead to the raising the additional capital necessary to complete this noble enterprise, the want of which has been so seriously experienced by both England and America.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The next advices from America are awaited with the greatest anxiety, owing to the probable news of a desperate battle being fought at Richmond or Corinth, or at both places.

The Times city article says, the belief in the possibility of an early settlement of the American difficulties has been greatly diminished by the last intelligence.

Summary of News by the China.

The China has 68 passengers and 1,000 tons cargo for New York, where she will be due on Tuesday morning.

The China made the passage from Queenstown to Cape Race in five days and seventeen hours.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Scully had given notice in the Commons of a motion in favour of establishing a communication between Europe and America by steamers calling every alternate day at Cork, with telegraph communication off Crook Haven or Cape Clear, but postponed the motion in the hope of laying additional facts before the House.

Both Houses had adjourned for a week in consequence of the Whitsun holidays.

Mr. Pearson, owner of the steamer Circassian, publishes a letter stating that the vessel had nothing really contraband on board, that she was legitimately chartered for the voyage from Bordeaux to Havana, and was within 20 miles of her destination, when seized by the federal cruisers. He says that her draught of water precluded her entrance into any confederated port, hence it was impossible that she should run the blockade.

Agitation has commenced at East Lancashire to induce the Government to reduce all duties upon cotton goods exported to India, and thereby relieve the distress of the manufacturing districts. A large district out-door meeting has been called to discuss the question.

Lord Brougham, in an inaugural address before the Social Science Association; expatiated on the American question, pointing out the proneness of democracy to war. He warmly complimented the Federal Government for the new Slave Trade treaty, which he regarded as the last blow to the traffic.

The Times editorially reproaches the Canadian Government for neglecting to provide for the defence of the country in defeating the militia bill. It points out the question as a vital one for the independence of Canadians, but quite secondary for England.

The Daily News controvert the attack of the Times as unjustifiable, and says no one has a right to charge the Canadians with neglecting the duty of providing for the defence of the country, simply because they had differed upon and rejected the militia bill.

FRANCE.

There was a rumor that Napoleon contemplates the permanent establishment of French influence in Mexico, by means of a protectorate.

The Empress Eugenie was expected to pay a private visit to England.

☞ The Annual Conference of the Bible Christian Church in Canada has been in session in this town during the past week. Their deliberations commenced, as announced in our last issue on the 4th instant.

We understand that the year has been one of financial and numerical prosperity. There are at present under its jurisdiction five self-sustaining Circuits and 16 Mission Stations in Canada, and seven in the United States, one of which on the borders of Lake Superior, has been opened during the year with marked success. Steps have been taken to incorporate the Mission on Prince Edward Island with the Canadian Conference. Two ministers who had fulfilled their term of probation were taken into full connection with the Conference and five were received on trial, which, with two from England, have increased the staff of laborers but as numerous are the openings that a larger increase of Ministers is needed. The services delivered during the Conference were scriptural and impressive, especially those delivered on Sunday by the Rev. C. Barker, from P. E. Island when the anniversary of the Cobourg Chapel took place with gratifying success. Interesting public meetings were held on Monday and Tuesday evenings, when the necessity for erecting Chapels for an efficient Ministry, a consistent membership, and an adherence to Temperance principles, was clearly and ably set forth. The Conference in which harmony of sentiment and purpose have prevailed, rises its sessions to-day.—Star.

Parson Brownlow.

The great hall was full, and we were all looking to the stage, through the side-door of which we expected to see the man who had "fought with beasts at Ephesus;" small boys slid up and down the aisles with "photographs of Brownlow—only a quarter, sir;" but very few deigned them a look. The lion himself was there. The slow dial-hand crept up to the mark of hour, and the organist was just commencing another fantasie, when a roar like an earthquake swelled up from the floor through all the galleries, and to the salutation of two thousand five hundred feet, hands and voices, the Knoxville patriot walked in with the Governor. The usual brief and elegant introductory speech—another long cheer, and Parson Brownlow stood before us. Had we never been informed that he was originally a circuit-preacher of the primitive forests, we should all have said so at first sight of him. He looked a veritable Elder Tribulation Troublesome; the thin, lathy figure the long, straight ear-locks, the eyes piously half-closed, and tight-shut lips falling penitentially at the corners—surely the next thing will be, "My dear brethern and sisters," with the full nasal twang; but no.

The parson drank a glass or two of water from the stand, rinsed his mouth, spirted the liquid on the floor, and waited, rather impatiently, for the cheering to stop. "Ladies and gentlemen," and the voice was clear, sensible and familiar as mine and yours. "We can hear that man talk as he wants to speak," and we settled ourselves comfortably in our seats to listen while the hero of a hundred fights told his story. His choice of terms was not always elegant but he never waited for a word. Everett's magnificent martial description of the periods of Choate would not fit him. His language came forth more like the guerilla volleys of a backwoods war, and it was just what we came to hear—a man of the times speaking the speech of the times. He was not long in introducing to us the arch-demon of his hatred, the Southern rebellion. After recounting the circumstances of the loss, and partial recovery by medical treatment, of his voice, he stated in substance, "I was advised to continue, by, all means, the practice of public speaking, and accordingly took up temperance lecturing. You all know that that is a good cause. Besides, I engaged to some extent as a methodist minister on the circuits, preaching the Gospel—and you all know that is a good cause; but neither temperance nor the Gospel restored my voice, till I was finally driven out of my native State, and on arriving at Cincinnati, ventured to fill an appointment made for me to speak to three thousand people, when, no sooner had I opened my mouth to speak against this infinitely infernal rebellion than my voice came back me, and has continued good ever since!"

For a full hour the veteran stood, telling us what the Tennessee mob had done to him, his property and his country, and narrating incidents of his experience and observation that made our blood boil and our flesh creep. We saw him stand on the steps of his beleagured dwelling and defy the mob to hang him, till his wife and friends, by their piteous entreaties, forced him to consider his safety and take refuge in the mountains. We saw him in his wild retreat among his sixty followers, like David in the gorges of Adullham, not long here, however, for his anxiety and indignant impatience hurried him back into the jaws of danger. Then the loathstone Knoxville jail, where the prisoners had not room enough to lie down; where, day after day, the tumbril came with coffins to take one or two poor wretches to the gibbet; where the victim was cursed when he asked for the last services of his minister, and denied the consolations of religion; where the mother with a babe at her breast, was refused acces to her husband, sick, or doomed, in a few hours to hang. "My God!" said Brownlow, with a broken voice, "may I never see the sight again!"

But his turn did not come. The ways of Providence are wise but mysterious. "We were none of us informed of our fate till the summons came," said he, "and I, how do you think I felt? Certainly, under the laws of that reign of terror, if any one more richly deserved hanging than all the rest I was the man! They called us all ——Union shriekers. Hadn't I shrieked louder, jumped higher, and fell flatter than any of them? I expected to be hung, and had prepared my speech to deliver at the gallows. I knew they would hear me, for they always have unconquerable curiosity to hear what old Brownlow will say!"

May he live many years to say it, was the thought of us all, as we remembered that he had lost his all for loving his country. The thousands he is gathering among us will enable him soon to start his suppressed paper again. Long live the Knoxville Whig and its editor!—Reflector.

In the parish of Deasy, the number of marriages for the quarter was eighty, and out of that number thirty of the informants had to sign by mark!

There's Starch, and Soda, and nice Hand-sleighs
That children can have fun on the cold Winter days.
Very fine Rings, Combs, and Studs,
Brooches, Thread, Beads, and small Washtubs.

So all good people take my advice,—
If you want to get anything very nice,—
Just call at the shop and try any kind;
You'll be sure to be suited to your mind.

JOHN WATTERSON is a kind-hearted man,
And he'll please you all as well as he can.
Mean people get trust, with a shuffling tale,
If they had their due they'd be put all in gaol.

Hurrah for the Flag! may it rule the world,
And at J. Watterson's store be always unfurl'd,
I'll finish my verses, and have only to say,
That I'll do something better some other day.

PERFECTION
CHURN!
PATENTED IN APRIL, 1862,
By J. W. Smith,
OF PRESCOTT, C W.

THIS CHURN is decidedly the most useful that has yet been invented. By it the largest churning can be into butter in ten minutes. The cream is poured into a tin hopper on the top of the churn, and runs through a Sack Breaker, which immediately crushes the butter sacks of the cream. By the time the cream runs through the crusher it is perfectly cool, and prepared for making butter immediately. One of these churns may be seen at the

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,
and at the
STEWART HOUSE,
PETERBORO.

and we only ask persons to come and examine it. They will at a glance be convinced that it is the quickest, most labor saving, and in every respect the best and cheapest Churn ever offered to the public. One real advantage of this churn is that the cream will yield five per cent more butter than can be obtained by any other known process. This difference alone will make the price of the churn in a very short time.

The exclusive right to manufacture and sell these churns in the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria has been purchased by the undersigned, and they are now prepared to supply them, made with great care, and warranted perfect in every particular.

Further information regarding these valuable Churns may be had on application to

LEWIS McGREGGOR,
At the North American Hotel, or to
GEORGE McDONALD,
Elgibert Street.

TESTIMONIALS.

We the undersigned, being at the fire at the residence of Dr. Henry and Homer Taylor, and having witnessed the working of the Hydropult Fire Annihilator, found it to be what it says HYDROPULT. does the thing testify to its usefulness in suppressing fires, particularly where water is scarce, and the ordinary services of the Fire Engine cannot be procured:

This implement is coming rapidly into favor with the public, and well it may. The arrangements made by one of the Fire Departments, and are being adopted by our Public School build ings. A Hydropult, being charged around small fire, will do more effective work than a Hydrant. Hydropult has option to reverse the pump handle, and throw water backwards from the nozzle, a very valuable property for various purposes. The instrument is worthy a place in every house, where it can be advantageously used.

A NEW STORY
IN THE
SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:

A FIRST-CLASS
INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 8th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled
DELLBURN HOUSE,
A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1745.
BY THE AUTHOR OF
"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the British people and their families from all parts of the old country resident on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its Home and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspapers. Another most important feature of the journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and 2 clearing that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 6,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.
The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage accorded to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.
The sale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and publish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and retained—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which our editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1862
"We have this day forwarded with Mr. A.R. Sy. Gowan to circulate five thousand copies of the "Toronto Evening Journal" to parties named by us containing our advertisement.
ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulating, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the "Toronto Evening Journal" will receive one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly "Journal," a large first class paper established in 1857, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.
The terms for advertising are less than has ever been offered to the public before, viz: three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without changes) will be inserted at one dollar per line by the year, when they contain not more or less than six lines.
Newspapers, Books and Job Printing done neatly, cheaply, and with despatch.
Office:—First flat over the 'Golden Lion' 87 King Street East.

ANNUAL MEETING
INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 10th April.
Alexander Nimmo, Esq., of Drumallian, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.
There were submitted to the meeting—
1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.
2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.
The two also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1866.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£484,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	360,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums re-assured from other Offices under guarantees	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,750 current LIFE POLICIES	1,355,85 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downie, Esq., Actuary to the Permanent Life Office in London, a gentlen an well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his cert n approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their report. This step the Directors considered would fulfil to stay the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.
During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £20,975 6s 6d.
In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £41,477 18s 7d, to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the company, was £211,821 4s.
The Directors laid before the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.
In conclusion, the Directors con ratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Policies existing Policies, entitled by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.
It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s 1d per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 37 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, as a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. "Know ye not that there is a Prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel."

"AND ALL THE PEOPLE WEPT"

When the chill winds of autumn round us blow,
And whither'd leaves are quiv'ring on the blast,
And o'er the hard, cold, pulseless earth the snow,
Like vestal robe of spotless white is cast.

How longs the heart for those glad summer hours,
So little prized while yet they were our own!
How sweet the recollection of the flow'rs,
Which transient beauty with those hours has flown!

When wasting sickness racks the weary frame,
And life's ems robb'd of all the charms it wore,
When days revolve in an unwearied train,
Each seeming like the one that went before—

Oh, then, how fair! how priceless! seems the bloom
That mantl'd on the glowing cheek before!
The yearning soul reclaims, amid its gloom,
The rosy tints erewhile the future wore.

And ah! the blank despair when those depart,
Whose worth we know not while we linger'd here,—
The agonizing void within the heart,
As o'er the past we drop sad Memory's tear.

We know that with pleasures we are blest,
Until we must the precious gift forego;
So was't with Him erewhile who sank to rest,
For whom a Nation's bitter tears still flow.

We lov'd but knew not that we lov'd so well,
Until a pall seemed cast across our sky,
Until we heard that startling midnight knell,
We had not dreamt PRINCE ALBERT o'er could die

We mourn a stately tree by lightning crush'd,
Ere it had reached the beauty of its prime!
We mourn a strain of heavenly music hush'd,
Ere we had caught its most celestial chime!

We mourn a glorious day in darkness lost,
Ere it had reached the brightness of its noon;
We mourn a brilliant path pale Death hath cross'd,
A noble manly heart cut off too soon!

Patron of Science, Literature and Art!
What monumental Pile shall tell thy praise?
Thy Monument is in a people's heart,
More lasting far than aught of earth can raise.

A nation's tears howe'er sincere, will cease,
The Healer Time may soon assuage the smart;
But to THY WIDOW'D HEART its wonted peace,
BELOVED ONE, what time can e'er impart?

BELOVED ONE, indeed! OUR GRACIOUS QUEEN,
Thy woe is ours yet we may soon forget;
But, tho' the world around as fair is seen,
For Thee the brightest Sun of Life is set.

When all too heavily the cares of State
Upon Thy Regal Brow shall press, the while Sadly thy thoughts will turn on HIM who late
Could sooth thine every care with loving smile.

And recollections of the past will cling
Around Thy path, where'er Thy steps may roam,
Recalled by Glen or Grove, or bubbling Spring,
Among the mountains of Thy Highland home;

And Thou wilt sadly chide th' unbidden tear,
As memory recalls each look and tone
Of One whose image still shall linger near,
Although the heart cries out Alone! Alone!

Well may we weep!—the bitter loss is ours,
But not for HIM should e'er a tear-drop fall;
A ransomed spirit 'mid celestial Bowers,
What Heart would to this weary Earth recall?

Pale Flowers of Earth, which loving hands had wreathed
Will moulder into dust upon His Tomb.
But His the home where sin had never breath'd
The Amaranthine flow'rs of fadeless bloom.

The dark'ning veil of sorrow dims the eye
Of Faith, yet ROYAL MOURNER lift by the gaze
To yonder radiant choir, who sing on High
The new-made song to their Redeemer's praise.

And think of One amid the Glorious Band,
Dwelling in light which never can grow dim;
Aboard, safe from storms on yonder blessed strand,
Hid in the "ROCK OF AGES CLEFT FOR HIM."

And when on THEE shall steal Thy latest day,
Be't His, in bliss to greet thy soul set free,
And gently breathe, "Beloved come away!
E'en 'mid the joys of Heaven, I wait for thee."

A WIDOWS ADDRESS TO THE ROYAL WIDOW.—An address, unique of its kind, has just been presented to her Majesty the Queen. It comes from Wolverhampton, and is an address of condolence from the widows of that neighbourhood to the Royal Widow. Many of the poor women, widows of colliers, walked several miles into Wolverhampton, with the single purpose of affixing their names to the paper. The Queen's kindness in thinking of the sufferers by the Hartley accident in the midst of her own sorrows, had much affected them, and made them very forward on this occasion. They said, as they signed, "Her was so kind to think of them poor widows we be main glad to do her a good turn, God bless her!" The following is the address:—

May it please your Majesty,—We, the widows of this town, beg to humbly approach your Majesty to offer you the deepest sympathy from our own stricken hearts. We who have felt the bitter pang of bereavement, can most truly mourn with your Majesty's great grief, so nobly borne. Knowing, alas! too well, that no earthly consolation can avail in such a sorrow, we would humbly venture to remind your Majesty that the Father of the fatherless has said, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted," and has promised that in His glorious kingdom He will "wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away."

We are, your Majesty's most dutiful, most humble, and most devoted servants, Arrest of Mrs. Gallagher.

ROMANTIC STORY.

Some three years ago, their came to reside in the neighborhood of Brixton, two sisters, of the respective ages of 21 and 19. They were both pretty, and they had a quite lady-like grace and demeanour, which rendered them very attractive. They were, however, highly accomplished, and had every requisite qualification to shine in society. There was a mystery, too, about them which, to people of romantic imagination, only served to heighten the interest with which they were generally regarded. Nobody knew who the ladies were, or what were their "antecedents." As for "relatives," they did not appear to have any—their establishment consisting simply of three female servants. They appeared, however, to be in affluent circumstances, and their villa was furnished in a style of singular elegance. There was a thing flashy or ostentatious about it; but everything was in the best possible taste. Notwithstanding the inscrutability of their origin, the ladies gained admission into excellent society—their beauty, the grace of their manners, and the strict propriety of their conduct, winning golden opinions for them wherever they went. That ladies so fair should live by themselves and without the protection of any male relative, was, doubtless, a problem difficult of solution, and one which, at first, afforded matter of curious speculation to persons of an inquisitive turn of mind; but the nut was not to be cracked, and people at last gave up in despair the attempt to understand what appeared to be quite incomprehensible.—Whether they had fallen from the clouds or emerged from the sea, there the ladies were—gifted, beautiful, rich, and so strictly respectable as to defy slander. They were, accordingly received on terms of perfect equality by some of the best families in the neighborhood, including those of the sitting members. To their intimate friends they had been known to confess that they were themselves very much in the dark respecting their own parentage. All they knew for certain on the subject was, that they had a mother who, they believe, kept an hotel in Liverpool, but who, having a horror of a lowing them to reside in such a place, had established them in a villa near London, where she was in the habit of visiting them two or three times in the course of the year. As regards, they had been educated on the Continent. Thus circumstanced, they led a very pleasant life—and blameless as pleasant—until about a week ago, when one evening, just as they were about to sit down to dinner, they were equally surprised and delighted by a visit from their mother, who had come up from Liverpool on important and unexpected business. The old lady seemed troubled in spirit, and complained of being "harassed about one thing and another;" but her daughters attributed her sense of discomfort simply to the fatigue and excitement of a long journey. The night wore on, as nights will wear, and the family had already retired to rest when a knock was heard at the door. Female heads were thrust from the windows, and there was much expostulation with the untimely visitor, who was entreated to explain the purpose of his visit, or, at all events, to defer his call until the morrow. The stranger was inexorable. His business, he said, was not with the young ladies, but with the old, and her he was determined to see, come what might of it. And so he thundered away at the knocker with all his might and main. His was a strong arm and a muscular; and as the law nerved its muscles, he cared not what row he might occasion in the most peaceable of neighbourhoods at the most unseasonable of hours. At length the bolts are drawn, the door is opened, and the stranger "stands confused"—not "a maid in all her charms," but an officer of police in all his terrors. He has come for the old lady—for Mrs Gallagher, the most infamous procuress in England, of whom it is said that there is scarcley a town of any importance in the kingdom in which she has not established one or more of her detestable houses. The two young ladies have, as you may suppose, fled from Brixton. The revelation of their mother's infamy is said to have come on them like a thunderbolt; but whither they have gone, or what has become of them, is not generally known. Their furniture is to be sold by auction in a few days, and meantime their beautiful villa is thrown open for the inspection of the public. Strangers walk through the elegantly appointed rooms, and expatiate curiously on the character and conduct of the former occupants. Everything in the house betokens a refined taste and elegant sympathies. There are books and pictures, birds and flowers, and all the means and appliances of luxury—costly furniture, a piano by Collard, a harp by Erard; and the walls of the drawing room are covered with crayons and water-colour drawings executed by the sisters. The mother, who, at all events, appears to have "some remnant of the angle life," inasmuch as she preserved her children from the infamy in which she herself was steeped, was tried on Monday last at Liverpool, and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment. —Belfast News Letter.

TO PREVENT THE ATTACK OF THE TURNIP FLY.—By steeping the seed in salt water, the attacks of the turnip fly are partially or wholly prevented. Those who experimented last season mention it as a specifice. In steeping the seed, it is necessary to guard against injuring its vitality. Salt water made to a strength in which an egg will float is the description, the seed remaining about five minutes in the steep, and to be afterwards dried before sowing. Farmers, by experimenting with various steeps and dressings of seed, may discover something pratically useful. A solution of nitrate of soda, dissolved bones and Peruvian guano, is very suitable for the steeping of seed. A vigorous growth of the plants in their first stage will follow such steeps. Care, however, must be taken not to destroy the vitality of the seed, by leaving it wet too long.

Rev. Ralph Erskine and His Violin.

The celebrated minister whose Ralph Erskine indulged was playing on the violin. He was so great a proficient on this instrument, and so often beguiled his leisure hours away with it that the people of Dunfermline believed he composed his sermons to its tones, as a poet writes along to a peculiar air. They also tell the following traditionary anecdote connected with the subject:—A poor man in one of the neighbouring parishes, having a child to baptise, resolved not to employ his own clergyman, with whom he was at issue on certain points of doctrine, but to have the office performed by some minister of whose tenets favour gave a better report. With the child in his arms, therefore, and attended by the full complement of old and young women who usually minister on such occasions, he proceeded to the manse of—some miles off—not that of Mr. Erskine—Where he enquired if the clergyman was at home. "No; he's no hame the noo," answered the servant lass; "he's down the burn fishing, but I can soon cry him." "Ye need as gie yourself' the trouble replied the man, quite shocked at this account of the ministers habits; "name of your fishing ministers shall baptize my bairn.

Off he then trudged, followed by his train to the residence of another parochial clergyman at the distance of some miles. Here, on his enquiring if the minister was at home, the lass answered, "Deed he's no at hame the day; he's been out since sax o' the morning, at the shooting. Ye need na wait, neither; for he'll be sae made out (fatigued) when he comes back that he'll nae be able to boo at a', let-a-be baptising a weam!" Wait lassie!" cried the man in a tone of indignant scorn, "wad I wait, d'ye think, to hand up my bairo before a minister that gangs out at sax o' the morning to shoot God's creatures? I'll away down to good Mr. Erskine at Dunfarlin', and he'll be neither out fishing or shooting, I think!"

The whole baptismal train then set off to Dunfermline, sure that the father of the secession, although not now a planed minister, would at least be engaged in no unclerical sports, to incapacitate him for performing the sacred ordinance in question. On arriving at the manse, which they did not till a late hour in the evening, the man, on rapping at the door, anticipated that he would not be at home any more than his brethern. "The minister will no be at hame," he said with a sly smile, to the girl who came to the door, "or you lad (sweet heart) would na be playing that gate t'ye on the fiddle." "The minister is at hame," quoth the girl, "mair by token it's himself that's playin', honest man; he aye takes a tune at night before gangin' to bed. Faith there's na lad o' mine can play that gate; it would be something to tell if any o' them could. "That the minister playing," cried the man, in a degree of astonishment and horror far transcending what he had expressed on either of the former occasions. "If he does this what may the rest do? Weel, I fairly gie them up a' thegither. I have travelled this hail day in search o' a godly appointments in a day's journey. I'll tell ye what, gudewife," he udeed, turning to the disconsolate party behind, "we'll just awa' back to our own minister, after a'! He's no a' thegither sound, but let him be what he likes in doctrine, I never kenned him fish, shoot, or play on fiddle a' his days."

Economy in Small Things.

Few persons properly reflect on the importance of economy in little things. It is thought that the following calculation will place this subject in a striking light, and will be valuable in these days when our people are called upon to make such efforts to sustain themselves and their Government.

Supposing two boys commence, say at fifteen—the one to spend three cents a day on tobacco, the other to lay aside that sum, and at the end of each year put the amount to compound interest at six per cent.; supposing both to continue the practice to the end of life. The difference will be indicated by the following table, which gives the amount at intervals of five years.

Three cents a day amount in one year to $10 95; this sum being put to interest, a like sum being added at the close of every year, amounts to—

In 5 years	.....	$65 43
In 10 "	.....	152 79
In 15 "	.....	176 10
In 20 "	.....	426 8
In 25 "	.....	636 56
In 30 "	.....	917 21
In 35 "	.....	1,292 78
In 40 "	.....	1,795 66
In 45 "	.....	2,468 22
In 50 "	.....	3,368 24

This is, a useless expenditure of three cents a day, or $10 95 a year, on tobacco or anything else, amounts in fifty years—the table gives it in fact fifty-one years—to $3,368 24, a handsome property. One cent a day would amount to one-third as much, or $1,094 72. How very many spend this sum on the single article of tobacco!

From the cost of a three-cent useless habit, by simple multiplication, we obtain the loss incurred by the indulgence of habits that cost two, three, four, and five times three cents a day.—Boston Recorder.

Early Rising.

Late rising is not the habit of the very highest classes, for nothing itself sets the contrary example; and we have met, before now, princes taking their ride before breakfast at six o'clock. The present King of Hanover we have repeatedly met out at that time. We have known Lord Brougham, when chancellor, make appointments on matters of business at his private residence for eight o'clock in the morning; his own time of rising being four or five hours later and half-past six in winter. Supposing that a man thing at the instant of eight every morning of his life, he will save in the course of forty years, twenty-nine thousand hours, which is a great accession of available time for study or business dispatch; being, in fact, a gaining of three years, four months, two weeks, and six days. To any person of foresight, calculation, and industry; the fact will prove a sufficient temptation to practice the healthy and useful habit of early rising.—Chambers's Journal.

Property in Rum.

Under this head, we are glad to put our readers in possession of the following well-reasoned remarks by the venerable Dr. Humphrey, ex-President of Amherst College:—

"You ask my opinion on the point, "Can there be Property in Rum, when offered for sale as a beverage—to be protected by law?"

"I am afraid my opinion will be worth but very little; But I cannot refuse to throw out a few such thoughts as I have. You know, that I am no lawyer, and I cannot tell whether your State Constitution permits you to make a law forfeiting intoxicating drinks were offered for sale as a beverage, for I never read it. But if it does stand in the way of your cutting off the head of the hydra, it is high time that it was amended. I shall have what I have to say upon the great law of self-protection, which underlies every written law, whether organic or statutory. Can any property claim the protection, of law, in a use of it, which to a certainty, not only endangers, but actually destroys the health, morals and lives of thousands upon thousands every year? Are we to sit down in despair, and see rather the wholesale slaughter go on forever, because the destroying agent is bought with money, and thousands grow rich upon the traffic!—Intoxicating drinks are no more property than the keys and fires and saws of the midnight house breaker are—than the implements of counterfeiting are; but nobody claims, that they should be protected against seizure, because they cost money, and men get their living by the use of them. The question is not how many have made housebreaking and counterfeiting a lucrative business. It is enough that the public interest and safety require the seizure and confiscation. No doubt, keys and files and saws and drinks are necessary and lawful articles of traffic when sold for legitimate purposes; but should this authorise the sale and protect them from seizure, when it is known to a moral certainity, that they will be put to a bad use, as is the case, where intoxicating drinks are sold as a beverage?

"Why not let apothecaries keep poisonous drugs to be sold as a beverage, if anybody wants them; and why not protect them from seizure, if anybody should choose to deal them out for such a use? Why forbid gunpowder to be stored in the dense parts of a city, and why seize it and fine the owner heavily, as soon as it is found? Drugs are private property, powder is private property, so much as rum, or brandy. They are very useful for certain purposes. Why interfere, then, with the sale and storage? It is to protect the property, and lives which they might destroy. And may not the State protect itself against infinately greater dangers and the wholesale slow murders by a law which shall forbid the sale of alcoholic drinks as a beverage, and seize them when in defiance of the law they are sold to make and kill drunkards by scores and hundreds? Alcohol is property, it is! and so sneered that nobody may touch it, when there is no other way to save the community from its fiery ravages! It is property! It cost money and can be retailed for a great deal more than it cost, and so let the deacon, and his imps go on poisoning all whom they can tempt and to haunt their shambles, and kick them out of doors, and let who will shovel them into the drunkard's grave! God of mercy, deliver us! oh deliver us!!

Sad, but True.

There are mortals in this world whose life, from its earliest budding down to the "sere and yellow leaf," seems to be ever blighted and blasted. Through every scene, at every stage, all seemed dark and gloomy to them, without a single ray of joy to glimmer through the darkness and gloom. How many, travel through paths where daisies refuse to grow, and where the only flower is the piercing thistle.

Here is one whose race is well nigh run, whose course is almost finished. She has suffered out her measure of grief and the eye is closing to all earthly scenes. Come and see. Deep lines of terrible anguish are chiselled around the pale trembling lips, and dark shadows of past trials have gathered upon the brow of her as near the spirit land! The icon finger of death fails to wipe them out. Thank God her time is at hand—the eye brightens as it now and then catches glimpses of the delectable hills of the promised Canaan,—and her soul clings by a frail tendril of the weary body.

She was a drunkard's wife! Ah! how that word chills and harrows the blood in the inner temple of two thousand hearts! A drunkard's wife! In the bright morning of life she had given her heart and its first love to him she considered worthy of the boon. In a little while she saw him begin to go down the dark path that leads to a drunkard's grave. She remonstrated—she plead with him—she prayed for him—she fervently entreated the Great God to save him by a miraculous exhibition of His power. In vain, alas! in vain.

And then there was her only son—her only child—like o'er whose cradle she had bent a thousand times, tracing each well known feature of the father in the child's face, and praying that with the features all resemblance between the two might have an end; that he might be sober, and be a single step upon the dark path she travelled. Alas! a father's example is sometimes stronger than a mother's counsel. The son accepts the drunkard's cup, and, amid the terrors of a terrible storm increased by strong drink, he groaned, gnashed his teeth, and died. The father, too, died drunk. He perished in a snow storm one winter's night. A drunken father and a drunken son lie side by side in the graveyard, hard by the stony roofed church.

Is it a wonder that the poor wife and mother is dying of grief? Enough sorrow has been crowded in and pressed down upon her heart to crush her, though she were as Atlas of granite. Like the beautiful flower and the tender grass before the glittering scythe of the mower, she has fallen and her life is blighted and blasted!

And all through his beautiful world of ours there are thousands of suffering wives and mothers whose hearts are slowly breaking, whose tears are ever flowing, whose sighs are ever upheaving—all caused by the infernal doings of rum, against which it is almost treason to speak. But we shall continue to denounce it while the nerve moves and the nerves obey the mandates of the brain—while there is breath life for it to blight and blast.—The Pledge.

SHAD.—The common Shad may be regarded as a source of commercial wealth, a national industry, and, a miracle of Nature in its multiplications and continuance. Notwithstanding thousands of myriads are destroyed by the agency of man, and tens of thousands of myriads in the sea state, we find an undiminished abundance year after year, which can only be accounted for by their extraordinary creative ability. They spawn about forty-five thousand. They have a peculiarly sloping head and tapering body, projecting under jaw, sharp, small teeth, forked tail, dusky blue color with a line of dark round spots on each side, sometimes four and often ten in number, and are frequently seen without any. They ascend our rivers for the purpose of spawning, which they accomplish in the same manner that hens do, except that the male fails to cover the ova; this necessary operation is performed by the ebbing and flowing tide. The organization of this fish enables it to breathe either in salt or fresh water, and taking advantage of this fact, some have been enabled to breed them in ponds. From numerous experiments we are led to believe that shad live but a single year, and that when they pass down our rivers, after spawning, they are so weak and emaciated they fall an easy prey to voracious fish. They grow in a single season to weigh from five to eight pounds; they appear, as well as the herring, to have been created to form the food of the myriad inhabitants of the ocean. They take, like herring, (of which they have been erroneously called by fishermen the mother,) the circuit of the sea, and as the season advances run up all the rivers on our coast, followed a little later by the herring. Herring has been kept in ponds with shad, several hundred at a time, and never seen at rest. The shad lives upon suction, and feeds upon animalcules in the water while swimming. Food has never been discovered in the body of a shad when opened, and they never bite a baited hook.—Am. paper.

LOW PRICE OF GRAIN.—One of our oldest and shrewdest contributors, who has the watchful experience of a long life, and the native sagacity of Scottish birth, from which to derive his conclusions, wrote in the Country Gentleman of last week:—"Grain keeps very low, which is rather discouraging to farmers; but when grain is too low I always endeavor to raise some more than usual, as I never know anything very low without high prices soon after." And the main object of this article is to commend most urgently the example thus set by John Johnston, in "endeavoring to raise some more than usual," to farmers throughout the country. It is now rather late to take any important steps in that direction, but and paying the most attention, practicable, to crops already in the ground. But when we consider that most of the undoubtedly very large stocks of grain now in the country will probably be drawn abroad, and that the Southern markets are one long to be open,—together with that other fact that we have now already had several years of such plenty that "a change of luck" could scarcely be matter of surprise—we cannot but conclude that at no previous time in our history were the labors of the Farmer of so great importance to the prosperity of the country, or more likely to secure returns proportionately satisfactory to himself.—Country Gentleman, June 5th.

HOW THE FEMALES ARE LIKED IN NEW ORLEANS.—A gentleman just returned from that city, whose he has resided over three the war broke out says we can have no conception of the miseries our brave fellows are compelled to suffer at the hands of fiends in petticoats. All sense of shame and decency appears to have departed out of them. They rival the most degraded street walkers, not only in vileness but in obscenity. Women who have been regarded as the pattern of refinement and good breeding, indulge in language [illegible] our editors do not think which we dare not print. Nothing but the [illegible] upon the privileges of the sex they not only, insult them with the tongue, with more shameful weapons. Buckets of slops are emptied upon them as they pass; decayed eggs and rotten eggs distributed at them, and every house is defended from any one that is obliged to the hated Yankees.

The New Haven authorities have commenced serving milk water to the people through public mains.

Destructive Conflagration in Cincinnatti.

From the Inquirer, June 19.

Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock a heavy storm passed over the city, accompanied by one vivid flash of lightning and an instantaneous crash of thunder, the noise of which caused hundreds to start from their propriety. Although the impression prevailed that the thunderbolt had struck somewhere near by, no one dreamed that the fiery messenger had dealt a blow. In about three minutes the alarm of fire from about a score of towns, together with the proclamation from the tower, satisfied all that the lightning was the incendiary, and thousands of citizens rushed to the corner of Vine and Water streets, from whence dense clouds of smoke and immense lurid flames gave assurance of another fearful conflagration.

The lightning had entered the alcohol manufactory of Fletcher, Hobart & Co., fronting Water street, and perforating a hole through one of the copper stills on the first floor, thus fully charged with alcohol, set fire to the spirits, bursting the still, and scattering the blue blaze from the ignited liquor all over the room. The five men who were running the stills barely escaped from the room, so instantly was the spread of the flames, and rushing through to the store-room on the corner of Front and Vine streets, raised the alarm. In less than two minutes the the four stories of the manufactory were one mass of flames, stretching across water street and licking with his fiery tongue the mammoth lard-oil and candle establishment of Thomas Emery & Sons. The heat became intense, and the destruction of the lard-oil factory, George M. Herd & Co.'s commission house, and numerous other buildings contiguous, seemed inevitable.

The walls of the factory soon began to tumble in, and the floors fell in with their loads of whisky, alcohol, and other liquors, with a loud crash. This event saved Emery & Co., and the buildings to the east of the factory, but on the west the side wall crushed in a small two-story house, known as the Belfast House, and set fire to the Dan O'Connel House, a two-story frame on the corner. At the time this wall fell several persons were in the O'Connell House, and narrowly escaped instant destruction. The fire extended through the store-room, a building also four stories high, on each floor of which were tiers of alcohol, whisky, camphene, turpentine, brandy, gin, &c. The stock was very heavy. None of the liquors could be got out so stifling was the dense smoke, and rapid the advancing fire. The books, papers, money, &c., in the office, and a favorite Tom cat, were all that could be rescued.

In the cellar of Fletcher, Hobart & Co. was a large quantity of linseed oil, lard oil and a number of empty barrels. The fire soon communicated to this combustible material, and an immense black smoke foreshadowed the work of destruction that was to be the final of the conflagration. The walls all fell in and the wreck was complete. The following are the losses:—Fletcher, Hobart & Co., loss of building, $12,000—fully insured. Same, loss of machinery, $18,000—insured for $15,000. Same, loss on stock at least $80,000—insured for $38,000. The Company have a number of policies, and nearly every office in the city is interested. George M. Herd & Co. had in their house 50 tons of hemp; 100 barrels of whisky, with all the bungs out at the time, and in the fifth story, some 300 hogsheads of bacon, clear sides; 800 barrels of flour, and 300 barrels of mess pork. their damage by water is considerable, and is estimated at $15,000—fully insured. The building is owned by Fletcher, Hobart & Co., and is damaged about $1,000, and is insured. The three frame buildings on the corner of Vine and Water streets, which were either burned or broken down by the falling walls, were owned by Mrs. Simpson, of Covington, Ky. Loss about $1,500. Nearly all the houses contiguous were charred somewhat, but the damage was inconsiderable.

The School Question Again.

From the recent lengthened discussions in the Diocesan Synod in Toronto on Separate Schools for the Anglican Church, as well as from the amendments to be moved by Hon. J. H. Cameron to Mr. Scott's Bill, it is very plain to see that open war is sent to being declared against our Common School system of Upper Canada. A system that has taken a long time to establish, that has been productive of much permanent good, and which has become a part and parcel of our cherished institutions. The fruits of sectarian envy were painfully visible during the protracted discussion in the Synod, indicating clearly the determination of the Episcopal party to seek its just rights from the Legislature, as well as pointing to the fatal error, unhappily introduced into our School system—the Separate Schools.—In fact one of the speakers maintained, if they allowed the Catholics to go to the Legislature to obtain their rights while they looked on, it amounted to a tacit acknowledgment that the Catholics were superior to the members of the Church of England.

Several members of the Synod introduced amendments to the motion affirming the intention of the Episcopal body to seek separate schools for itself in Cities and Towns and many speakers while yielding the point of right, dissented from the measure believing it was likely to prove fatal to the Common School system. The amendments were voted down and the original motion of Dr. Bovell's was carried by a large majority.

We regret very much the proceedings thus taken by this large and influential body on this important measure, as it will be, doubtless, but the beginning of a crusade that will end in the utter overthrow of our Common Schools. It is plain to see that the strongest argument made use of is, that the Separate School system existing at all, we have as good a right to its benefits as others, and these we are determined to have. The same argument will, doubtless, be made by the other large denominations, and in place of a national system, we are now in a fair way of having a denominational one. No intelligent person in the county, free from prejudice, but will feel grieved at this action of the Anglican Synod—not that it is seeking more than it has a right to—nor that it is denied that one body of Christians has not as good a right as others to any and every public benefit—but because that in Upper Canada where the population is of so motley a character it is extremely difficult to enact and carry out any public measure, as to education that will please and satisfy all. A deep seated principle seems to pervade a large portion of the people that education and religion must go on together, that while the youth are being taught the rudiments of a secular education their education is defective which does not embrace religion as well.

The continual din of this cry long since induced the chief Superintendent of our national system of education to yield to the cry thus made, and he consented to engraft the separate system with the national. Its being introduced and acknowledged leads to the present action, and we cannot without doing violence to our own convictions of right justice and religious equality deny the right of the Episcopalians or indeed any other body seeking and demanding equal privileges with their Catholic neighbors. At the same time we are sorry to find that the former are not disposed to yield an undoubted right for a public good.

It, the world where there is so much awry—so many conflicting interests met at every turn, it requires a continual exercise of the principle of compromise. It is next to impossible to get along without it. The over exacting individual may feel a proud consciousness of the correctness of his position, of the honesty of his purpose, and of his determination not to yield but to obtain what he seeks, but he will find the tenacity of others to their cherished prejudices equally strong and determined with his own, and as a consequence nothing will be effected—no progress made. Like a besieged garrison with its motto on its flag "no surrender" and the besiegers determined on reducing it; they remain looking at each other, and laughing at the attempts made by the other to succeed. One or the other finally yields but it is from the force of circumstances—not the desire to meet each other on fair and honorable terms—just so will it be when no compromise will be used to meet others half way.

If the present aggressions on the school system proceed—and we think they will, we may make up our mind to part with it—the assertion of the two largest bodies in the Province, and the other two likely to follow will leave but a wreck behind. The facility with which the Chief Superintendent of Education taken up every and all proposals to make incursions into the Provincial system is remarkable. A short time ago he came out in a coy journal denouncing the bill introduced by Mr. Scott, and went so far as to denounce those who would support it in the House as enemies to the Common School system, but in a short time he comes around and after shaving off some of the corners approves of it while a large body in the House objects to it. Here too we find him "kindly" dressing up a bill for the Church of England. And all this in the face of his oft repeated assertions that the Separate Schools are not required—are an evil, and would wish that no pressure would be brought to bear for their existence.—This, however, is like the man, he does good but spoils it by the introduction of evil—builds up and pulls down—advocates Responsible Government and anon descries it. Establishes a national system of secular education and destroys it by advocating and supporting a system of religious public education—all things to all men that he may gain them more—blows hot and cold with the same breath.—With such a shifting head of our educational system no wonder that we have trouble and difficulty. With a self laudation of his achievements in the way of education which is offensive, he evinces a desire by the introduction of so many measures to please obsequous applicants to mar his own work—deserting the cosmopolitanism of his early efforts in the education of our youth, for the unwise and questionable object of yielding the control of educat on to the denominations.

BEHIND THE AGE.

At the Diocesan Synod lately held in Toronto, we find among other subjects engaging the attention of that body was that of Temperance. Dr. Bovell moved, seconded by Rev. H. J. Grassett, B. D.,—"That this Synod, through the Lord Bishop of Toronto, shall memoralize the Legislature to establish an Asylum for the reception of those who are victims of intemperance, and also to express the conviction that the evils flowing from intemperance are so vast, both with reference to the welfare of the present and the future inhabitants of the Province, that it would be an act of great wisdom to appoint a commission to enquire as to the best and most effectual mode of discouraging the habitual and inordinate consumption of alcoholic drinks.—Carried."

After reading such a resolution, one would suppose that the worthy body adopting it must have lived somewhere outside of the precints of the influence of temperance principles. Can it be possible that men who ought to take the liveliest interest in everything pertaining to the present and eternal well-being of the multitudes immediately under their charge—whose opportunities and facilities of obtaining authentic knowledge of what is transpiring all around them in their own day, are so many, can be so ignorant of the remedies attempted and prescribed during the last thirty years to stay the evils flowing from intemperance, which the resolution would lead us to suppose? A "commission," but not one appointed by the Legislature, has long since both inquired into and pointed out the remedies. They consist in simply refraining from using alcoholic drinks and using every moral principle to dissuade others from using them. This is the old prescribed method, and the very best, and had the worthies adopted this simple but efficacious method long since, they would not now have leit such a resolution on record. The Legislature in Canada has been beset with memorials to pass a Maine Law, and to adopt some measure to suppress intemperance. It has passed some but these do not please the people, nor will any that they can pass please them. The work of suppressing intemperance is legitimately in the hands of the people themselves, and should be the work chiefly of the ministers of religion to push it forward. When they unitedly do so, we may expect to see it prosper, but when they look to the legislature to do their proper work, the evils will multiply in place of growing less.

The proposed Asylums, while appearing very benevolent, is rather utopian. Established it would be expensive and of questionable utility. To prevent men becoming insane is more hopeful and much easier of accomplishment than to cure them when they become so. Cut off the sources and the streams cease. If the members of the Synod are seriously anxious to prevent the evils resulting from intemperance—and all admit these are fearful—let them apply themselves individually to the holy work of temperance, as we are glad to know some of them do, and they will thereby do more good and effect more than can be looked for from Legislative Commissioners, or legal interference. Let them be up and doing at once, and the blessing of many that are ready to perish will be theirs.

FRANK LESLIE'S MONTHLY AND GAZETTE OF FASHIONS combined, for July received; they being the first number of the eleventh volume, and containing upwards of fifty engravings, twenty-two of which are fashion plates of the latest styles.

This is a good time to commence subscriptions; for in six numbers from July to December are composed all the Fall and Winter fashions.—Frank Leslie has no rival in any similar publications; no family should be without them. The proprietor has never failed to make them the first publications of their kind, and we see by the present number that his exertions have proved successful, as they are the best numbers we have seen. Subscriptions for the Monthly and Gazette of Fashions, combined, only $3 per annum, addressed to Frank Leslie, 19 City Hall Square, New York, will receive prompt attention.

By an Extra of the Canada Gazette issued of the 21st day of June, it will be seen that His Excellency, the Governor General has made following appointments, viz:—

"John Wilson, of London, Esquire, Q. C., Victor Beaujeau, of the city of Montreal, Esquire, and Joseph Sheard, of the city of Toronto, Esquire, to be Commissioners to enquire into and report upon the state of the Public Buildings at Ottawa, and concerning the expenditure and other matters connected with the same, and David Stark, of Sorel, Esquire, Civil Engineer, Secretary to said Commission."

☞ Mr. Edward B. Earles who was in Peterboro' last summer during the elections has opened a hotel in Victoria, V. I., and in a letter, dated 23rd of May, to the Leader befriends a list of Canadians who have registered their names on his book. From Peterboro' we observe the names of James Walsh, Robert Hestos, R. B. Palmer Adam Clotworthy, James Montgomery, Mr Fortye, John W. Edwards, Chas. Hughes, Richard Smith; and from Keene John Humphries. He mentions a great scarcity of provisions at the mines and consequent high prices—quotes flour in Victoria at $13 50 per. bbl., bacon 18 cts per. lb., beans 10 cents.

☞ The Leader of Tuesday says it rained all day yesterday, (Monday.) We had not a drop of rain here, towards evening it looked rainy like, and it rained some through the night. During Tuesday it rained, or rather frizzled, all day. The rain descended very gently and refreshed the crops. Yesterday was warm and fine, and we hope to hear of improvement in the Country.

☞ We regret to learn from the Ottawa Citizen that the frost of Sunday night, the 16th. inst, did an "incalculable amount of mischief to the corn, potatoes, and fruit crops." We have heard no such complaints in this vicinity. The crops have suffered here chiefly by the drought.

DARING ROBBERY.—A most daring robbery was committed on Wednesday night, the 18th instant, in this town; the foundry of Messrs. Whyte, Hamilton & Co. was broken into, the cash box extracted from the desk in the office, containing about $15 in cash and over $4,000 in notes, besides other papers. A reward of $30 is offered for the recovery of the notes.

☞ The attention of our readers is directed to the Montreal Assurance Company's advertisement, which will be found in another column. Mr. Mellville Millar, of the firm of Millar Bertram, is agent for this locality.

The examination of the Union School takes place to-day and to-morrow, preparatory to the holidays. We bespeak a good attendance of the friends of youth—and as many of the parents of the children as can attend.

☞ We give elsewhere, from the Star, a report of a meeting held in Cobourg lately in reference to the Railway from that town to this—also the bill relating thereto, to which we call attention.

☞ We have much pleasure in directing the attention of our readers to Mr. John O'Donnel's professional card, which will be found in another column. His dental rooms will be found in the Telegraph Buildings, Burnham's block.

☞ Several important matters are crowded out, owing to the space occupied by the returns of convictions.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Township of Smith, June 20, 1862.

MR. EDITOR,—On Wednesday the 18th instant, the Anniversary Tea Meeting of the River Road Union Sunday School was held. The weather being somewhat unfavourable there were not nearly so many present as there would have been had the day been fine, yet the attendance was large, exceeding by far our most sanguine expectations. According to announcement tea should have been served to the children at 2, and to the parents and visitors at 3 p. m., but, much to the disappointment of all, a little after one o'clock a heavy shower of rain came on and continued without interruption till nearly three. This unavoidably caused some delay and blighted for a time the hopes of many, but the people of this neighborhood take too much interest in the welfare of their children, and in the Sabbath School which they attend, to be kept away by a few drops of rain. When duty calls they are ready. They came—came in crowds too—till a large assembly was formed. A most excellent tea, prepared by the ladies of the neighbourhood, was then served to the children in a tent prepared for the occasion. Owing, however, to the continued dampness of the day the grown people were obliged to repair to the adjacent church, in order that they might more comfortably partake of theirs. This they did with all the apparent enjoyment imaginable.

All having partaken of a hearty repast the children recited some pieces and dialogues suitable for the occasion. The committee then presented Mr. Wm. C. Nicholls, who has been Superintendent of the said Sabbath School during the past three years, and who is beloved by every scholar attending it, with Scott's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, as a token of their regard for him. And well they might, for the good he has been instrumental in doing in this neighbourhood is incalculable. With the presentation one of the boys read to him an address to which he read a reply, followed by a report of the school for the last year. It was a very satisfactory one and spoke well for the pupils attending it.—Prizes were then distributed to those who had recited the greatest number of verses and attended school most regularly during the past year. Mr. Samuel McKibbin who has also taken a great interest in the Sabbath School, taught the young people some delightful pieces which they sang with great taste.

In consequence of the inclemency of the weather none of the gentlemen who were expected to address the meeting were present except Mr. H. Edmison, student of Queen's College, Kingston, who delivered a most interesting and instructive address. Mr. Nicholls then closed the meeting with prayer, and all dispersed to their respective homes.

ONE PRESENT.

P. S.—The following are the Scholars' address and Mr. Nicholls' reply:

Esteemed Friend and Teacher:

The occasion which has brought us together at this time is one of great pleasure to us all. We have reason to feel thankful to Almighty God for the prolongation of our lives for another year, for the prosperity which has hitherto attended our Sabbath School, and for this opportunity of celebrating its third anniversary.

While we consider that we are under great obligations to all the Teachers of this Sabbath School for the trouble they take in meeting us from Sabbath to Sabbath, to instruct us in the truths of the Gospel "to sow that sure and golden seed, which once fixed in the mind brings forth beautiful and everlasting flowers." We consider that to you we are under obligations which we shall never be able to repay for your able superintendence of this school, your unceasing care and attention, and the deep interest you have ever manifested for our spiritual welfare. Our success, then, being chiefly attributable to your able instructions, and your untiring zeal and perseverance, we the pupils of this Sabbath School feel it incumbent upon us to make you some acknowledgement, however small, for your trouble, and therefore beg you to accept the accompanying token as a slight expression of the affection, esteem and regard which we entertain for you, and our ardent and united wish is that the great Giver of every good and perfect gift may amply reward you on the final day of retribution for the good service you have been doing us.

Signed by the Committee.

REPLY.

My Dear Young Friends:

I return you my most sincere thanks for the handsome present you have made me this day, not so much for its intrinsic value as from the source from which it emanates, viz: your own free will offering. It is now more than three years ago that I became connected with you as Sunday School Teacher. It is from the Bible we would derive all the instructions we endeavour to impart to you, this is the blessed book which is able to make teacher and taught wise unto salvation. When we teach you what you ought to believe it is because God declares it in the Bible, if we tell you what you should do or avoid it is because God commands or forbids it there, or if we show you the use and improvement you ought to make of particular dispensations of Providence it is because the precepts and examples given in Scripture point them out. Learn, therefore, to love and prize your Bibles, and endeavour to become well acquainted with them, to confirm all the good instructions you receive, and impress on your minds the necessity of obeying the voice of your Teachers, because so far as they teach you according to the holy Scriptures it is not the word of man but of God. Let it never be forgotten that "other foundations can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ;" for God himself has said, "Behold, I lay in Zion, for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation. He that believeth shall not make haste, or be ashamed." May you all be enabled by knowledge, faith and love to build upon this precious foundation, that when in sorrow, sickness, death and judgment, the rains descend, the winds blow, the floods come, and beat upon your house it may stand, being founded upon a rock, is the ardent prayer of your sincere friend and Sunday School Teacher.

Butter Circular.

Montreal, May, 1862.

At the commencement of another Butter Season, Farmers and Merchants would do well to have everything in order, for doing this important branch of the Produce trade of Canada to advantage; to which end we offer the following suggestions,—the result of long experience in selling Butter,—and, which, in the main, are only a repetition of Circulars issued for many years:—

THE FARMER'S PART IN MAKING GOOD BUTTER.

The Farmer should have good healthy cows, giving rich and well-flavored milk. The milk of some cows has always an unpleasant taste, which affects the Butter. Such cows should be fattened and sold. The pastures should be rich, but not rank, and kept clear of weeds; some of which, give an unpleasant flavour to the milk. A milk-house should be provided, capable of being kept cool, airy, clean and rather dark; to which a thermometer is a necessary appendage.

THE DAIRY-WOMAN PART IN THE BUSINESS.

The cows should be thoroughly milked, the last being the richest. The milk should be carefully strained into broad shallow vessels, to stand until the cream comes completely to the surface; but on no account till it becomes stale or bitter; hence, in warm weather, churnings should be frequent. The milk should be churned at a temperature of 65 degrees: and this process should occupy nearly an hour, to produce a good article. The Butter should be worked till all the Butter-milk is pressed out. In this process, Butter is often deprived of its sparkling appearance and fine aroma, and rendered cheesy, waxy, flat, and insipid. To wash Butter in soft water is very injurious to it; as also, in water much impregnated with lime or any mineral. The best water is that from a pure spring or well; but even in this, there should not be much washing. The salting is a very delicate process, which should be attended to with great care. Only the finest and purest salt should be used, and that worked in very evenly, and only in sufficient quantity to preserve the Butter. There should be no coloring matter used, or other ingredient, except pure salt. The first requesite in making Butter is, to have the cows clean—the hands clean—the pails and pans, and all other utensils, scrupulously clean.

THE PACKER'S PART.

Kegs or tubs should be neatly finished and scrupulously clean, inside and out. They should be seasoned, and then well soaked in brine. The Butter should be pressed down firmly and evenly, all in a keg being nearly as possible of one quality and color. The keg should be so full as to admit little or no brine, and no capping of salt, unless a cloth, which should be of clean white cotton, be first laid over the Butter; in which case a thin layer of salt at both ends would be beneficial to protect the Butter from the wood. Without the cloth, the salt works in and deteriorates the price of the Butter. Tubs, pails or tinnets should, if possible, be even more neatly put up than kegs; and none but choice Dairy Butter should be thus packed. The dry tare should, in all cases, be accurately inscribed on the packages by the cooper; any fraud in this matter being, we believe, punishable by law. It is not an uncommon thing to find a keg marked 13 or 14 lbs., which weighs here, not 15 or 16 lbs., as it ought, but 19 or 20 lbs., or even more. In such cases as this there must either be fraud or great carelessness. The kegs should be tightly coopered, and the end hoops nailed to prevent the brine, which is constantly forming, from running out and discoloring the keg.

SALT FOR ANIMALS.—Animals that are permitted to roam in the salt marshes are generally the most healthy, as they consume a large amount of saline material. The astringent property of salt is too well known and appreciated by most husbandmen, and the farmer might as well think of entirely dispensing with food as to fail in seasoning food with salt; in the stomach it operates favorably, and has a healthy action on the liver, it also prevents the food from running into fermentation, and is death on intestinal parasites.

Forty-Fourth Annual General Meeting,

HELD 2ND JUNE, 1862.

THE Directors have pleasure in presenting to the Shareholders their Forty-fourth Annual Report, accompanied by the usual statement of the assets and liabilities of the Bank at the close of its financial year:—

The Report submitted to the last General Meeting exhibited a balance at the credit of the Profit and Loss Account of $39,359 61

The Net profits of the year, after deducting the expenses of management, and making provisions for bad and doubtful debts, amount to $538,009 75

Less Tax paid to Government ..... $ 4,013 58 $533,996 17

$5,73,355 78

Out of which two half-yearly dividends have been paid to the Shareholders at the rate of four per cent., amounting to $480,00 00

Leaving a balance o' ..... $ 93,355 78

An ample appropriation has been made to cover the loss arising from bad debts, and to provide against deficiencies from doubtful assets. The Profit and Loss account has likewise been charged with $10,000 in reduction of the amount at the debit of Bank premises.

As stated above there remained a balance of profit, amounting to $93,355 78, from which the Directors have made an addition of $60,000 to the Rest, thus increasing that fund to $800,000, and leaving a balance of $33,355 78 to be carried forward at the credit of the Profit and Loss account.

The Directors feel that they may congratulate the Shareholders upon the favourable result of the year's business, which is the more gratifying from the circumstance, that the period embraced by this Report has not been propitious to Canadian interests, and has been marked by public events, which have not only been the cause of much anxiety but have exerted an injurious influence upon the general prosperity of the country.

It will be observed from the annual statement that the Bank is a large holder of the debentures of the Provincial Government, the Directors having deemed it advisable to invest in this way a part of the unemployed funds at their disposal.

The ample reserves of the Bank render their active employment an object of much importance, more especially while the value of money continues so low in England.

The Directors have lost no opportunity of extending the business of the Bank in Canada, and they have been prepared to open new agencies, wherever there appeared a prospect of doing so with advantage.

Much attention has been recently directed to the importance of securing to Canada a portion of the great produce trade of the Western States. With a view of affording increased facilities for that purpose, the Directors have been induced to open an office in Chicago, which they anticipate will be of advantage to the commercial community, and at the same time be attended with benefit to the Bank.

(Signed,) T. B ANDERSON,
President.

A NEW STORY

IN THE

SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:

A FIRST-CLASS

INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 9th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled

DELLBURN HOUSE,

A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1745.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers.

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the Britis people and their families from all parts of the old country resident on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its Home and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal, and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspaper. Another most important feature of the journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase specials in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1862

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A. H. Dr. GRAHAM to circulate five thousand copies of the 'Toronto Evening Journal' to parties named by us containing our advertisement.

ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the Toronto Evening Journal will receive one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly "Leader," a large first class paper established in 1854, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

The terms for advertising are less than heretofore established in the public before, viz:—Three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without cuts) will be inserted at one dollar per line per annum.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States beforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1180 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	350,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Polices	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	23,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	372,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial Period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums find only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinised in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to £2 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement shewing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

MATHEWS' VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE.

THIS CELEBRATED DYE WAS FIRST prepared in 1848; since that time it has been used by thousands, and in no instance has it failed to give perfect satisfaction.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the cheapest in the world. Its price is only 50 cents, and each bottle contains double the quantity of dye contained in those usually sold for one dollar.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the safest composition of its class. It is warranted not to injure the hair, or the scalp, in the slightest degree.

THE VENETIAN DYE

works with rapidity and certainty. It causes no annoyance or trouble to those who use it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

produces any shade that may be desired—one that will not fade, crock, nor wash out; one that is as permanent as the hair itself.

THE VENETIAN DYE

does not, in any manner, interfere with the natural softness of the hair; it neither scorches nor dries it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the best, cheapest safest, most convenient, most successful, and most permanent Dye ever used.

THE VENETIAN DYE

having gained an extended reputation, the public are cautioned against purchasing any prepared in the same style, under the same or different name, as they are mere imitations, and liable to do injury.

To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half hotel in Canada

Poetry.

A Dramatic Fact:
IN ONE ACT.
BY JOHN G. SAXE.

SCENE. Editor's Sanctum. Editor writing at Desk.—Enter well-dressed Stranger.

Str. I bring you, Sir, a contribution—one
Of several I have lately done.

[Hands manuscript to Editor who reads and returns it.]

Ed. I do not want it—sorry to refuse—

Str. Perhaps the subject doesn't meet your views;
No matter; I have others; look at this—
I think you'll find the moral not amiss.

[Hands another M. S. to Editor, who reads and returns it.]

Ed. I'm much obliged; it isn't quite the thing
I wish to print.

Str. 'Tis well I chanced to bring
Some half-a-dozen more. Now this I'm sure
Is something which—which—really must secure
Your approbation.

[Hands voluminous MS. to Editor, who reads a portion and returns the document.

Ed. Thank you; that will do
I haven't time to read the story through.
Ex pede Herculem—I plainly see
By what I've read, it will not do for me.

Str. Pray look at this—a patriotic song—

[Offers another MS. which Editor declines to read.]

Ed. No! Life is short and contributions long!
I crave the pest: I really haven't time
To read a tithe of all the prose and rhyme
That's daily offered—so you must excuse—

Str. Pd like to know the reason you'd refuse
The pieces you have read—

Ed. The reason why,
Is simply this—I do not wish to buy
What does not please me; it were idle waste
Of words to argue on a point of taste.
If this is not all well-sent, I will add
I do not think the pieces very bad;
Make them a trifle better,—if you could,—
And one might call them positively good.

Str. They're that already—if I may confide
In friends whose candor has been duly tried.
Such men as H (whose poems, I may hint,
The world applauds, and you are proud to print)
Have praised—

Ed. 'Tis true, I've purchased, now and then,
A charming poem from his magnetic pen;
But never his opinions—I decline
That sort of traffic—that's in my line;
And if the article were in demand,
I shouldn't take it, Sir, at second hand!

Str. Perhaps, dear Sir, you're not aware that I Am author of the famous "Gushing Sigh"—
A little poem which you may have seen,
Some years ago, in "Madden's Magazine."
Indeed, I fancy I possess a name,
Excuse the boast—not quite unknown to fame.

Ed. 'Tis very likely; I can only say
I do not think I could make it pay.
For I have queried—and state the fact to you—
(You may not like it, if you'll bad it true)
The highest name on a list ever had
Can't mean a work that in itself is bad;
While one that's good—experiment has shown
A thousand times—can safely stand alone.

Str. I really think your columns Sir, require—
That is—I mean—the paper much admire
Varieties—scarce to proper sort—
And I am certain many desire forte—

Ed. Is editing my paper? May be so;
If I should want you—I will let you know!

[Exit Stranger in high dudgeon. Editor smiles philosophically, and soliloquizes—

There goes a precious bundle of conceit!
An arrant ass as I have chanced to meet
This many a day. A genuine public bore!
Reflect a man—if ere you rashly scold
Because an editor, with all his cares,
Admits some things he has not sought, will spare
Him—the really good piece, did never doubt
For one left in, he keeps a hundred out!

Miscellaneous.

Death of Captain Tod, Lossiemouth.

In our obituary to-day will be found the name of Captain Tod of Lossiemouth—a name which has been familiar as a household word in Moray-shire for nearly thirty years; and many will regret the death of this hearty, outspoken, and genial hearted man.

Captain Tod was a native of Banffshire, having been born at the Braes of Enzie, on the 22nd December 1789; and he consequently had entered his 73rd year. The early part of his school days were spent at the parish school of Enzie, and he finished his education at the Elgin Academy, which he attended in the years 1804 and 1805. In 1807 he entered the Royal Navy, as mid-shipman, on board his Majesty's frigate Active, commanded by the late Sir James Dunbar of Boath; and continued in the service of his country for twenty-six years, during which time he went through some pretty sharp work. In the same year he joined the fleet, under Sir James Gambier and Lord Cuthcart, and assisted in the bombardment of Copenhagen, when the city and Danish fleet surrendered, after a bombardment of three days, on the 7th September, 1807. In 1813, while in command of a boat cutting out a French convoy, near the harbour of Toulon, under the command of Sir James Gordon Sinclair, Captain Tod was wounded by a musket ball on the leg. For his service on this occasion he received a medal. In December of the same year (1813), he was again dangerously wounded, while serving on shore with a division of seamen, under the command of Sir Josias Rowley, in an unsuccessful attack by the British and Italian forces, on the city of Leghorn. On the 14th December, 1814, he took part in a severe engagement with an American flotilla of gunboats on the lakes of Louisa (Lockbourn) when the British had 17 killed and 77 wounded. For his conduct in this action he was promoted to be Lieutenant and received a second bar on his medal. Captain Tod commanded a boat at the taking of Washington in 1814, when that city was taken by the British forces under General Ross. The reader of history will recollect that the superb national buildings of Washington were on this occasion burned down, and not even the national library was spared. He also commanded a boat at the attack on Baltimore, in September 1814, on which occasion the British were unsuccessful, and repulsed with great loss—the gallant British General, Ross, who led the enterprise being killed on that occasion. In December of the same year, the British made a combined attack on New Orleans, and on this occasion Captain Tod was again entrusted with the command of a boat. The British were again repulsed by the Americans under General Jackson, with a loss of 2,000 men in killed, wounded, and prisoners; and in January 1815, the British force was obliged to embark under a flag of truce. The fleet on this occasion was commanded by Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane, and the army by General Pakenham, who were both killed.

On the 14th February, 1815, Captain Tod was taken prisoner by the Americans, and marched to Fort Mobile; and we have frequently heard the gallant Captain speak in glowing terms of the excellent treatment which he received at the hands of the Americans. The restraint did not last long, however. Shortly after, peace was proclaimed, the prisoners were liberated; and Captain Tod, with many of his gallant companions in arms, sailed for England in His Majesty's ship Tonnant—the flag ship of Sir Alexander Cochrane.

In the same year (1815), Captain Tod retired on half pay, and remained on shore for several years. In January, 1824, he was placed in command of a West India ship, bound for Jamaica with troops and government stores, and made two voyages in that vessel. On the 25th November, 1825, he got the command of a new vessel, and made fourteen voyages to Berbice in seven years. In 1833 he took his farewell of sea life, and returned to Morayshire.—Soon after his return to his native county, he took up his residence in Lossiemouth; married a daughter of the late Mr. John Lawson, of Oldmills (who pre-deceased him by several years); and settled down in the "city port" for the remainder of his life. Three daughters and two sons, the issue of this marriage, are left to mourn the death of an attached parent.

But tho' out of the public service, Capt. Tod was of far too active a temperament to be idle; and he was ere long appointed to the office of Steamboat Agent for the Aberdeen, Leith, and Clyde Shipping Co. in Lossiemouth—which office he held for many years. Captain Tod was also agent for Lloyd's.

There were few men that took a warmer interest in the prosperity of Lossiemouth than Captain Tod; and if his zeal was not always tempered with caution, it was honest and sincere, and proceeded from an anxious desire to advance the interests of the port and district.

Captain Tod was a truly genial-hearted man. Hearty, honest, outspeaking, and generous. He knew nothing of cunning or duplicity. He was ever ready to do a kind turn to all around him; and to the extent of his means, and perhaps beyond them, cordial in promoting works of benevolence. He was much respected by all who knew him, and loved by those who were his most intimate friends. When he erred, it was in judgment—his heart was always right; and those who knew him best never questioned the purity or sincerity of his motives, even when constrained to differ from him. By all his neighbors he was much esteemed, and there are few in the villages with which he was so long connected, who will not regret the death of this good-hearted and brave man.

Our Railway.

A meeting was convened yesterday evening in the Council Chamber, Victoria Hall to take into consideration the best means of carrying into effect the provisions of the new Act of Parliament for putting the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway into better condition, and thus restoring the trade and property of Cobourg. The Act we have given in full in another column.

After the preliminary motions to ring the Mayor into the chair and electing Mr. Pentland Secretary.

James Cockburn, Esq., M. P. P. rose and in a very able speech explained the various provisions of the new Act, dwelling especially on the fact that the effect of the award of the Arbitrators as provided by the Act would be to limit the amount of liens or encumbrances against the Company to the same amount—the sum declared by the Arbitrators to be present value of the Railway. He concluded by showing that the first object was to obtain a low award, and upon this their future success in a great degree depended; and the first step towards this was to raise a subscription to defray the expenses of the award.

John H. Dumble, Esq. passed a deserved eulogy upon Mr. Cockburn's services in procuring the passage of this Act in the face of considerable opposition, and after glancing at past difficulties in the history of the Railway, showed that it was now in the power of the people of Cobourg, with the promised aid of Peterboro' to obtain a good railway for £1,500 a mile.

Hon. E. Perry also spoke in eulogistic terms of the zeal and energy displayed on behalf of the town by the member for West Northumberland, and explained the bearing of the clause relating to the mortgage held by Mr. Proudfoot. He recommended that a vote, which was a very perfect one, be read to the meeting.

The Secretary then read the Act.

It was then

Moved by Sheriff Fortune, seconded by Mr. Wallace, and

Resolved that a subscription list now be opened for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the Arbitration under the 4th clause of the amended bill of the Cobourg and Peterboro' Railway Co., and that the following gentlemen be a committee to collect subscriptions for that purpose, and confer with the Directors of the Company to name a competent person to act as arbitrator and put the act into effect:—His Worship the Mayor, Messrs. Dainty, Kerr, J. H. Dumble, Strong, and Macdonald.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Cockburn for the zeal and well-directed energy he had shown on behalf of the town was afterwards passed heartily and unanimously.

The meeting then adjourned.—Star.

The Greek Insurrection has been put down, and "order has been re-established" in Nauplia. A bloody contest has been waged for some time back between the Turks and Montenegrins in the Herzegovina. A battle took place a few days ago, in which several hundreds were slain on both sides. The Mexican difficulty has not yet been settled, and blows will probably be exchanged before long, unless the Mexicans agree to "save us." The sentence passed sometime since on M. Mirès, the notorious French speculator, has been reversed, and the defaulter restored to liberty. An Englishman named Bishop has been arrested in the Neapolitan territory, and lodged in prison on a charge of carrying on a treasonable correspondence with the brigands in favour of the ex-King Francis. The Emperor of Russia continues to prosecute his reforming policy, his latest effort in that direction being the formation of a scheme for the Parliamentary representation of the country. In Prussia the all-important topic is the general election which is to come off on the 24th inst.

A Sad Story of Defection and Shame.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

George Q. Phelps, Esq. an elderly gentleman, and an old resident of Union City, Illinois, arrived here from that city last Thursday, in anxious search of a missing and erring daughter. After some inquiries, he called upon the Chief of Police, and requested his aid in the pursuit. The daughter left home about two months ago, in charge of two young men, her cousins in whom Mr. Phelps had complete confidence. They were to escort her to St. Louis, to the home of her brother, an engineer on a steamer in the Government service. As weeks passed away, and no letter or intelligence was received from her, her father became exceedingly solicitous yet entertained not the slightest suspicion that she was not at her brother's residence in this city. One day in the streets of Quincy, he met a young man who informed him that his daughter Maria was in an assignation house in St. Louis. The incredulous father indignantly demanded proof for so humiliating a statement, upon which the young man declared that he had himself seen her at the place he had stated. Mr. Phelps took the first train for this city, and on arriving proceeded immediately to the house of his son. The latter was absent down the river. Surprised and alarmed at the old man's tremulous inquiries, his daughter-in-law could only say that Maria came there about seven or eight weeks ago, paid a transient visit, and left, as she supposed, to return home.

Such, substantially, was the account given by the father at the police office. Upon learning the facts, one of the detectives thought he knew the girl, and could find her. He was dispatched for the purpose. Meanwhile a telegram was sent to Quincy, to the young man who had communicated the information in that city, requesting him to answer at once, and to give the locality of the assignation house to which he referred. Pending the reply, and at about 11 o'clock on Thursday night, the officer returned from the house in Green street, bringing a young and beautiful girl, but who proved not the erring one, especially sought for. She, however, evidently believed that her own friends had sent for her, and from her manner, betrayed that she had only quite recently left her home and friends. She expressed mortification and deep sorrow at the course she had pursued declared that her condition was most miserable, and avowed a willingness to be sent anywhere, rather than go back to the place from which she had just been taken. She was accordingly conducted to the "House of the Good Shepherd."

An answering telegraph message from Quincy, soon stated that the daughter was probably at No. 3 Christy avenue. Thither two officers at once proceeded, and quickly returned with her in custody. She was a blue-eyed and fair-haired girl of about seventeen years, elegantly and tastefully attired, yet in her countenance exhibiting intense mental torture. Prior to her arrival the father was conducted to the Police Chief's private room, of which the door was left ajar—a room adjoining that in which she entered. To the Chief's inquiries she at first responded with reserve and caution, but finding that he knew her history, burst into tears, and confessed herself lost, yet said she deserved to be permanently removed from the house she had just left. Learning that her father knew all, she begged not to be taken home, and to be spared an interview with him.

At last she was led to her aged father in the next room, where a scene too heartrending for description followed. The sobs and agony of the old man and his daughter can be imagined much better than we can depict them. She gratefully accepted his offer to take her back to her home. They went to a hotel for the night, and yesterday afternoon left the city.

It transpired that the perfidious young men took her first to the St. Charles Hotel, and was subsequently she was removed to the place from which she was rescued.

Painful though it is to chronicle or peruse such a story as the above, it yet affords to parents, guardians and youth, a much needed lesson and warning.

Making Hay.

Clover hay cut at the period of florescence, and thoroughly made, has been found by repeated experiments to lose about four-fifths of its weight in "making." When the flower has fallen, and the stalks have lost some of the moisture, the loss in drying is three-quarters of the weight of the crop when cut; probably a fair average where the grass is in the advancement act indicated, and the labor of making in performed with a free exposure to the sun and air, one hundred pounds will be reduced to twenty-two. Clover, in all its varieties, is a valuable product and one of the best grasses for hay, if mixed with latter kinds, we have for cattle. It is rapid, highly nutritive in its properties, and agrees well with all descriptions of animals. Its value, however, for feeding purposes, depends, in an eminent degree, upon the method of curing it. Formerly it was the practice to mow it in the morning, and after repeated turnings and shakings, to put it in cock. The next day it was opened, turned two or three times, pitched into bunches, and finally, after all the foliage and seed has been detached by the rough handling to which it was thought necessary to subject, it conveyed to the mows. The less threshing this method was soon found to be a serious abstraction from the profit of the crop, while the expense of making, to say nothing of mowing, was scarcely repaid by what remained.

Now, clover is cut as soon as the dew is off, allowed to remain in the swath undisturbed by the fork or rake till toward night, when, if the weather is clear or not, it is carefully turned, in order that a new surface be exposed to the night dews and the next afternoon pitched into grass cocks, each weighing about eighty pounds, in which condition it is suffered to remain until sufficiently dry to go into mow. Hay made in this way preserves the deep rich green of the natural plant before being cut, and that sweet aromatic odor so grateful to every person capable of appreciating sweet smells. We have seen the clover heads as bright in mid-winter, in hay made in this manner, as they were the moment they fell before the sweep of the mower's scythe, and for aught we could perceive to the contrary, as fragrant.

All kinds of grass made in this way, is unquestionably much improved in quality; it also loses less by many pounds in a hundred, while the expense is diminished nearly or quite one-fifth.—Cor. Ger. Telegraph.

A Rumseller's Dream.

Well, wife, this is too horrible! I cannot continue this business any longer.

Why, dear, what's the matter now?

Oh, such a dream! Oh, I cannot endure it! Oh, if I ever sell rum again!

My dear, you are frightened.

Yes, indeed I am; another such night I will not pass for worlds.

My dear, perhaps—

Oh, don't talk to me! I am determined to have nothing more to do with rum, any how. Do you think, Tom Wilson came to me with his throat cut from ear to ear, and such a horrid gash, and it was so hard for him to speak, and so much blood, and said he, see here, Joe, the result of your rum-selling. My blood chilled at the sight, and just then the house seemed to turn bottom up, the earth opened, and a little imp took me by the hand, saying, follow me. As I went grim devils held out to me cups of liquid fire, saying, drink this. I dared not refuse. Every draught set me in a rage. Serpents hissed on each side, and from above reached down their heads and whispered rumseller! On and on the imp led me through a narrow pass. All at once he paused and said, are you dry? Yes, I replied. Then he struck a trap door with his foot, and down we went, legions of fiery serpents rushing after us, whispering, rumseller! rumseller! At length we stopped again, and the imp asked me as before, are you dry? Yes, I replied. He then touched a spring, a door flew open. What a sight! there were thousands, aye millions of old, worn-out rum-drinkers, crying most piteously, rum, rum, give me more rum!—When they saw me, they stopped a moment to see who I was—then the imp cried out rumseller! and barling me in, shut the door. For a moment they fixed their ferocious eyes upon me and then uttered a yell which filled me with such terror, I awoke. There wife, dream or no dream, I will never sell another drop.

The Poor Drunkard.

Oh! I have sometimes looked at a bright beautiful boy, and my flesh has crept within me at the thought that there was a bare possibility he might become a drunkard. I once was playing with a beautiful boy in the city of Norwich, Connecticut; I was carrying him to and fro on my back, both of us enjoying ourselves exceedingly; for I loved him, and I think he loved me. During our play I said to him, "Harry, will you go down with me to the side of that stone wall?" "Oh yes!" was his cheerful reply. We went together and saw a man lying listlessly there, quite drunk, his face upturned to the bright blue sky; the sunbeams that warmed and cheered and illumined us, lay upon his porous greasy face; the pure morning wind kissed his parched lips and passed away poisoned; the very swine in the fields looked more noble than he, for they were fulfilling the purposes of their being. As I looked upon the poor degraded man, and then looked upon that child, with his bright brow, his beautiful blue eyes, his rosy cheeks, his pearly teeth, and ruby lips—the perfect picture of life, peace and innocence; as I looked upon these and then upon the child, and felt his little hand convulsively twitching in mine, and saw his little lips grow white, and his eye dim gazing upon the poor drunkard; then did I pray to God to give me an everlasting increasing capacity to hate with a burning hatred any instrumentality that could make such a thing of a being once as fair as that child.

The greatness of a Nation.

The greatness of a nation consists not so much in its population, wealth, or even general intelligence, as in its virtue. Thus, while we are rapidly increasing in everything else, it is fearful to reflect that there is not a proportionate advance in the moral of the people, especially in our large towns and cities. In these there is too much reason to fear that the general prosperity is producing increased intemperance, and a general decline in morals. Without virtue, on which the real prosperity of society depends, our rapid progress in arts, science and population may be maturing, against some future day, the element of national commotion, perhaps national overthrow.—Whence it is, that the average sort of morals has not kept pace with wealth and mechanic improvements? The prevailing use of intoxicating drink is sufficient to account for it. This momentarily results in intemperance, and intemperance produces every species of vice. The pecuniary cost of intemperating liquor to the consumer, is but a small item to comparison to the whole evil. We have no doubt that for every dollar which finds its way into the pocket of the dealer, the public suffers an indirect loss of double that sum, in the productiveness of labor, losses by sea and land, costs of lawsuits, doctor's bills, &c., the amount expended upon asylums, workhouses, and prisons; and the extra poor rates consequent on drinking habits. In fact, we have not a doubt, that the cost on this nation directly or indirectly, of the traffic and use of intoxicating drinks, may be safely estimated at two hundred millions of dollars yearly.

A Prohibitory Law would not cure the evil all at once, but it would interpose a strong barrier to its progress, and in time would render the traffic and use so disreputable and criminal, that it would be confined to the lowest dregs of society; and when they reach that point, then even stronger law than now asked for, would be demanded if necessary, by the people, to remove the evil entirely.—Prohibitionist.

Trouble in a New York Baptist Church.

THE "UP-TOWN" ARISTOCRACY.

The New York Tribune says:—Some time since a gentleman in good standing in the community, who is a member of an uptown Baptist Church, purchased a fashionably located pew for which he paid the munificent sum of $1,000. In the course of a little time he met with reverses, and among other effects at the mercy of his creditors was his pew in the church. This fell to the lot of a practical working mechanic, who decided that he would worship his God in it in addition, and with his family, would, on the Sabbath, occupy the $1,000 pew for that purpose. Accordingly, he and his family attended regularly and respectably the services of the sanctuary, but his status became known to the "ladies and gentlemen" who occupied pews adjacent to his, in the middle aisle, and they presumed to criticise every and the smallest act of the new-comers. The mode of shutting their eyes during prayer, the unseemly attention, and apparent devotion during the services, their uniform vulgar practice of rushing till the close of services, their going to church in stormy weather without using a carriage, and other extremely ill-bred peculiarities, all were criticised. At the mechanic and his family retired from the church, the crown boys of the congregation, together with some of the younger women, would crowd the vestibule and contemptuously shout "tallow," "gaiters," "shabby coats," "calico," "leather gores," and other kindred subjects, with which the strangers were supposed to be familiar. It appears that the humble but frugal mechanic bore this continuously with creditable Christian forbearance, not yielding his rights in any degree, but continuing his attendance upon religious ordinances as usual. The decision of the iron pew-holder was an outrage to the dictates of fashion; they appealed to the mechanic, the mechanic offered to sell out at cost price; the trustees hesitated, and the mechanic retained the pew, attending the church as usual. Being somewhat democratic in his notions of society, and a firm believer in the doctrine of human equality, he introduced to his softly-cushioned pew two coloured brethren. This last act was the feather which broke the camel's back. So grave an outrage demanded redress at the hands of the law as a "disturber of public worship"—an act of annoyance of God's people "under their own vine and fig tree." The mechanic continues his devotions, is passionately fond of music, and elects to look toward the choir while praise is being offered from that locality. Meanwhile the trustees have preferred a charge against him before a Police Justice for "disturbing public worship," on which Mr. Mechanic had to find bail, and the grand jury have found a bill against him. His case will be tried soon in the Court of General Sessions. The trustees allege that the reputation of the church demands that they prosecute the case. They contemplate forcing him to sell the pew at a sacrifice, which he considers would not be an equitable financial transaction.

THE NEW GOLD MINES OF THE UNITED STATES.—The New York Tribune says:—We have Oregon dates to the 16th ultimo, with advices from the Salmon River Gold-washings to the 1st of that month. Reports of enormous yields continue, but they were still confined to a narrow district. It was stated that $2,000 per day had been realized from one claim. Provisions were still very high, but failing, there being large supplies on the way up from the Oregon settlements. The earth in that elevated region was still partly covered with snow so that "prospecting" was limited. Probably the summer will be spent in determining whether this is indeed a new Gold region, or only a little pocket which must soon be exhausted. Meantime, diggers are flocking thither from Oregon, California, Colorado, and even from Missouri. The "Humboldt Mines" (valley of the Humboldt River of Utah and Nevada, formerly called the St. Mary's) are known to be very extensive, but their value is not settled. Great veins of quartz are found abundantly of the mountain ridges that inclose the Humboldt Valley, and these veins contain gold and silver as well as lead, but their richness is still undecided. The country is dependent on California for nearly, everything, lacking even wood, though no bear coal has been found. Everything in the line of food is dear except fresh beef, which sells at twenty cents per pound. Many emigrants bound for California with cattle stopped in that valley last fall and their stock has generally been carried through the winter so that there is a prospect of milk and butter in "the good time coming." Nevada (that is, Carson Valley—but the Humboldt Mines are also in Nevada) is working away at her rich lands, and taking out

The other side of the New York Church Case.

(From the New York Express.)

The other side of the case, of the person who is sought to be deprived of the use of a pew in the Madison street Baptist Church, the right to which he claims, puts quite a different face on the matter from what was stated in the Express on Monday. It appears that the church was recently built, and in settling up the building account a few scrips for pews, at the price of $1,000 each, were accepted by some of the builders, and finally came into the possession of the person alluded to. He called, it seems, on the trustees of the church, and desired them to buy the script, but they declined to do so. Failing in a subsequent interview to induce the purchase, he intimated that his possession of the pew would become a very disagreeable matter to the church. The covert threat was made good for several Sundays succeeding, by a peculiar occupancy of the pew, to which he had a quasi claim, though he had not become the owner of it. He used his son polished 'down' not 'up,' for church, not with his best clothes on, but his worst, filled the pew—a conspicuous one. Another Sunday two colored persons occupied the pew, who behaved themselves properly; but the claimant of the pew, when he came, failed to behave as well as the negroes. He put his feet up to the book-rack, for example in front of him, and turning round, put his feet on the cushin of the pew during the singing—facing and staring at the choir. Not satisfied with such manifestations, he would turn round and blow his breath, in great puffs, across the faces of the occupants of the next pew back, and scatter stray hairs from his head into their laps. These aggravating offences were borne in silence. When asked why he brought the colored people into the church with him, he replied that they were his friends, and it was wondered how he ever acquired such white-livered associates. Afterward, the trustees attempted to prevent his attending the church, and ordered him away, at the same time informing him, that no pew-holder by script could come into possession and use a pew without their consent, as regulated by the church rules, and that such script alone did not entitle him to occupancy. Notwithstanding this he persevered against the wishes of the trustees, when, after several Sunday struggles, the police put an end to the nuisance by arresting him. He is now under indictment by the Grand Jury, and the case will soon be tried. This case presents some new points in law—but none in morals, in respect for the Sabbath, decency, decorum, &c., which are well settled, whatever the law as to "Church script" may be.

Dangerous Position of Macclellan's Army.

We cut the following from the leading correspondent of the New York Tribune:

"Will not New York and Washington now see to it that McClellan is reinforced? I was never an alarmist. But I tell the people of the North that they had better demand in thunder tones of the President instant reinforcement of the army of the Potomac."

The Detroit Free Press remarks on the above as follows:—

The above shows the extreme danger the Union cause is in owing to the criminal course pursued by the "War Committee," in preventing reinforcements being sent forward to McClellan. If our armies are defeated, overpowered by superior numbers, the crime will lie at their door, and rightly will they be held responsible by the people when they leave the foul atmosphere of Washington. There is no time to be lost, if one half of what we hear in private letters is true. With the utmost efforts of the administration, with all the energy of all our Generals, it is a question of extreme doubt whether soldiers can be forwarded rapidly enough to raise McClellan's force up to an equality with the rebels in number. —If we are defeated, woe be unto the men who will have caused the terrible disaster. . . If the President would prevent his administration from going down in a sea of blood, let him rally every man that is possible of the 700,000 now on the rolls of the army, and push them forward to share in the great battle which is to take place before Richmond. There is no time to be lost if the country is to be saved, and it may be even now too late.

THE LATE ROBBERY.

Most of our readers will be aware from an advertisement in last week's paper that a cash box containing a number of notes of hand had been stolen from the office of Messrs. Whyte, Hamilton & Co., of this Town. On Saturday last the box was taken to the Mayor's office by one Patrick Glynn, who stated that he had found it in the bushes a short distance from the premises of the parties to whom it belonged.—The robbery was committed on the night of the 18th or 19th instant, by the perpetrator entering the shop through a window at the back of the building, and sawing off a part of the sash on the office door got in and took away the box, and made his exit by the foundry door which was bolted on the inside. It was generally believed that the deed must have been done by some one well acquainted with the premises. Next morning one of the men who worked in the shop both acted and spoke so strangely that a general impression existed that he knew something of the affair. He told Mr. Hamilton he had suspicion of two fellows whom he thought were the guilty parties, and said that he would lose his time that day and go to the places they were known to frequent in order to ferret them out, offered to lend Mr. Hamilton $100 as he had been so unlucky, and told some of the men in the shop he was pretty sure the notes would be all brought back, &c., &c. When Mr. Whyte returned on Monday, the 23rd—he having been absent when the robbery was committed—he was led, from the strange manner the strange party acted, to have him brought up and examined before the Mayor. The examination elicited nothing to warrant his being put on trial and he was accordingly discharged. A search warrant was also executed which resulted in finding nothing.

The box when taken contained about $15 in cash, and notes to the amount of $4,000, besides several other papers.—Glynn when he brought the box to the Mayor's office stated that he found it near where he was building a shanty, on Friday morning, the 20th instant. That he took it home and showed it and the papers in it to a person named Douglass, a schoolmaster, who told him the notes were drawn in favor of Whyte, Hamilton & Co., and advised him to keep the box till it was advertised. Douglass, who came shortly after into the Mayor's office stated that he had advised Glyn to act so, in consequence of advice he himself had received from a person whom he consulted.

Mr. Whyte was advised under the circumstances not to pay the money which had been offered as a reward. Glyn went to Mr. Whyte and offered to take half of the reward, which Mr. Whyte paid him, having got all the notes with the box, but not the cash. Glyn and Douglas left the Mayor's office together, and had great discussion going down stairs apparently about dividing the spoil.

This is one of the most strange affairs that we have known of for some time. Apart from the individual charged with the knowledge of the crime, it is something unaccountable that a schoolmaster, an apparently respectable individual, should instruct a person to keep stolen property in his possession, when he knew to whom it belonged. That he should keep it till it was advertised leads to the presumption that the reward which was likely to be offered weighed more with him than the doing of what was right. In fact it has transpired that the Schoolmaster was very anxious to know before the party having the box was known, if the reward offered would be paid, which showed that he had an eye in his advice to Glyn to share with him if a reward was offered. It is a question if both parties might not be criminally charged. At all events such conduct is highly culpable, and unworthy of the character of a teacher of youth, reflecting as it does upon a claim for honesty not at all favorable.

We are sorry that Mr. Whyte compromised the matter as he has done in paying the money, we know he did so in order to save any further trouble, and under feelings of joy at the moment, consequent upon receiving the valuable documents. At the same time the case afforded a good opportunity of punishing some exhibitions of the spirit of covetousness, not to use a harsher term, which were painfully manifest in parties who would be shocked at the thought of breaking open an office and stealing valuables therefrom. In law it is said "that the receiver is as bad as the thief." It has not pronounced so clearly upon the concealer of stolen property. The inferences in the case before us will be variously drawn. We cannot help saying that to us the facts appear very unfavorable to the parties concerned.

We are indebted to Charles Cameron Esq., of this Town, for a file of the Elgin and Morayshire Courier from which we copy the obituary of Captain Tod—a name which appears to have been as familiar as a household word in Morayshire.

In reading such notices we are reminded of our early days, and the great events then transpiring. The heroes who took a part in those great struggles are fast passing away, like the gallant tar whose exploits are here recorded—reminding us that there is no abiding here—that we, too, must pass from this stage of existence—must "die and be as water spilled upon the ground." May we be ready when the inexorable summons shall come.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

This fratricidal struggle is still going on, and so far from the 4th of July 1861 seeing it at an end, we were predicted when it commenced, the present anniversary of the Independence of the United States sees it as far off as ever. Three months was to be the period of its duration, according to the most sanguine of the Northern portion, whereas 15 months have gone and not a rational hope appears of its termination.

The latest intelligence from the vicinity of Richmond points significantly to the fact so often seen before, that the Southern Republic can successfully resist its Northern opponent, that its Beauregards and Jacksons are a match for any that can be brought against them. The recent battles at Mechanicsville and the vicinity prove their skill and valour equal to that of the North; in fact the correct reports show that the Southerners had the best of it.

The numbers of killed and wounded on both sides is fearful, and the prisoners of war numerous. There is a fear of pestilence where the wounded Northern soldiers are being cared for; the nature of their wounds, the length of time before they can be properly cared for and dressed, in this hot weather, is spoken of as causing a sad stench, and likely to produce fatal fevers. A part of the English Press is discussing the propriety of interference by the European Powers on the ground of humanity. There is no question that the time is near when this fearful war must be brought to a close. It will, however, be a happy thing for the world if America herself will stop it, and prevent the intervention which seems inevitable if she will not.

A long fight on the one hand to maintain the integrity of a union of States, which a part of those States have seceded from deliberately and determinedly forever. The one fights for a principle, the other for independence, and in proportion to the length of the war will be the hatred of the belligerents towards each other. We devoutly pray for the sake of our common humanity that this sad war may speedily come to a close.

HALDIMAND BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

Pursuant to previous arrangements, the above Association met in the Baptist Chapel, in this Town, on Friday last, at 10½ a. m., when the opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Caldicott, of Toronto. His sermon was most appropriate to the occasion, and, we believe one of the best ever preached in Peterboro. In the course of Friday and Saturday, various subjects of importance were discussed; and it was gratifying to find that a spirit of love, peace and harmony pervaded all the meetings, which were much enjoyed by the delegates, visitors and others. Into this Association, which is one of the ten in the Province, three churches were received at its last gathering, increasing its present number to twenty-four. The representation from the various churches composing it was fully as large as on any former occasion. Besides the discussion of different subjects of interest, seven sermons were preached, the last on Sabbath evening, by the Rev. H. Lloyd, of Whitby. There is good reason to believe that happy and lasting results will follow the late meeting of the above Association.—Com.

FIRE AT NORWOOD.—On the night of Sunday the 29th of June last, a fire broke out in Mr. Thomas Buck's Mills, which resulted in the total destruction of the saw and old Grist Mill, it was with the greatest efforts being used that the new stone Grist Mill was saved. Mr. Buck's loss will be about $2 000, we have not been informed whether there were any insurance or not on the buildings. The fire it is supposed was the work of an incendiary.

☞ We publish the list of pupils receiving prizes of the late examination of the Union School of this Town. On Friday evening when the prizes were distributed there was a large attendance of children and adults in the Lecture Room of the School. Col. Haultain, Rev. J. Carroll, and others addressed the children. The examination was spoken of as being satisfactory.

☞ On the first page will be found the report of the meeting held lately in Cobourg in reference to the Cobourg and Peterboro Railway. It was unavoidably crowded out last week.

NOTES BY THE WAYSIDE.

LETTER No. 2.

In my letter from New York, I promised to notice Syracuse, Albany, and New York at a future time.

SYRACUSE

The cars left Oswego at 7.45 a. m., and we passed through the villages of Fulton and Baldwinsville, coming in sight of Syracuse at about 9 o'clock. As we entered by the North we had a good view of the Onondaga Lake, and the villages of Liverpool, Geddes, and Salina, on its margin. To the South of these lie the acres of vats for the manufacture of Solar Salt, and to the right and left of these are the "blocks" for the manufacture of the finer qualities. Still farther South is spread out the City, surrounded, horse-shoe shape, by a range of hills, which give it a peculiarly picturesque appearance. The population of the place is 32,000, and perhaps there is not another city of its size in the State of New York presenting so many attractions. Being central in its position, it is where the nucleus of all religious and political circles forms, and where mostly all State Conventions are held. It was here where the great Republican party had its birth, and where United States Whiggery met its death. Silver-greyism, Barnburnism, Locofocoism, and other isms too numerous to mention, also found an end in this noted place. In Abolitionism it is not behind, as to witness, the famed Jerry Rescue, and it is also the head-quarters of Women's-rightism. At the last Convention here of the strong-minded women and "blue-stockings," a disturbance arose which resulted in the arrest and committal of two of the most noted of them for breach of the public peace. Even the "Young Americans" who took it into their heads to make a filibustering expedition to Canada, once a time, are said to have held their secret meeting here. The principle article of trade in Syracuse is salt, of which several millions of barrels are manufactured and exported annually to every part of the United States and Canadas, giving employment to several thousand of persons, and many millions of dollars capital annually. It might be a matter of conjecture how the Saline waters are conveyed to the springs at Syracuse, the land there standing several hundreds of feet above the level of the sea, but investigations have proved that the waters have a subterranean source, and run towards the Atlantic. It has been thought by some that the spring proceeds from a stream running subterraneously from the Pacific to the Atlantic. This cannot be, however, as the waters of the springs contain much more salt than those of either Ocean.

Leaving at 2.05 p. m, by the Central Railroad, we pass through Utica, Rome, New Amsterdam, and other places, and at 7.30 arrive at where, amidst the most tremendous confusion, and the greatest care to keep our baggage together, we find our way by omnibus to the steamboat landing, where we embark, not, however, for New York, as we intended, but for a place several miles down the Hudson River, where the Steamer New World lies—being unable from the shallowness of the stream to proceed further up. To us who had been accustomed to plenty of room in steamboats, the crowd and crush of this one was oppressive. Filled in every part with passengers, it was with difficulty that we could find room to sit down in on its decks, out or inside. An hour's sailing, and we were alongside the New World, a great four-decker steamboat. It is certainly among steamboats what the Great Eastern is among steamships. The accommodations are good, and the works most stupendous. But before we loose sight of the City of Albany, we must take a glance at it. Being the Capital of the State it possesses an importance that is of much value to it, besides, being the termination of the Erie Canal and the Central Railroad, and being the great outlet of, and inlet to, the commerce of New York State, and a great part of trade of the west and south-west. Settled by the Dutch about the year 1721, and at first known as Knickerbocker, it has gradually attained a population of about 85,000, a large portion of which is still Dutch, and of Dutch extraction.

The scenery below Albany is fine, and although the ride is not the most pleasant, the time till we arrive at the New York steamer passes quickly. Finding ourselves comfortably ensconsed within the New World, we know little of mundane objects till the following morning, when we awake to find ourselves approaching

NEW YORK.

No account a person can read will give one any correct idea of the landing from a steamer at New York harbor. Hundreds of hack-men, dray-men, and porters, are bawling at the top of their voices, for the job of conveying one's precious self and effects to some part of the City. Your only relief is to push boldly through them, not listening to a word they say, or entrust yourself to the tender mercies of the hackmen, and your baggage to the keeping of some licensed porter, and so push on to your destination. Rattle and shake, up one street and down another, over the cart-stones; now blocked about by crowds of pedestrians, and again fenced in by rows of hacks, and other vehicles till you arrive at the place you directed to be taken to, and then, as Falstaff would say, "comes the reckoning." If you are a stranger, and don't know how to meet John, you will be made to pay pretty dearly for your ride. If he asks a dollar give him 50 cents if 50 cents give him 25, and if he persists in asking the sum, take his number and look around for a policeman, and he will soon leave you. The strangest thing visible to us was the great number of maimed and disfigured men in the streets. Here a bandaged eye, and the 6 crippled limb, at every turn. Our first idea was that an hospital for the wounded soldiers of the Union army had been opened, and we were right. At the corner of a street intersecting Broadway, near Barnum's Museum, is a large building, in which we understand several hundreds of soldiers are nursed and cared for.

If I had time (and if you, Mr. Editor, had space, for this is the main consideration), I could fill columns after column of matter about New York, but I will only notice the renowned Broadway, of which all the world has heard. I confess being disappointed at it, for instead of a wide, handsome street, was a comparatively narrow one, crowded with vehicles, and almost impassable at every point. Of the crowds in Broadway, a poetical writer in the June number of Harper's Magazine very descriptively writes:

"Hither they come, and thither they go,
Like a mighty river they ebb and flow,
With a rushing sound as of falling rain,
Or of wind that ripples the grassy plain;
The old and the young, the sad and the gay,
Jostle each other on brisk Broadway."

Spain and Scotland.

SPAIN IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

Since the days of imperial Rome, there had arisen no empire like the empire of Spain. In the occupant of the Escurial, as aforetime in the occupant of the Palatine, the world had again found its master. Under the sceptre of that master were gathered the races and tongues of a third part of the globe. To adopt the bold image of the prophet to the stately Spanish monarchy, "the" Spaniard "was a cedar in" Europe, "with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs the waters made him great, the deep set him up on high, with her rivers running round about his plants; and sent out his little rivers unto all the trees of the field—Therefore his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long, because of the multitude of waters when he shot forth"—(Ezek. xxxi. 3 5). The Spanish monarchy at that period stood without a rival at the head of Europe. Its territory, which extended over three continents, was made up of the finest lands on the globe; it was served by the ablest statesmen of the age; its exchequer was replenished from the wealth of a world; its armies were inured to victory in every hemisphere; its fleets rode triumphant on the ocean. The astute genius of Charles and the matchless deceit of Philip had won for its policy the reputation of consumate ability. Nations sued humbly at its gates, and kings waited to learn its destiny from its award. It had laid its right hand upon Mexico and Peru; and the rich and various products of their soil, and the wealth of their mines, borne across the deep, stocked the markets and filled the mints and silver shops of Spain. With its left hand it grasped the Orient, and gathered the fragrant spices and precious gems of East in India. Hers, too, were the manufactures of Belgium. The forces of Liege and the looms of Bruges and Ghent ministered to her luxury. Hers was the corn, and oil and silk of Lombardy; hers was the fine wheat and wines of the Two Sicilies; and to her from every region on earth, came galleons, richly laden with the precious things of the air, the earth, and the sea. Thus was she great. The sky was not high enough for her proud head, nor the earth broad enough for her lordly limbs. Spain said, in the pride of her heart, as she looked over a world that seemed created only for her use: "The cedars in the garden of God cannot hide me; the fir trees are not like my boughs, and the chestnut trees are not like my branches; nor any tree in the garden of God is like unto me in my beauty."

At the head of this vast empire stood Philip II. If ever man did, Philip governed for an idea. That idea was the entire and absolute submission of the conscience of every human being to his will, or, which was the same thing, to the authority of the Church of Rome. "The Church alone is lord of conscience." Such was the theorem the truth of which Philip undertook to demonstrate. This theorem was with Philip the sum of all wisdom. Out of it, the Spanish king infallibly held, must grow the order of the world, the prosperity of States and the happiness here and hereafter of every individual. The magnificent spanish monarchy became but the embodiment of this idea, and the whole administration of government the machinery for carrying it into effect. That this idea was true, and that it would conquer, Philip never for a moment doubted; and, indeed, why should it not, seeing it was backed by the armies the fleets, the statesmanship, the policy, and the whole power of the Spanish monarchy! Well, the long centuries must try. Having based his splendid empire upon this idea, and staked its progress upon its truth, Philip dies, and with kingly pomp is laid in the vaults of the Escurial.

SCOTLAND IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

Leaving the Spanish king to sleep his deep sleep, and the Spanish monarchy to its great experiment, big with momentous issues of good or of evil, we turn our steps into Northern Europe. The mariner sailing under the star of the pole, descries a little country in the North Sea, its naked mountains shrouded in clouds, and its rocky strand beaten incessantly by ocean's angry surge. What a contrast to Spain, with its fruitful soil, its delicious climate, its stately cities, and its colossal shadow covering both occident and orient, is this insignificant, hardly-known, and rarely-visited country, on whose shore we now set foot! Between the Scotland of the sixteenth century and the Spain of the sixteenth century we find a contrast than which that age offered no greater, and never perhaps has a greater been offered by any age before or since. Of Scotland the plough had as yet scarce tamed the soil. Bits of meadow and patches of corn land gleamed out amid the all but universal covering of moor and black wood. Here art had reared no stately cities. The sons of this land dwelt in hovels of mud, or in tenements of wood. Commerce had not filled its harbors and its highways with traffic, or enriched its towns with the produce of other climes.—Learning and science had not yet refined the manners and expanded the minds of its citizens. Law struggled to maintain a precarious footing amid the insubordination of lordly chieftains and the turbulence of factious barons. The burghers had scarce tasted of freedom. The throne, weak at home, was despised abroad. Philip, while he plotted industriously to annex France and subjugate England, appears to have deemed Scotland unworthy of his thoughts. What appreciable addition could so poor a country have brought to the lordly empire of Spain? Philip, it is true, was all-powerful, although rich in kingdoms; still he scarce coveted this kingdom; but who at that hour would have had the boldness to predict that the Scotch fir tree, rooted in this infertile soil, and buffeted by these unkindly blasts, would one day overtop the great Spanish cedar? "How can this thing be?" it would have been asked, had such an augury been dropped. Among the sons of that land there arose one who, altho' he wore no crown, yet carried in his breast a kingly soul, and by that soul ruled his nation. Like Philip, too, this man governed for an idea. But Knox's idea was not Philip's idea. Knox's idea was the direct converse of Philip's idea. "God alone," said Knox, "is Lord of the conscience." This idea was with Knox the sum of all liberty. It was a little seed, and it was deposited in a little country; but Knox knew it to be a seed of life. Out of it would come, first a free gospel, next a free constitution; and to these two indispensable things would be added all that is needful to a nation—order, industry, commerce, science art, political power, and, in due time, greatness. The little Scotland, with this idea, he would back against the great Spain, with all her armies and fleets, her wealthy dependencies, and her subtle state-craft. So far as the bigotry and factions of the age permitted, Knox made his country an embodiment of this idea. Upon it did he frame its organization; upon it did he stake its existence as an independent State; and having done so Knox died; and, amid signs of sorrow, unostentatious but deep, was laid in the grave.

SPAIN AT THIS DAY.

Three hundred years passed over Europe. It is the middle of the nineteenth century. The Papal world is rocking to and fro, by the successive shocks of a great revolution. Philip feels it in the vaults of the Escurial, and quits his tomb. Knox, too, rises from his grave. Now for the proof of the two ideas.

Clearing his eyes from the dust of the sepulchre, Philip looks around on the dominions he once governed. He surveys once more a scene of his grandeur.—What is this which he sees? Is this his once magnificent Spain? or does he dream? Is it a reality? or is it some hideous phantom of the grave that mocks his sight? He would see that mighty empire on whose vast dominions the sun never set. Surely this cannot be it, unrivalled up into these naked, barren, and depopulated provinces, lying betwixt the Pyrenees and the sea! He would see his proud cities. Once he counted them by hundreds. They were the abodes of industry and skill, the emporiums of riches, and the homes of elegance. Where and what are they now? Blots on the soil which they once adorned. Decay and ruin have stricken them. Reeking with filth steaming with poisonous stenches, they are the haunts of vice, the nests of idleness, and the lairs of beggary. He would see the unrivalled cultivation that covered those plains on which the trees and shrubs of Europe were mingled with the aromatic flowers of the East—those olive groves, those citron and orange gardens, from which queenly cities looked forth, and where villages clustered by hundreds, walled around from the breath of tempest by their grand sierras. Instead of this proud spectacle, he meets his astonished eye dreary wastes, where no rivulet flows, where no flowers blooms, where no tree gives its shadow, and where the heart is uncheered by the sight of man, or of man's dwelling. The desert extends over a full half of this once richly-cultivated soil. In this unhappy land industry has lost its skill, art has forgot its cunning, and science has extinguished her lamp. To this shore there comes out now the richly-freighted galleon: the harbours of Spain are choked up. Into her marts are poured no longer the corn of Lombardy, the rich fabrics of the Netherlands, the gold and silver of Peru. The haughty hidalgoes and conquerors of the sixteenth century have sunk into brigands, beggars and monks. Philip's descendants are condemned for their vices, and despised for their weaknesses. His throne is a by-word among the nations by whom it was once obeyed. Historians are searching his archives, reading his letters, and bringing forth from a darkness which the Spanish king had hoped would be eternal, the record of the intrigues, the hypocrisies, and the crimes by which he sought to prop up his power. Philip beholds all this; and there gathers on his "dreary visage" a deeper blackness than on the day when he was told of the destruction of his "Invincible Armada." "Surely," he exclaims, "the judgment has sat; surely the books have been opened. This is the great day of the wrath of the Lamb. Let me flee to the vaults of the Escurial; let me hide myself forever in the tomb."

SCOTLAND AT THIS DAY.

He who had gone down to the grave never having feared the face of man, returns from it equally courageous. Knox looks around, to see how it fares with the little country which he had made the champion of a great principle. Can this be the land in the dust of which, three hundred years ago, he lay down to rest? It must be; it can be no one other. Here it is; its place on the map of the globe unchanged, and lying betwixt the old parallels of latitude and longitude. But in every other respect how different! While Knox has been sleeping, with what a wondrous vitality and force has his principle been operating! It has come upon Scotland like the unseen but resistless powers of spring, driving before it the rigidity and darkness of winter, and cleansing, renewing, and beautifying the whole face of the land, and the whole face of society. It has rent from the soul the shackles of ignorance and superstition, and from the body the fetters of feudalism. It has purified the land from friars, images, saints' days, and masses. Cowls, cords, beads, and crosses, with their inseparable attendants, idleness, degradation, and filth, have all disappeared; and in their room have come an "open Bible"—that fount of liberty; the Sabbath—that day of blessed rest and holy thought; and a Christian worship, with its sanctuaries scattered sweetly over hill, and valley, and city, and sending up the melody of psalms and the voice of prayer in the Sabbath stillness to the great Jehovah. Beginning here, this silent but mighty principle has penetrated downwards into every department of the nation's life and the nation's action, vivifying and transforming it. Amid the storms of the North Sea it has created an isle of beauty. At the extremities of Europe it has opened a fountain of civilization.—Where the deep darkness of an ancient barbarism brooded, the lamp of science and of letters now burns. The brown moor has given place to fields of golden grain; the morass has been converted into rich pasture-lands; the dark forest has fallen before the axe, and cultivated field or thriving town now occupy its place. It has given to Scotland a burgher-democracy which Lombardy might do well to imitate; and has spread out beneath its Northern sky landscapes which Spain and Italy might envy. On the Scottish soil art has erected the fairest of earthly cities; and from the Scottish genius has proceeded that one mechanical invention which, more than all others is destined to give man the dominion of the earth on which he dwells, and is rapidly revolutionizing the whole labor of the globe. As one with England, Scotland enjoys a home industry and a foreign commerce which far transcends that of Spain in her palmy days; and she stands at the head of an empire which, whether we regard area of territory, population or resources, is double that of Spain in the zenith of her power, as Spain was double that of the Roman empire. Thus has Knox's principle been tested. Nothing could be more complete as a demonstration of its truth than the Britain of the nineteenth century. Its triumph is indeed magnificent.

—Dr. Wyllie.

Dr. Ryerson and the School System.

There was undoubtedly a time when Dr. Egerton Ryerson was a sincere opponent of Separate Schools and supporter of a national system of education, free from the influence of sectarianism. He has wrote long and powerfully on that system, and gained a great reputation as a worthy follower of the secular educationists who had gone before him. Amidst all this after arrangement with the Roman Catholics, and their acquiescence in the Ministry, we never thought that he altogether sacrificed his former predilections. The Catholic body was very powerful in the Cabinet and the country, and there was some excuse for one in an official situation temporizing with them. The latest development of Dr. Ryerson's views, however, force upon us a conviction that he is now a traitor to the cause he formerly advocated, and an enemy to the educational interests of the Province. A report of a Committee on Separate Schools was laid, on Tuesday last, before the Synod of the Anglican Diocese of Toronto, in which the extraordinary announcement was made, that the Committee had been in communication with the Chief Superintendent of education and learned "that a bill had been prepared by him for the "amendment of the existing school law, in "which the claims of the United Church of "England and Ireland to the control of her "own schools, in cities, towns, and incorporated villages, has been recognized and "provided for, as far as seemed practicable "under existing circumstances." The committee further informed the Synod that this bill was found acceptable by the Bishop of Toronto and by themselves, and that they left the matter in the hands of the Government who, the Superintendent informed them, he had reason to believe would introduce the measure. The frank announcement by the committee that the Superintendent of Education had been, unknown to the general public, combining with the Anglican Church to unset the existing system of national education by the establishment of seperate Protestant schools, seems to have created as great confusion in the Department of Education as the announcement in the Globe of the interviews between the Chief Superintendent and the Catholic Bishop Lynch. Mr J. G. Hodgins, Deputy Superintendent of Education, is a member of the Anglican Synod, and through him Dr. Ryerson yesterday put in an explanation and defence. Our readers will find Mr. Hodgins' statement in the report of the Synod's proceedings elsewhere, and we hope it will be carefully read. Dr. Ryerson makes the same claim to secrecy for his communication to the Bishop of Toronto and the committee of the Synod, which he set up in the case of Bishop Lynch, and with equally little reason. There should have been nothing secret about these communications. It is one of the worst things about this very dark business that the Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada has changed his whole views of the policy of the Government on Common Schools, and that he has been privately arranging with ecclesiastics of the churches of England and Rome for the introduction of measures into Parliament to carry out his new plans, keeping the people of Upper Canada, the parties most interested, entirely ignorant of what was proceeding. No public officer was ever guilty of a more disgraceful act. But for the frankness of the clergymen whom Dr Ryerson sought to take partners in his schemes, we should have been left utterly unaware that any change of policy was intended, until, perhaps, the measure was sprung upon the House.

Mr. Hodgin's explanation did not in any respect improve Dr. Ryerson's position in the matter. The contrary was the effect. We should have judged from the language of the Committee's report that the Church of England alone was to have the benefit of the separate system. We learn from Mr. Hodgins, however, that Dr. Ryerson contemplates no such partial measure; but that by the terms of his bill, any congregation of any denomination in a city town, or village will be at liberty to open a school and demand a share of the common school fund. Decidedly the Chief Superintendent is not half-way correct in the doctrines of the ecclesiastical educationists. There is a halt between two opinions. His only restriction relates to the cities, towns and villages. They form the entering wedge, the country will follow. In truth there is no argument for cutting up the school fund in cities towns and villages, than in townships. In the most densely populated and wealthiest localities there is difficulty enough in obtaining money for one set of Common Schools, and the proposal to divide that inadequate fund among the Protestant sects as well as the Catholics, either in town or country, is an outrage upon common sense.

We could quote column after column from Dr. Ryerson's own writings to show the evils of the ecclesiastical system, and its inapplicability to our state of society, but we content ourselves in the meantime with a single extract from his report for the year 1855:—

"In countries where by virtue of church and state union, the state is a tool of the church, or the church is a creature of the state, or both, the question of a system of public instruction is essentially a church question, and the consequences of it are apparent—ignorance is of the masses, or the absence of constitutional liberty, or both. But, in Upper Canada, no political union of church and state is acknowledged; and, therefore, the claim of any church to state support for its teaching, whether of the young or the old, is inconsistent with the avowed constitution of our government, and is incompatible with the principles of equal rights and privileges amongst all religious persuasions and classes. This principle is now acknowledged and avowed by all Protestant denominations in Upper Canada, without exception. The few members of the Church of England that have demanded separate schools for themselves, supported by public funds and taxes, have at length acquiesced in the sentiments and views of the great body of the members of that church and of the country at large. So that all attempts to seize upon supposed differences of opinion among Protestants, and to promote them as much as possible, in order to break down or weaken the public school system has become developed, public opinion in its support has gained in strength and energy; and the latter year has witnessed a stronger and more united expression of it in Upper Canada, than during any former year."

This was written seven years ago; now Dr. Ryerson prepares a bill to introduce the measure he then denounced.

We judge from Mr. Hodgins' statement that Dr. Ryerson intends to excuse his change of policy by a plea for the children of the poor. He will probably contend that their is a class who do not attend the Common Schools that may be reached by denominational efforts, and that these efforts, should be maintained by the State. This is evidently a mere pretext for the introduction of a measure which would throw the entire education of the community into the hands of the clergy. There are unquestionably vagrant children in the streets of the large cities who attend no school. Their case is one for special consideration, but the succour which Dr Ryerson offers to them is the very last that should be adopted. There is no doubt on the mind of any who has considered the question that the Reformatory is the only proper place to send vagrant children who have no parents fit to educate and maintain them. To suppose that that class would find a fitting place in Church schools is an absurdity. Grant the denominations money to build school houses and to employ teachers, and straightway they will endeavour to bring into them not vagrants, but the children of the well-to-do poor, who appear clean and well clad, and make a good show in the class rooms and the church. That is the tendency of the Church school's everywhere. The clergymen desire to make as many disciples as they can, and have them of as good a character as possible. They are engaged in a denominational work and as a rule denominations do not look after vagrants. If Dr. Ryerson's project were adopted, the Church schools would be filled with the same classes as now attend the common schools; the latter would be emptied by the cry of "Godless" which the clergy would raise. There are undoubtedly some children who are not vagrants and who nevertheless ought not attend school, although a good education is offered them free. Special mention of this class is made in the preamble to Dr. Ryerson's bill quoted by Mr. Hodgins. Any one may see at a glance how very unlikely it is that parents and guardians who are so neglectful of their childrens interests as to keep them from the common schools, will send them to the denominational institutions set up in their stead. We heard nothing in saying that if we cut up the common school fund among the Protestant sects, the little which each will get will not enable them to provide such efficient schools as are now maintained out of the general fund. What would be the inducement under such circumstances to parents who now prefer that their children should work or play, to send them to school? It may be said that the clergy and members of the church would use influence to induce parents to be more liberal and careful of the welfare of their offspring. We should have a very poor opinion, however, of any clergymen who would not while visiting the poor, use his influence to induce parents to send their children to the public schools. Clergymen, of course, speak on behalf of their Sunday Schools, that is their peculiar province. But they must know that the little ones will be better Sunday scholars if they have been at school during the week. It is altogether a new thing to resort to denominational schools for the purpose of securing universal education. The experience of the sectarian system in England, leads to the conclusion that it is much less efficient in that as in other respects than the national system.

In order to show that Dr. Ryerson actually agreed to grant all that the High Church Anglicans wanted, we have only to refer to the remarks of the Rev. Dr. Fuller, in reporting to the Synod the substance of a conversation he held with the Chief Superintendent. There can be no question that Dr. Ryerson has gone over to the camp of the enemy, and can no longer be counted among the friends of a national system of education, free from sectarianism. It is a pity, after making a great reputation in his old position, which went said they were pursued by a clerical student who witnessed the deed, and that they have been arrested."

The Cork Examiner says: "The unfortunate gentleman, who was only 25 years of age, was walking with his wife between three and four o'clock on Friday afternoon. When they had reached about half a mile from his residence, two young men, strangers to them, came over a ditch to the road on which they were walking. They went past them a few feet, when they turned round and addressed a few words to Mr. Fitzgerald. It is said they asked him for money. Before, however, he had time to reply, one of the fellows presented a pistol at him and discharged it. The ball entered the side of his neck and passed out of the back of it. The unfortunate gentleman fell, and his wife threw herself on him, put her arms around him to protect him, and asked the assassins to shoot herself but spare her husband.—They, however, paid no heed to her entreaties, and one of them deliberately raised one of her arms which encircled her husband, and placing the pistol under her, discharged the contents at her husband. The murderers then ran across the country. The report of the shot and the cries of the unhappy lady were heard by a man named John Hannan, who had come to the spot some minutes after the assassins had run away. He saw them about a quarter of a mile from him across the country, and gave chase, but they were more fleet than he, and having the advantage of a long start, easily escaped from him. The cause of the assassination is not known. It is stated that the assassins demanded money of Mr. Fitzgerald; but if there were any truth in that statement, it is most probable that they would have searched his clothes for money after they killed him. This, however, they did not do. Another rumor is that Mr. Fitzgerald had dispossessed a tenant on his property, and had received anonymous letters threatening him with the fate he ultimately met with if he did not act towards his tenantry with leniency. If there be, however, any foundation for these rumors, it cannot rest on the tenantry of the Kilmallock estate; for they consist only of three persons, who, we understand, are in respectable circumstances, and have always paid their rents with regularity."

Fears of a Pestilence.

From the Montreal Com. Advertiser.

Many persons are yet living who were witnesses of the terrible ravages of typhoid or camp fever, which engendered in the hospitals of the French army during the Russian campaign, gradually spread all over Europe, taking a deep root wherever filth and misery abounded, raging ten times more than the sword of man and the frost of God had destroyed in the retreat from Moscow.

This continent is in danger of a similar visitation, from which Canada will hardly escape. The Federal Government, with a mad disregard of consequences, is sending the fever patients evacuated from the army hospitals, to their several States and homes; the steamers and railway trains are daily carrying more or less of emaciated and dying men, conveying with them a dreadful infection to every county, town, village, and hamlet. In many places the diseases thus disseminated has become epidemic, and is ravaging the country; and the prospect is that every fever patient disposed of will become the centre of a rapidly increasing circle of contagion and death. At Rouse's Point we are informed the fever has already become epidemic among the inhabitants, from contact with sick soldiers conveyed through that place to their homes in northern New York.

This camp fever is the starvation fever of Ireland, the ship fever whose tens of thousands of victims perished together at Grosse Isle, at Quebec, and in this city, and which, travelling with the convalescent, carried its blight into the remotest parts of the Province.

With such insidious dangers on our borders it is the duty of our civic authorities at once to take the necessary steps to enforce those well known sanitary regulations which will diminish the liability of the city to a visitation which, originating from exposure and hardship, roots itself in the uncleanliness of crowded tenements, foul yards and garbage littered streets, and then smites like lightning the palace as well as the hovel, rich and poor, cleanly and dirty with universal pestilence.

BACHELOR'S PIC-NIC.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

On Wednesday last, June 25th, I had the honor of an invitation, which I, of course accepted, to a Bachelor's Pic-nic. I always feel anxious to attend those convivial assemblies (especially when they are under good management), for two reasons: first, it is a relief to get out for recreation among a party of ladies and gentlemen, it also does away with that monotony which is always attendant on business; and, finally, it gives you an opportunity of forming a great many new acquaintances and attachments—sometimes of a permanent and lasting nature. The Committee, composed of Messrs. Haggart, Lundy, O'Donnell and Dixon, had everything arranged, so that early on the morning above mentioned every person was in readiness for a start for the gala day. About 10 o'clock, a. m., the teams were brought out, and in 20 minutes all were on the way to Mud Lake. Arrived at the grounds, the amusements were commenced and kept up until that extensive and dark-colored, but light in weight, mantle is thrown over all, without respect to age, sex, or condition. All were pleased with the days sport, and were only sorry that it should terminate so soon. By the by, I quite near forgetting the refreshments. I must say that too much credit or praise cannot be attached to the proprietor of the Maple Leaf Saloon, for the very excellent dinner and lunch he gave that day. Talk about refreshments at a pic-nic! it beats anything of the kind I ever saw. You usually get crackers, cheese and pickles, with the etceteras, but not so on this occasion; it was a dinner the like of which never was given on these grounds! The looks of the table would make a person's teeth water, and force a person to eat whether they were willing or not. I must say the whole affair was a great success, and for which all concerned deserve credit.

I understood attempts were made to put a damper on and break it up, and that, too, by individuals who assume the air of respectability, and wear the clothing usually worn by gentlemen, and from whom better things are expected. They must feel flat now, to think their influence was of no avail, and that it came off so well—the only thing they are now afraid of is that the public will find out they have been guilty of such a mean transaction.

I have attended a number of pic-nic's at Mud Lake, but must say this beats them all.

A BACHELOR.

Peterboro, July 2nd, 1862.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR.—When when we consider the age in which we live as age of progressive refinement, an age in which art and science are more fully developed than they have ever previously been, an age in which sciences that heretofore were considered too dark for the human mind to penetrate, have been dismantled of their darkness and their principles fully elucidated and have eventually become blessings to humanity. I say considering these things it is surprising that any thing in the form of imposition is tolerated, or even that there are impositions; but it is a lamentable fact that our country, much as it is enlightened, is not wholly free from such. There is not a better proof of this assertion than in the case of a person by the title and name of Miss Dannels, who came to the village of Keene as a Phrenological lecturer, who, by her affected amiability, and declarations that she was an orphan, &c., so far succeeded as to obtain the aid of some in her movements. Among the rest the School-Teacher of that place was so far importuned on as to consent to get her bills put up and give publicity of her lectures to the pupils. By this means she managed to get an audience the first night of her lecturing, but the people of Keene have too elevated an opinion of the science of Phrenology to attend the lectures of one whom they found by the first lecture to be wholly incapable of elucidating the principles of that science, and therefore at her second none appeared from Keene with the exception of two boys. For this reason she, when giving lectures in the neighbourhood, spoke in the most scurrilous and unladylike manner of the Keene people, and were it not that she is sheltered by the fact that she wears ladies' gloves, the law would be resorted to as a means by which her scornful imputations would return upon herself.

Now, Sir, free from all considerations of these things I feel myself but in duty bound to uphold, "if time would only permit," a science which has been insulted by her, not only by her lectures but also in her Phrenological examinations, for to my personal knowledge when examining the heads of the pupils of the school, notwithstanding her placing them in groups, one little fellow managed to change his position so as to come three different times under her examination, and was so far rewarded for so doing as to receive the character of three different persons.

I say I consider the science insulted, for having attempted to lecture on that science at became necessary, in order to make certain the validity of Phrenology, first to prove the brain the organ of the mind, as this is doubted by some; secondly, to prove a plurality of faculties, a proof which must of necessity precede a consideration of the mind by the organs of the head; and thirdly to prove that size is a measure of power, all other things being equal, for if these things can not be prevail, Phrenology is not founded either on analogy, or the nature of things—none of which she attempted to prove.

Now as my chief object in occupying a portion of your paper was simply to put people on their guard against such imposition, I will not weary your readers by a further continuance of this article, but perhaps may give you some of my ideas on the principles of Phrenology on some future day.

Yours truly,
J. M.

Keene, June 19th, 1862.

Prince of Wales.—The Prince of Wales will now, thanks to the skilful and vigilant management of his father, enter into an enjoyment of an income of $250,000 a year, and a half million of ready money fro the revenues of them Duchy of Cornwall. This is a nice little sum of money for an annual dividend, but with all this vast amount of money which will be under his control, it will not go so far to relieve rheumatism, pains in the side and back, tooth ache, burns, bruises, frost-bites, &c., as a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," which is sold by all Medicine Dealers, at the low price of 25 cts per bot le.

Weekly Commercial Report,

PRODUCE.

We are in receipt of advices from Liverpool to the 7th inst., per China, which quote flour dull again. There is a good deal of hesitancy on the part of shippers in buying flour, the fear of souring being generally entertained in connexion with Canadian Superfine, on account of the unfavorable condition of last year's wheat. To-day being a holiday, there is nothing doing, and our quotations only extend to yesterday's operations. We observe the English butter market is very dull, 84s. being the highest quotation. All coarse grains and meals are advancing in Britain, this may be attributed to the difficulties in the manufacturing districts, which are large consumers, and are compelled to use coarser material than flour.

Flour.—A large lot of Extra has changed hands at $5.00; Fancy is in moderate request at $4.75, fresh ground Superfine from Western Wheat is wanted, at from $4.60 to $4.75, but these orders are difficult of execution. Canada Superfine, good brands, $4.50 to $4.55, without much doing. Coarse grades are scarce and high in proportion.

Bag Flour.—Quiet, at 2 40 to $2.50. Rye flour in fair demand, at $3.00 to $3.30.

Wheat.—Choice samples of U. C. Spring, afloat, 95c. to 97c. Chicago, No. 1, $1 00; car Wheat neglected, the demand for shipment continues steady; freights are slightly easier, this has a tendency to steady the price of wheat.

Oatmeal.—Quite scarce, at highest quotations; the demand is chiefly for English account. Sales at $4.20.

Corn.—Quiet and steady at 48c. per 56 lbs.

Peas.—Clean samples of U. C. Peas are enquired for at 75c. to 78c. per 66 lbs., the demand is brisk and the supply light.

Provisions.—Pork is very dull and only retail sales are to be effected. Quotations are Mess, $11.50c. Prime Mess $9.50c, and Prime $8.50, any of these grades can be had for less money.

Hams and Shoulders are selling slowly at 5c to 7c for former, and 2½c to 4½c for latter.

Eggs.—Scarce. Sales at 9c to 9½.

Butter.—The weather has been much against butter arriving here lately. The local trade is pretty well supplied, and the price has receded fully one cent. Good Dairy meets with steady sale at 13½c. to small dealers; picking out best samples, 14c. to 15c. is obtained.—Inferior and storepacked is neglected. We have one or two enquiries for shipment, though it is too early to do much with English market yet. If the drought experienced for the last six weeks should continue, we look for a brisk demand in fall at full prices.

Ashes.—Are in good demand; being scarce in England. Pots, $6.90, and 10s more for inferiors. Pearls firm at $7.10 for first, and $7.15 for seconds.

GROCERIES.

This branch of trade has been very quiet for ten days' past.

Staple goods are not plentiful, and holders want a good profit on all they were fortunate enough to receive before the late tariff came into operation. There is an impression that Sugar can be brought in for less money than present rates, and that the margin will induce heavy importations; but until there is some action taken in this direction, it is not safe to calculate on lower prices. At the Sale yesterday, only first lots were sold, although goods brought fair prices.

Teas.—There is not much doing in anything but fine Young Hyson and uncolored Japans, the balance of orders remaining over until the cargoes of Minerva and Maria are put up at auction. At present prices are 2c to 3c stiffer than at last sale.

Sugars.—At the Sale yesterday, several boards of medium Cubas were withdrawn at $7.50; bright was sold at $7.75 to $7.85 for five Hhds.; balance withdrawn.

Refinery Sugars.—quotations unchanged—but no stock.

Syrups.—Firm and held in one or two hands.

Coffee.—Java was taken at auction at 24½c; Jamaica, 21½; Laguayra, 22c; all withdrawn after first lots.

Rice.—There is a fair stock; prime samples bring $3 90 to $4.25; inferior, $3 80 to $4.00.

Tobacco.—The market is bare of fine samples; 10's are in demand at 31c to 40c; ¼ lbs. 35c to 45; plugs, out of stock.

Fish Oils.—Are inquired for pretty freely; the market is bare at present. Best Cod is held at 68c to 70c.

Linseed.—Boiled and raw without alteration since last week.

Salt.—Is not coming forward as early as was anticipated, and the demand for present wants is keeping the price firm at 55c for coarse; 80c for fine stored.

Now all good people both rich and poor,
I'll tell you of a Cheap Cash Store.
You'll know the shop by the British Flag,
So hasten there, and do not lag.

There's Brooms, Blacking, and the best of Teas,
Tobacco, and Snuff that will make you sneeze,
With Biscuits and Bread, if you please,
Red Herrings, Boiled Eggs, & the best of Cheese.

You can get Fresh Yeast, Sweets and Toys
That please both the girls and boys,
Besides Maple Sugar, Spices and Coffee,
Mustard and Candles, Salt and Toffee.

You can get at the shop Fish Hooks and Lines,
And good Potatoes of all kinds,
Besides Cigars, and Pictures to suit,
Needles, and Laces to lace the boot.

There's Starch, and Soda, and nice Hand-sleighs
That children can have fun on the cold Winter days.
Very fine Rings, Combs, and Studs,
Brooches, Thread, Beads, and small Washtubs.

So all good people take my advice,—
If you want to get anything very nice,—
Just call at the shop and try any kind;
You'll be sure to be suited to your mind.

JOHN WATTERSON is a kind-hearted man,
And he'll please you all as well as he can.
Mean people get trust, with a shuffling tale,
If they had their due they'd be put all in gaol.

We'll shout our boys for the Christmas feasts,
And go to J. Watterson's for our Turkeys and
For Chicken and Ducks he can't be beat, [Geese,
I've tested myself and pronounce them a treat

He has Clothespins, Soap, and Ripley's Seed,
Hatchets and Pins, so hasten with speed
And try his Onions, Bacon and Blue,
Baskets, Buttons, Hams, and Oatmeal too.

Hurrah for the Flag! may it rule the world,
And at J. Watterson's store be always unfurl'd,
I'll finish my verses, and have only to say,
That I'll do something better some other day

PATENTED IN APRIL, 1862,
By J. W. Smith,
OF PRESCOTT, C. W.

THIS CHURN is decidedly the most useful that has yet been invented. By it the largest churning can be into butter in ten minutes. The cream is poured into a tin hopper on the top of the churn, and runs through a Sack Breaker, which immediately crushes the butter sacks of the cream. By the time the cream runs through the crusher it is perfectly cool, and prepared for making butter immediately. One of these churns may be seen at the

A NEW STORY

IN THE

SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL:

A FIRST-CLASS

INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

ON May 8th, 1862, was commenced a new story in the Scottish American Journal, entitled

DELLBURN HOUSE,

A Tale of the Scottish Rebellion of 1745.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

"Chapters from the Life of James Tacket."

This tale will prove to be one of the most interesting ever published, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all classes of readers.

The Scottish American Journal is a paper peculiarly adapted to meet the requirements of the British people and their families from all parts of the old country resident on the American continent. It is, in fact, a family paper in the highest and best sense of the term. Its Home and Foreign News is amply given and carefully prepared, from a wide range of British and foreign sources, and omits no fact or feature calculated to interest its readers, whether ladies or gentlemen; so that the Scottish American Journal contains (presented in a concise and readable form) all the local, personal and political intelligence which could be only found scattered over a vast number of Scotch, English Irish, and Continental newspaper. Another most important feature of this journal is, that it gives the leading articles of the prominent British newspapers and other periodicals upon the principal topics of the day. In reference to the "editorials" of the Scottish American Journal, it is a significant fact that the British press frequently acknowledges their intrinsic truth and force by copiously extracting from its columns, and declaring that the Scottish American Journal is the most able and interesting paper in America. A well digested weekly summary is also given of the principle items of American news.

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1863

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A H. St. GERMAN to circulate five thousand copies of the 'Toronto Evening Journal' to parties named by us containing our advertisement.

ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the 'Toronto Evening Journal' will recieve one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly "Journal," a large first class paper established in 1857, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

The terms for advertising are less than has ever been offered to the public before, viz.: three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without changes) will be inserted at one dollar per line by the year, when they contain six lines or less

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DELARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 901 Policies were issued	359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assurred under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,935,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULAED FUNDS	373,503 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq, Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £10,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and neth premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d, to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued	No. of Policies issued	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

SPALDING'S ALE

By the Barrel,

At WARD & CADWELL'S.

MATHEWS' VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE.

THIS CELEBRATED DYE WAS FIRST prepared in 1845; since that time it has been used by thousands, and in no instance has it failed to give perfect satisfaction.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the cheapest in the world. Its price is only 50 cents, and each bottle contains double the quantity of dye contained in those usually sold for one dollar.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the safest composition of its class. It is warranted not to injure the hair, or the scalp, in the slightest degree.

THE VENETIAN DYE

works with rapidity and certainty. It causes no annoyance or trouble to those who use it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

produces any shade that may be desired—one that will not fade, crook, nor wash out; one that is as permanent as the hair itself.

THE VENETIAN DYE

does not, in any manner, interfere with the natural softness of the hair; it neither scorches nor dries it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

is the best, cheapest safest, most convenient, most successful, and most permanent Dye ever used.

THE VENETIAN DYE

having gained an extended reputation, the public are cautioned against purchasing any prepared in the same style, under the name or different name, as they are mere imitations, and liable to do injury.

For sale by all agents. Prepared only by

ALBION HOTEL,

L. W. DECKER, Proprietor
IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada

Poetry.

A CONJUBIAL ECLOUGE.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

——Arcades ambo,
Et cantare pares et respondere parati.—VIRGIL.

HE.

Much lately have I thought, my darling wife,
Some simple rule might make our wedded life
As pleasant always as a morn in May;
I merely name it—what does Molly say?

SHE.

Agreed; your plan I heartily approve;
Rules would be nice—but who shall make them, love?
Nay, do not speak!—let this the bargain be,
One shall be made by you, and one by me,
Till all are done—

HE.

—Your plan is surely fair,
In such a work 'tis fitting we should share;
And now—although it matters not a pin—
If you have no objection, I'll begin.

SHE.

Proceed! In making laws I'm little versed;
And as to words, I do not mind the first;
I only claim—and hold the treasure fast—
My sex's sacred privilege, the last!

HE.

With all my heart. Well—dearest—to begin:
When by our cheerful hearth our friends drop in
And I am talking in my brilliant style,
(The rest with rapture listening the while)
About the war—or anything, in short,
That you're aware is my especial forte—
Pray, don't get up a circle of your own,
And talk of bonnets in an under tone!

SHE.

That's Number One; I'll mind it well, if you
Will do as much, my dear, by Number Two:
When we attend a party or a ball,
Don't leave your solly standing by the wall,
The helpless victim of the dreariest bore
That ever walked upon a parlor-floor,
While you—oblivious of your spouse's doom—
Flirt with the girls—the gayest in the room!

HE.

When I (although the busiest man alive)
Have snatched an hour to take a pleasant drive,
And say, "remember, at precisely four You'll find the carriage at the door,"
Don't keep me waiting half-an-hour or so,
And then declare, "The clock must be too slow!"

SHE.

When you (such things have happened now and then)
Go to the Club with "I'll be back by ten"—
And stay till two o'clock—you needn't say,
"I really was the first to come away;
'Tis very strange how swift the time has passed,
I'm sure, my dear, the clock must be too fast!"

HE.

There—that will do; what else remains to say
We may consider at a future day;
I'm getting sleepy—and—if you have done—

SHE.

Not I!—this making rules is precious fun;
Now here's another:—When you paint to me
"That charming woman" you are sure to see,
Don't—when you praise the virtues she has got—
Name only those your Wife has not!
And here's a rule I hope you won't forget,
The most important I have mentioned yet—
Pray mind it well;—Whenever you incline
To bring your queer companions home to dine,
Suppose, my dear—Good Gracious he's asleep,
Ah! well—'tis lucky good advice will keep;
And he shall have it, sir, upon my life,
I've not the proper spirit of a wife!

Miscellaneous.

Hospital Scenes.

A lady whose husband had entered our army in the West, desiring also in some way to emulate his example of self-sacrificing patriotism, volunteered her service as a nurse in one of the military hospitals. Some of the incidents of her experience she very touchingly describes in a communication in a Western paper.

On entering the hospital, I found the attending physician, Dr. L., there and introducing myself.

"I have nothing to do," I said, "and want you to employ me. Can I render assistance in any way?"

"Yes, madam," was his prompt response. "If you will come in sometimes, and prepare something nourishing, and talk to them, to keep them in good spirits, we shall be very glad."

"I shall certainly do so. I am glad if I can be of use.'

I laid aside my bonnet and cloak, without further ceremony, and went to the sickest man that I saw.

"How do you feel?" I asked, bending over him.

"Weak, ill—nigh to death," he replied, in a tone so pitiful and full of despair that I felt the tears spring to my eyes. I sent them back to their source, however, and spoke in a full, firm, yet kind tone.

"Oh, no. You are not near death. You are ill, but you will not die. Uncle Sam has use for you yet, and in a few days you will be up and ready to shoulder your musket again. Don't you think so?"

His eyes sparkled in their deep sockets, and a momentary flush rose in his pale cheek.

"O, if I could only think so! But the time drags so slowly, and here I lie useless, helpless, keeping those who could fight, away, to take care of me."

"Oh, well, you needed a little rest, any way," I said cheerfully. "Now I want to do something to cure you. Do you want your face bathed?"

"Yes, if it is not too much trouble," he said eagerly.

"Not a bit. Now be easy, and I'll soon have you feeling nicely."

I got a basin of water, combs, brushes, sponge, and soap, and came back to him. His large, dark eyes rested with childlike pleasure on my face, as I carefully bathed his face and hands. He had grown so feeble that he could scarcely connect a sentence without pausing, and lay panting on his pillow from the slightest exertion. After bathing his face, I took the comb and straightened out the matted masses of long black hair that grew thickly over his brow. I soon found that illness had made him childish, though at first I started at his childish bluntness.

"You are mighty pretty," he said suddenly, and for a moment I did not know what to say, but then I thought, "I may seem so to him, poor fellow," and only smiled in reply. "What's your name?" he next asked.

"S.," I replied.

"You ain't married, are you?"

"Yes, and my husband's gone to fight, as you did, at Fort Donelson"

"O dear," he said fretfully, "I am sorry. What did you get married for? Never mind. I'll put a spider in his dumpling when I get well."

With the last words a mischievous light broke over his face, and his black eyes twinkled. I laughed merrily at him, and he seemed to enjoy it hugely. Poor fellow! little enough amusement he had. If he could amuse himself at my expense, I would have no objections.

"My next patient was an orphan boy, sixteen years of age. Frank B., belonged to Brige's Sharpshooters, and a braver heart never beat in the bosom of mortel than that which throbbed in his.

While bathing his face, I asked him what induced him to leave his home and friends in Nebraska, to come away and peril his life at such an early age. His reply is worthy to be written by that of the noble Nathan Hale, who regretted having but "one life to offer to his country." He said:

"I joined the army because I was young and strong. I have but one life, and that would be worth nothing to me if not offered to my country."

Noble boy! How many more like him have fallen willing sacrifices!

The next day I carried a basket of apples, oranges, pies, tea, ect., to the hospital. As I went in, several of the men lifted their heads and nodded pleasantly.

"I am glad you have come back," said one and another thought "it looked so home-like to see a woman among them."

My "admirer" with the black eyes clasped my hand when I offered him an orange, and kissed it gratefully.

"If I live," he said, I'll always pray God to bless you. If I die, I'll watch over you from heaven."

Poor fellow! I wonder if from that heaven to which his spirit has flown he is watching over me to-night, as I pen these lines.

Frankie's blue eyes greeted me with a glad smile before I was near enough to speak to him. When I bent over and asked how he felt, he answered me cheerfully, saying he hoped to be able soon to return to his regiment.

I bathed his face, gave him a cup of tea, with some toast, and left him sleeping sweetly.

Those who have never visited the hospitals, cannot conceive of the wretched condition in which the men are brought into them. That day twenty-eight were brought from Dotelson and Savannah, and such objects I never saw. Their faces and hands were stiff with coal dust, and burning with fever, their hair long and matted—beard uncut, and full of dirt.

It was a serious task to attempt redering them comfortable, but I did not shrink from it. On the contrary, I felt grieved at my inability to serve more than one at a time. O! how I longed for the power then to stir some of my own sex, who in that town, passed the days in the thoughtless idleness, to action, if only for an hour, to assist in bringing those poor sufferers to a comfortable condition!

From morning till noon I toiled faithfully, glad from my heart, and thankful for the impulse that had sent me there. I went home and dined, and feeling tired, wanted to lie down and rest. But then I remembered I had promised to bring some fruit to the boys in the afternoon, and I could not feel satisfied till I had done so, knowing that I could rest any time, while they lay tossing and restless with fever and pain, perhaps longing for a cooling draught they could not get.

It was four o'clock before I got away again, and I was really tired. So days merged into weeks, and it became a regular routine. From eight till ten or eleven, and from half-past one till four, I took pleasure among them, even while pain stirred my heart to see their sufferings. One by one I could see them fading. No care or skill could save them. They had offered their lives to our country, and she accepted the sacrifice.

Poor little Frank B., daily grew weaker. Nothing could tempt him to eat, and his cough grew worse, while his face became thin and pale. He never lost his joyous spirit, but always seemed hopeful, even when too ill to rise from his berth.

One afternoon I was started on entering by the most piteous cries and found that they came from my little favorite, generally so brave and patient.

"Why Frankie what is the matter?" I asked bending over him.

"O,you have come! I did wish for you so much. O! I shall die, and I wanted somebody by who seemed to care for me,a little. You do like me, don't you, dear Mrs. S., You have been so kind to me. O, this pain. I can't stand it long!"

His hands grasped mine nervously, and every fibre of his frame quivered with pain. I saw that the dews of death were standing thickly already, on the broad beautiful forehead, over which the fair hair clustered so prettily, and my eyes filled with tears of sorrow deeper than words can express. I stooped to kiss him,and a glad cry escaped the poor blue lips of the dying boy.

"O, kiss me again, won't you? That is like my sister. Do kiss me once more? I feel better. O, I wouldn't mind to die, if my sisters were here to tell me they loved me. You do love me a little don't you. "Yes, a great deal Frankie; as much as if I were your sister. Don't you think so? I'm sure you are a good boy, and I'm sorry to see you suffer so.

He drew me down towards him, and pressed his face close to my arms. I could endure no more. The poor boy's appeal for tenderness and sympathy in his dying hour, far from home, breathing out his young life amid strangers unnerved me. I drew that young bright head on my bosom, and my tears fell fast upon its sunny curls.

Did the gentle sisters he loved have one thought of the scene that was transpiring that night, while purchance they sat and talked of him, their only and petted brother, in their far off home in Nebraska?

"You will stay with me to night,won't you be pleased again. "O, you won't leave me to die alone?"

"No, Frankie, I'll stay with you."

He was comforted, and became more quiet as I clasped his hands and tried to soothe him. Gradually a purple hue overspread his face. Now the lips became whiter, and his large, clear eyes grew restless. When he could no longer speak, those eyes pleaded for some token of endearment, and each time I impressed a kiss upon his forehead, a look of deep and earnest gratitude softened the suffering expression of his face.

About 9 o'clock he breathed his last, and now every time I look down at my hand, and see the little ring of mine he wore before he died I seem to see the parting look of his great sad eyes ere they fixed in death. How sad the task to brush back the damp locks from the cold brow, and compose the blue limbs in their last repose! That night I wept and prayed for the sisters as I had never wept and prayed for myself, for he was all they had.

A few days after this, another of my patients, one who was fast recovering, I thought, had a relapse, and was again confined to his berth. There had been a storm that dashed in the windows, and he got wet.

On Friday, he asked me to write to his brother, sister, and his betrothed. I did so, while he dictated. He appeared to be well educated, and had a rich vein of mirth and sentiment pervading his nature. This I soon discovered in his dictations, and was much interested. He showed me the miniatures of his friends, and talked of soon returning home; bade me say to his sister he was coming soon; if he couldn't get a furlough he would make one, &c.

Saturday found me almost blind from inflamation of the eyes, and I did not get to the hospital again till Monday morning. Sad faces greeted me. Matron, physicians and nurses wore serious faces, and the steward quietly placed letters, miniatures, and descriptive roll in my hands. I looked toward Fred's place—it was vacant!

Oh! that was a sad task that I had then to perform! To sit down three days after writing those pleasant, hopeful, letters, and tell them that the heart which dictated them was still for ever! I wrote to the lady he would have made his wife, and returned her letters. I had rather performed any other task on earth. The poor old father and mother, whose bent forms were fast tottering to the grave, the bright, sweet-faced sister, the loving brother—to all these I must convey tidings that would sting the hardest heart. Yet, such are the fortunes of war.

Discovery of Gold in the County of Victoria.

To the Editor of the Post.

DEAR SIR.—Gold has been found in Trout Creek, in the North part of the County of Victoria. Trout Creek is a tributary of Black river, which empties itself into Georgian Bay. Its source is in the high land that divides the waters of the Ottawa from Georgian Bay. The stream runs in a south-westerly direction, and crosses the Victoria Colonization Road about the north boundary of the township of Dotten. The precious metal was discovered by one of the workmen on the Road, while digging the foundation of an abutment for a bridge. By throwing the sand into the stream, as the sand was getting washed away, he percieved bright yellow particles at the bottom. His curiosity being excited, he informed the contractor of the glittering particles in the sand. Some was washed and tested, and found to be of a pure quality as Californian gold. By the first opportunity we will send a specemin to Lindsay, for exhibition. As to what quantity of this sand contains gold, or how far it extends, we have not yet ascertained.

MURDER IN NEW YORK.

(From the Commercial Advertiser, 17*th.*)

Yesterday afternoon, about half past three Mary Stewart, claiming to be the wife of Peter G. Real, deliberately shot him at his place of business, No. 156 Broadway.

Four years since, it appears by the statements made yesterday, he was married to her but soon abandoned her, and from that time he kept company with a number of other women. His wife applied to him to pay her board, but he declined to aid her in any way whatever.

Yesterday morning she called at No. 256 Broadway to see him, but was informed that Mr. Real had gone to Jersey City. With this information she went to Courtland street ferry and waited for two hours. At the expiration of that time he came off the boat in company with a respectable looking woman. Mrs. Real stepped up to his companion and informed her that she was walking with her husband. The woman on hearing this left Mr. Real immediately. At this point a somewhat sharp and angry conversation took place between Mr. Real and his wife, after which they separated, he going to his place of business, and she to a gunsmith's to procure a revolver.

Mrs. Real called at No. 256 Broadway, at about a quarter past three o'clock, and found him in his office on the third floor of the building. They had a short conversation which culminated in a quarrel, when they walked out to the landing at the head of the stairs. There she pulled a revolver from her pocket, and a struggle ensued, in the course of which she succeeded in getting him down on his knees, when she fired in a downward direction, shooting him in the left breast. He was conducted to a couch, on which he died almost instantly. Mrs. Real was arrested at once, and taken to the Fifth Precinct station house.

Mrs. Real is a native of England about twenty-four years of age, and is said to be very respectably connected, although she refuses to give any clue to the whereabouts of her friends. She is a fair good-looking woman, and possessed of considerable intelligence.

FELLOW CHRISTIAN,—

You and I belong to some one body or other of the Christian Church. I trust we became connected therewith fully impressed with important duties and obligations which such a step always imposes on those taking it. We profess to wish to increase virtue and morality, to decrease vice and immorality, thereby advancing the kingdom of our Redeemer, and staying the further progress of the "Angel of Darkness" in the world. The professed object is a good, a noble one It is what the pure-hearted Christian should ever strive to do; it is carrying out the will and wish of his Divine master. But let us stop a moment and think. Let us ask ourselves the question are we doing what we can to spread abroad the blessings of heavenly light? Are we, in a word, to the extent of our ability, pushing forward the gospel Chariot? I am afraid not. It is true you may differ from me in this. You may recoil with indignation from any accusation that you fail to discharge your duty; that you are wanting in any respect to the Church. You may say, I attend my church regularly, I am always found in the class-room, at the prayer, and at the Bible meeting. I give liberally of my substance to sustain the church, both at home and in its Missionary Enterprise. I am always willing to do the part allotted me faithfully and to the best of my feeble power. Friend, grant all this; in this indeed you are to be commended, alike for your example and zeal. But are there not many who do likewise, and who, Pharisee-like, are too apt to draw comfort and consolation from their "good works." Is there no danger of this? I think there is. You may do all what you say you do without any material interference with your comfort and your circumstances. On the contrary, you may be so mentally constituted that you derive the greatest satisfaction and gratification from the performance of your religious and other duties; and for this you should be thankful to the giver of every good and perfect gift. But is there no danger that under the present peculiarly happy circumstances in which you are situated, your acts degenerate into a mere routine of formalities—the shell without the kernel? I think there is. It is active duty, the going about doing good to others, visiting the sick, breathing the balm of consolation in the ear of the oppressed, rescuing the wayward, the erring, the down-fallen, and the world-smitten, and restoring them to Happiness, to themselves and their sorrowing friend, this, it seems to me, is imitating, in some feeble degree, the life and conduct of our Saviour—is the true way to keep alive and burning the flame of christian fire, and to exhibit to the world the bent, the power, the strength, and the love of the Christians faith. One christian act will go further to convince and convict the infidel, the scoffer, than a thousand christian professions—will do more good than a hundred commonplace sermons. You agree with me in this perhaps. But what can I do, you ask, that I don't do, to show my attachment to my Saviour, that my professions are something more than mere expressions of the lips; that they only lack the opportunity to become living embodiments. That is the ring of the true metal, no tinkling of hollow sounding brass is that. You have an opportunity. Our churches are not so crowded as they ought to be. Neither are our class room or prayer meetings. Not unfrequently a beggarly account of empty benches meets the gaze. Not one-half of the people in our Town go to church, with all the churches, ministers, and good men we have in our midst. Something must be wrong, something is wrong. The great foe that is counteracting the good that might be done is Intemperance. It is the cause of the opposition to the church; it is the cause why so many on Sunday don't go to church, but do go to grog shops, licensed and unlicensed, which, in spite of the law and under the very noses of our legal authorities are open and ready to receive all those who may wish to enter. Christian, this is a fact. Are we doing our duty to allow it? Are ministers doing their duty never to denounce it? Are not we all, by shutting our eyes, shirking a duty which we are either afraid or unwilling to discharge, and the neglect of which is a crying shame and stigma upon profession and characters. I think so; what think you? Empty declamation about evils and vices in general may do good sometimes, but pointed, home-thrust denunciation of particular evils especially when these are in our midst, would, it appears to me, do more good. So long as denunciations are general they feeble, they are too apt to be like a firearm discharged without aim. They may hit and they may not. When it is particular this is not the case; it strikes home. This is the way that christians should deal with the present terrible drinking usages which are now sending so many downward to ruin. Christian, these are the great drawbacks to christian enterprise What is your duty then? Surely to seek to abolish these usages, to do away with them. Are you trying do so? You imagine you are; how? By joining the church. So far well, but something else must be done. Men who are besotted wit drink, and steeped in crime must be made sober for the church; hence the importance of temperance organizations. Experience has proved their efficacy and usefulness, when properly worked and sustained. Do you belong to one? If not I boldly affirm that in view of the light you enjoy you come short of your duty, because you without reason or good cause—fail to employ one of the most powerful means and agencies instrumental to promoting the onward progress of Christ's kingdom. Banish intemperance, banish the drinking usages from our midst, and the mighty change would come over society, in all its moral, social, and religious features! Let no drinking or tippling elders or deacons, or class leaders, or prominent christians be able longer to be pointed to by the young as examples, as their reasons and grounds for commencing and indulging in practices which, if not checked, nine cases out of ten are most likely to bring ruin upon themselves and their families, and to cause their gray hairs to go down with sorrow and shame to the grave, through the folly and wickedness of those dear to them—but whom they have made no effort to save—but alas! alas! have assisted to destroy. I will refer to the subject.

Drawing it Strong.

The following from the Richmond Enquirer is a specimen of the mild representations drawn from imagination by the rebel editors for the entertainment of their readers:

"We have been shown a letter from an estimable Southern lady within the federal lines which states that one of the Northern papers publishes a prayer as offered in a New England Church, beseeching for "famine in the South and the perpetual barrenness of every Southern woman's womb!"

Was the loathstone depravity of Yankee character or the fiendish malignity of the Yankee race toward us ever before exhibited in such a fitting incident? It excels in infamy, if such a thing be possible, the brutal and diabolical order of the miscreant Butler recently issued at New Orleans.

Such is the feeling of this abominable race of people toward us who are now seeking to whip us back into an intolerable social and political affiliation with them. Better far let the smoking ruins of once prosperous cities and a country made desolate and barren by our own hands attest, if necessary, the indomitable resoluteness of our determination to be free."

Execution of Wm. H. Hawkins.

(From the New York World, June 28.)

Yesterday afternoon Wm. H. Hawkins was hung at the Tombs for the murder of Captain Adams, of the ship Lammergier, on the 28th of September last. The evidence given on his trial showed that while on the passage from London to Callao, Captain Adams had some difficulty with Hawkins, who was steward, and remarked that he would run the blockade at New Orleans and sell the negro. He was a very intelligent man for a negro, could read and write quite well, and conversed on very many subjects in the most intelligent manner. In fact, he appeared to be a well informed man. Shortly before his execution he wrote the following statement regarding himself:—

I was born in South Kingston, R. I., in 1828; I left my mother at the age of six years, and spent thirteen and a half years at farming. In this time I spent eleven and a half years with one man. I then commenced going to sea, and cooking part of the time in hotels, cook-shops, and steamboats. During this time I have been in nearly every part of the American coast, and in a number of foreign ports, and in vessels from seventy-six tons up to two thousand tons. I have no occasion to speak of my fare during this time, but I may say that I have had better than some and worse than others, but I shared an average with laboring men. I could say a word in behalf of the seamen. It is too bad, however, that I must speak principally of American ships. It is a positive fact that many captains are very tyrannous with their men. They commence their ill-treatment as soon as they leave our ports, and treat them so that they are obliged to leave in foreign ports for fear of their lives, and many are killed and love into the sea. If men, in many cases, make complaints to the consul or a foreign port, the captain bribes the consul, and he puts the men on board the ship again, and if men, in many cases, make a demand for recompense, the captain has the preference on the ground that the sailor is nothing more or less than a dog, and the officers make their boast of bribing the lawyer to keep the man waiting till the ship sails, as the man is obliged to go himself. It would be well to look into this important matter. I speak of this, for people living on shore don't see the awful treatment. But I have met with good treatment until the last ship in which I sailed. The Captain, Adams, has the name of being very gentlemanly when on shore. Captain Adams sailed from the port of New York for Callao in 1860, with a cook and steward, shipped from the keeper of the "Colored Sailor's Home," and he killed the cook and hove him overboard at sea, and killed one of the men in Callao on the same voyage. The ill-treatment of this captain has been the means of bringing me in this condition, and for rebuking which I am now condemned to die. (Signed) H. M. Hawkins.

THE WAR NEWS.

There has been some fearful fighting for the last ten days in the vicinity of Richmond. From the conflicting telegraphic statements it is almost impossible to arrive at a correct state of the parties engaged. Two points, however, are established beyond dispute, that there have been a series of bloody struggles, both sides fighting desperately and heroically, and an immense number on each side killed, wounded, and taken prisoners. The Southern papers, it is said, acknowledge a loss of 30,000 men, yet claiming the victory, whilst an officer of the Potomac army, who has good opportunities of knowing, states the Rebels loss at 75,000. All agree that the battle of the 1st of the present month was the most bloody of the entire war. The Federal loss has been very heavy also. Three Colonels and two Lieut.-Colonels are reported killed at one engagement. One brigade went into the field 11,000 strong, and left it with less than 5,000. There is no denying the fact that both sides suffer fearfully in this fratricidal internecine struggle. Columns could be filled with details, but we shudder at the rehearsal of such immolations to Moloch for such objects. On the one side for the entirety of the Union, on the other to break off and establish and perpetuate a nation, whose corner stone is declared to be human slavery. Treasure and blood are freely sacrificed on both sides to accomplish their ends, and at present, the prospect of an early termination of the war is further off than ever.

By the late European arrivals we learn that mediation and intervention by France and England were more freely spoken of by the English press than ever. When the news of the late battles reach Europe, we shall doubtless find that a general opinion will prevail that the time has arrived, when interference is required, if ever it is to be. The carnage is fearful, and history may be searched in vain for a parallel, where such a lengthened internal struggle with such a fearful sacrifice of life has been made. When brothers do quarrel their hate is dreadful, and their wrath is cruel. There is a painful realisation of this in the civil war now waging among our neighbors, and time will scarcely suffice to eliminate these. The deadly hate is mutual and relentless.

THE CONGER MANIFESTO.

In the last Review Mr. Conger has seen fit to come before the public in an article purporting to be a letter directed to the Chairman of his Committee, but which is rather intended to give the Electors of the County of Peterborough "a bit of his mind" on the cause of his unsuccessful attempts to unseat Colonel Haultain, and the situation in which he holds the present "corrupt and unprincipled men" who now lord over us. The document itself is laboured in style, pedantic and imbecile, unworthy of a man seeking to represent a constituency, and should not have been noticed by us, but for the offensive allusion towards our worthy member and the party which supports him.

Mr. Conger wishes it to be known throughout the County, that the members of his Committee who "so nobly came forward in the assertion of a great constitutional right" are relieved from any liability they were under for the costs of the protest, as those have been settled by himself. Now the members of his Committee who were liable, amount, if we mistake not, to six, we told, who could easily have been notified without the parade of a letter in the newspaper. This, however would not have answered his purpose so well—his object being to let it be known that his "opponent" retains his seat in consequence "of a fortunate turn of the wheel in the great lottery of Canadian politics"; as if he would say, had the Cartier-McDonald administration retained their power and place, Colone Haultain would have lost his seat." Now, we have told Mr. Conger often that there was no feasible chance of his contesting the election successfully—the highest legal authority in the Province being against his views of the case—and we should have had no fear if the former administration had retained their places of the validity of the Colonel's return. We have yet to learn the "fact" that the return of the present member was obtained by means anything but creditable to the parties concerned. If Mr. Conger means by such a charge to impeach the electors who gave Col. Haultain their votes—and such is the legitimate construction of the sentence—we say that he is impertinent. If he means differently he should have stated it, and not wantonly insult a majority of the constituency as he has done. If Mr. Conger and some of his friends had had their way in using the Rolls of 1861 at the election, he might have been elected, but no surely would the election have been set aside, for the simple reason that it would have been illegal.

His conduct in pursuing a contest with such odds against him, stamps him as a person that would do almost anything, however impracticable, to accomplish an end. There is no doubt he calculated largely upon the revolution of the "wheel in the great lottery," with John A. as manager in chief, still, he could not have shut his eyes to the statements continually meeting him in the Leader, that Voter's Lists not ratified before the issuing of a writ for holding an election, ought not to be used, and if he lost the election because these were not used, he must now, at least, be satisfied that he cannot help himself.

His fling at the "Grits" and "purists" will be duly appreciated in the proper quarter. Mr. Conger has parted with his old Reform principles, and Reformers have in consequence parted from him.

One good thing will be gained if the present ministry remain in power: Mr. Conger and the Opposition will be become sound on the Representation and School questions. If the Ministry remain unmoved by such heavy attacks as Mr. Conger has levelled against them, we may find him yet joining with George Brown in denunciation of the "purists who have outraged the public feeling of the country "with the gross immorality of this gigantic and expensive swindle."(?) We do hope that the "moral of this great political lesson" may not be lost upon our friend and his conservative allies—making them more consistent and principled in future—and also teach the former the folly of being so positive of accomplishing ends, without corresponding grounds of success. One would have supposed he had lived long enough to know that "The best laid plans of men and mice Gang oft agee."

The School of Experience is said to be a dear one as well as a good one, but some will learn in no other; and often when lessons are learned it is too late to benefit by them.

The Manufacture of Liquor.

The Three Rivers Inquirer invites the attention of the press and the public to the prevalent custom of using vitrol and other poisonous drugs and chemicals in the manufacture of liquor, with the view of securing legislative interference.

The above reminds us of two or three cases of an extraordinary character which have occurred recently in this Town.

A short time ago, a young man living in Monaghan was about starting on a farm, and in purchasing some stock was induced to drink something at a tavern. He was known to be a sober, well behaved person. Shortly after he left Town, apparently to go home, but on the way he called at the Rev. Mr. Gilmours, and stated that he had been in Town and drank something, and had been poisoned, and he had come there to die; said he knew he was going to die, and became so incoherent that it was supposed that he was drunk. He was put to bed, but when he awoke he appeared as rambling as ever, when it was thought he must be insane. Word was sent to his friends who came in for him with a team, but he resolutely refused to leave Mr. Gilmour's stating that he had came there to die, that he had been poisoned, &c. By the assistance of three or four men he was finally got into the wagon, but he was now a raving maniac. He was attended to by his friends, but, in a few days, died mad, reiterating to the last that he had been poisoned in Peterboro.

Another case was that of two respectable mechanics who had been taking a glass together, when they suddenly became intoxicated and committed outrages they were never known to do before. They stoutly maintained next morning that the liquor they had drunk the night before had been drugged.

The last case was that of a farmer coming into Town who had taken one glass only, which he got in a tavern near the Town. When he reached the Market place he was observed to reel as if he were drunk. A person who observed him went to his assistance, and by the aid of some warm tea, he soon rallied.

We know that a general impression is abroad that spirituous and fermented liquors are not only manufactured by using noxious and poisonous substances, but that after they are manufactured, they are drugged by the venders; the cases we have stated above strengthens this impression, and these mischevious and wicked practises call loudly for public interference.

A baker that would use poisonous substances in his bread would bring the whole town down upon him, and pray, why should a dealer in intoxicating drinks escape.—Will the friends of temperance take up the matter, and ferret out the nuisance and show it up.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, July 7th, 1862.

The Council met.

Present,—His Worship the Mayor, Messrs. Toole, Lawson, Fry, Dickson, Ryan, Hughes, Chamberlen, Reid, and Stevenson.

Communications from the Secretary of the Board of School Trustees, and the Commissioners of the Town Trust, stating the sums required for each, were read and referred to the Committee on Finance and Assessment. The Trustees require $170 and the Commissions $5,706.

A petition from Thomas Collins praying for a reduction in the price of his shop license, was referred to the Committee on Petitions.

Mr. Hughes introduced a By-law amending By-law No. 2, imposing a fine upon swine running at large in the Town.

Moved by Mr. Hughes, seconded by Mr. Ryan,—That an order do issue on the Treasurer of this Council for the sum of $30, an account of salary of the persons employed as night watch.

Moved by Mr. Lawson, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That the night watch be discharged from wther service.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Chamberlen,—That this Council look upon it as an illegal act of any one member of the Streets and Bridge Committee to order either lumber, nails, or any other material required for side walks, bridges, or any other work relating to the said Committee, without being authorised by a majority of the Committee to do so.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned to next Monday night at 7½ o'clock.

HOW PUBLIC MONEY IS SQUANDERED.

The Parliamentary Committee on Public Accounts last Session brought to light some of the most rascally impositions carried on by heartless contractors that we have ever heard of, and showing how careless many heads of the public departments appear of the most glaring robberies on the public funds. The Blue Book which contains the Committee's Report furnishes some striking instances of blood-sucking, a few of which we shall produce. In the case of the notorious Foote it would seem that the Ex-Commissioner of Crown Lands was especially anxious that he should have a large share of plunder before he left office, as supplies of stationery were furnished for the Bureau of Agriculture two years in advance and at prices ranging from three to six times in advance of those of the trade! Whether there was any private understanding between the contractor and the Commissioner as to how the spoils were to be divided, we know not; one thing is certain, the latter sanctioned one order for $6,713, and recommended its payment.

The members of the last Government may indeed have gone out with clean hands themselves, but they seemed very anxious that their friends and supporters should have theirs well greased. No much matter to the people whether Ministers or their supporters get rich, if they have to pay for it. It is no wonder, when revelations such as those of Foote's stationery bills are made known, the country should condemn the connivers thereat, no wonder that they went to the wall without regret. Mr. Foote is proprietor of the Quebec Morning Chronicle, a paper which strongly supported the last administration; he commenced supplying the public departments with paper in November, 1860.

A Mr. Thos. Rose is accountant and paymaster of contingencies, and in his examination before the Committee he says:—"My duty is to pay the accounts when they have been certified to me for payment by the head, or deputy head of the different departments." In obedience to an order he had before the Committee the following amounts of stationery, furnished by S. B. Foote to the several departments during 1860, '61, and '62, viz: In 1860, $3,533 7c; in 1861, $15,959 63c; and in 1862, $12,014 90c.

If the late Ministry remained in power three years more Mr. Foote's bill at the above ratio would have reached a fearful amount. We shall see directly how much of this money this Jew must have put in his pocket as gain. Mr. E. Campbell assisting Secretary to the Revenue of Agriculture is asked by Chairman, Ques. Is this document, marked A, a requisition for the goods on account, or is it an account furnished for the same?

To be taken by the Bureau and paid for.
P. M. VANKOUGHNET.

30th October, 1861.

Bureau of Agriculture and Statistics,
29th October, 1861.

I think that the three Branches, under the superintendence of this Department, will require this amount of Stationery for the two years ensuing.

E. CAMPBELL,
Acting Secretary.

Ans. I consider it an authority to Mr. Foote to furnish a large amount of Stationery, without which I would not have received it.

[By Mr. McDougall.

Ques. 37. At whose instance did you certify that the Stationery ordered by Mr. Vankoughnet on the 30th October, 1861, would be sufficient for the Department for two years? Ans. Mr. Foote brought the account to me to have it certified. It was then certified by Mr. Vankoughnet. I was startled at the amount of the order, and I made a memorandum that I thought it would extend over two years.

Ques. 38. Did Mr. Foote assign any reason, and what, for asking you to certify that the quantity would last for two years? Ans. I do not recollect that any conversation took place on the occasion.

Ques. 39. Then are the Committee to understand that you made the memorandum that the supply would be sufficient for two years of your own motion?—Ans. I believe so. I did it in justification of a supply that was so unusually large.

Ques. 40. For whose justification did you make it?—Ans. On my own for receiving so large an amount.

[By Col. Haultain.]

Ques. 41. Had Mr. Vankoughnet consulted with you as to the requirements of the Bureau before he ordered the large amount of stationery included in the account referred to?—Ans. No. I had no conversation with him on the subject.

[By Mr. McDougall.]

Ques. 42. It appears then that you considered that Mr. Vankoughnet's order deprived you of any discretion as to quantity?—Ans Quite so.

[By Col. Haultain.]

Ques. 43. Was Mr. Rose at the head of the Bureau when Mr. Vankoughnet ordered the stationery included in that account?—Ans. I believe he was but Mr. Vankoughnet was acting minister at the time. Mr. Rose was very rarely seen at the office.

Ques. 44. Can you inform the Committee why the account before you, which was incurred by Mr. Vankoughnet's order in October, 1861, was not included in the contingent accounts of the Department for the past year?—Ans. Indeed I cannot.

[By Mr. McDougall.]

Ques. 45. Is it your duty to check or audit accounts sent into your department, and if not, whose?—Ans. It is my duty, but only to check as to quantity and quality. If the price was very exorbitant, I could call attention to it, but such a case never did occur.

[By Mr. Dunsford.]

Ques. 46. Did you notice anything extraordinary in the prices in the bill of Mr. Foote's?—Ans. No, there were no prices stated when I signed the memorandum.

[By Mr. McDougall.]

Ques. 47. Look at Mr. Foote's account marked A. Is the memorandum at the bottom made and signed by you?—Ans. Yes, it is my writing.

Ques. 48. Then are the Committee to understand that the figures showing the prices of the various articles have been written in since you saw and signed it?—Ans. Yes, I believe so.

Ques. 49. Then you cannot say who checked the prices or whether they were ever checked in your Department.—Ans. No, I cannot say.

[By Col. Haultain.]

Ques. 50. You will see by the paper before you that the whole amount of $6,313.00 has been paid to Mr. Foote. Have you given any certificate that the articles have been received by the Bureau?—Ans. None.

And then he withdrew.

Mr. Henry Hartney, Deputy Chief Office Clerk, by which Department the stationery for the Legislative Assembly is procured, appeared before the Committee and made the following comparative statement between the prices charged by Mr. S. B. Foote for articles of stationery and printed forms supplied to the Crown Lands Department, as per samples furnished to the Committee, and the cost of similar articles of stationery when purchased by this Department, and of the printed forms, if supplied by the Printer to the Legislative Assembly.

A communication from a "Visitor to the Camp Meeting" has been received, but the writer has not complied with our rules in not giving his name, consequently it is inadmissable.

DROWNED.—On Saturday, the 28th June, a boat, containing a fishing party of seven persons, from Millbrook, capsized in the Otonabee River, and one of them, Wm. Atkins, a brother of Mr. Henry Atkins miller, of Millbrook, was drowned. He leaves a wife and one child to mourn his loss.

The Port Hope Messenger says, that on Friday afternoon last, Mr. Hagerman's bakery was destroyed by fire. The building was partially insured. Two small buildings, one on each side of the one that was burned, were considerably damaged in the endeavor to save them.

CARIBOO AGENCY.—Mr. Franklin Allen, who for several years past has been attached to the New York Agency, has been sent to Toronto, and authorised to act as Agent for the respective Companies forming the through lines between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts, and is prepared to furnish passengers Tickets through from New York to California and British Columbia. See another column for advertisement.

—The Hon. Sidney Smith has returned from his Parliamentary duties, and resumed the practice of his profession in Peterborough. After a public career of many years, in which he has done good service to his country and established a reputation as one of the best administrative officers that ever held a department in the Government, he finds himself now forced to begin the battle anew. With his abilities and well established reputation as a lawyer, however, he is certain soon to find himself again in enjoyment of a large practice. His office is in Hopkins' Building, opposite Nicholls & Hall's.—Review, 20 Inst.

—It is reported that the Hon. Sidney Smith will shortly resume the practice of his profession in Cobourg.—Sun, July 1.

THE UPPER HOUSE ELECTIONS.—There are six divisions in each Province that will have elections the coming autumn. Those of Upper Canada are Malahide, Thames, Home, Midland, Quinte, Eastern. These elections will be watched with interest at the present juncture of our political history.

The Great Eastern has arrived at New York, bringing dates from Liverpool of 1st inst. She arrived at Cape Race at 1 p. m., on the 8th.

Lord Palmerston in the House stated that he could see no good at present in offers at meditation, but the Government would, with pleasure, take advantage of any favourable opening that might occur. Markets are firm; gold at New York is worth 12 per cent premium.

Mr. Daly is returned for Perth by a majority of 50. Mr. McFarlane complains in the Globe that intimidation was resorted to in Wallace, and his voters were hindered from recording their votes for him in consequence. The London Prototype says that the Returning Officer was obliged to close the poll in Wallace at ten minutes past four in consequence of disturbances. The defeat of Mr. McFarlane is a severe blow to the Ministry.

THE WEATHER.—Since the 29th ult. we have had no rain save a very light shower yesterday morning. The weather for the last few days has been very hot. On Saturday and Sunday last the heat was very oppressive. On Monday and Tuesday a thick haze, resembling smoke, obscured the sun, and the heat was more bearable. We hear there are great fires to the north of us. The ground is dry and parched and the crops are making but slow progress in consequence. Haying has commenced.

THE HIPPOZOONOMADON.—This is the most attractive exhibition ever established in America. It has won the highest encomiums from the press and the public everywhere. A live Hippopotamus, the only one ever in America, a troup of performing Elephants, a large company of the most distinguished Equestrians and lady riders, clowns, gymnasts, acrobats, singers, dancers, scenic riders, character performers, and all the adjuncts of a first class Arenic establishment. The Hippopotamus alone should be sufficient to draw everybody out on Monday next, the 14th day of July, as will be seen by referring to our advertising columns, they will be in Peterboro' on that day.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Mrs. Kingdon in company with her son and daughter, left town yesterday in a buggy to go to Cavan, where she was to leave her son. On returning with her daughter, when near the Catholic Cemetery, one of the reins became unbuckled from the bits. The little girl on seeing this made an attempt to seize the other rein, and in doing so somehow frightened the horse, which started off at the gallop; the girl was at once thrown out, and soon after Mrs. Kingdon was also thrown out, and the horse went off with the vehicle. Mrs. Kingdon and her daughter are both seriously hurt, but it is thought by the doctor that they will both get over it. The horse was found a short distance from where it started dead, and the buggy smashed to pieces. The buggy was new, cost $100, and the horse was a valuable one Amid the loss, it is satisfactory to know that there is hope of a speedy recovery of mother and daughter.

Communication.

THE LATE ROBBERY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of the 3rd instant I find an editorial in which my name is mentioned in a very unfavorable light, and entirely without any reason therefor. I hope, therefore, you will permit me to give a true account of the affair, as far as known to me, and allow your readers to form their own conclusions. On Friday evening, 20th ult., Glynn's wife came to me and showed me a box containing some papers, which, she said, her husband had found that morning, near a place on which he was building a shanty, and desired me to read the papers for her, as neither she nor her husband could. On examining them I found they were notes drawn in favor of Whyte, Hamilton & Co., and on being questioned what she would do with them, I told her I expected the owner would put up notices of his loss, that perhaps they were up, and then, if so, it would be her duty to deliver them up to the owner, and that if no notice would be given before Monday, she should advertise immediately, and not later than Monday or Tuesday at the farthest. Afterwards fearing that the notes might be lost, or that the real owner might not get them, I went to Glynn and asked him about the notes. He said he still had them, but had heard nothing of the loser. As soon as I saw the notice in the paper I went to Glynn and told him to go and give them up, and he appeared quite willing to do so, and he solicited me to accompany him, as he began to fear he might be accused of some knowledge of the robbery, which I told him I learned had been committed. Believing Glynn innocent I consented and went with him. On the way being advised to bring Whyte or Hamilton to the Mayor's office, Glynn went and brought Whyte, and the box and its then contents were delivered to the parties present. My only object in going with Glynn or to him, was that the owner might be sure to get his property, and that if necessary I might testify, as far as I knew, to Glynn's intentions even before they were advertised. That I ever expected any reward or desired any is entirely false. I acted in the whole matter with the purest motives, my only desire being to restore the property to the real owner, and that I might, if possible, save Glynn from trouble, believing him to be entirely innocent as I really did. I positively declare that Glynn never mentioned to me reward or hopes of reward for himself or any other person, nor did it ever enter my mind. I may have acted unwisely but I acted with the purest motives, and perhaps, on more mature consideration, I would have acted differently, but even as it is I am wholly free before the searcher of all hearts, and hope a discerning public will consider me so too, as the above I think fully shows.

I am sir, yours &c.,
W. DOUGLASS.

NOTES BY THE WAYSIDE.

LETTER No. 3.

The Steamship Great Eastern.

At 6 o'clock, p. m., the Steamer J. S. Broderick, left the wharf of the Liverpool Steamships with passengers for the Great Eastern which was lying at anchor about a mile down the River. The magnitude in size and proportions, far exceeding that of any preconceived ideas of our own. When the steamboat went alongside of her it looked much like an ordinary life-boat would beside a ship of ordinary size. When we undertook to ascend her side by the ingenious gangway, we began to realize the height of her main deck above the water; it is fully 35 or 40 feet. As soon as we gained the top the great length and breadth and breadth of her deck became apparent. Away, (we were almost going to say as far as the eye could reach), well, at any rate, to use familiar comparisons, as far as from the street corner north of the Examiner Office, in Peterboro, to the new Presbyterian Church, is a smoothly-laid plank walk, nearly as broad on each side of her funnels as George Street, and that is her main deck. Large numbers of person—men, women, and children—are promenading the deck, whilst a brass band composed from among the crew, discourse charming music. As night draws on her appearance is improved by the lines of lamps and other lights, which are also hung in the lower decks and in the rigging. A steam crane is at work hoisting the baggage of the passengers from the steamboat below to the deck above, and a number of men are engaged in carrying it into the rooms and berths on the lower decks. The officers are all uniformed, and rank in line as on a man-of-war ship, and the sailors wear a strip, some on their hats and others on their woolen shirts, with the name of the ship stamped in letters thereon. The changes of watch are called by a bugler. When the ship is sailing 8 men stand by the rudder—2 at each branch of the wheel. 8 at chors are on her decks, of immense weight, each link in the chains alone weighing 16 lbs. The anchors are raised by means of a donkey steam engine of 9 horse power. It might be a matter surprise how a ship of this size is commanded, but when the operation is witnessed, it is seen to be quite as easily done, if not more so, than any other ships. A raised gangway stretches from one paddle box to the other, and in the centre of this stands the boatswain; the wheel he turns, however, is not the rudder of the ship but a sort of telegraph to the men at the stern. Two machines with bells attached, one for the paddle engines and the other for the screw, are worked by a lad at each, who by the wires ring the instructions to the engineers at the various departments. So that all the commanding officer has to do is to stand in his place and give orders to the telegraph operators, so to speak, and they are immediately carried out. On her main deck, and hung on davits, are 24 life-boats, one of which, we have seen it stated, is as large as the ship in which Christopher Columbus first crossed the Atlantic ocean. On her deck, too, are four 18-pounder guns. The grand saloon or drawing-room, is a palace which is perhaps not excelled by any on the continent of America. Chandeliers of the most brilliant kind hang to the beautifully gold-cornered roof; frescoes and paintings adorn the walls, and everything is in keeping therewith. This place is reserved for the fortunate few who can afford to pay $130 or the cabouts for the privilege. Every part of the ship is spacious, wide, and well-ventilated; the height between decks is 13 feet, and the windows overhead, and in the sides of the ship, are easily opened and closed. The ship is divided into seven water-tight compartments, and if, as in case of collision or other accident, one or two of these should completely fill up, the vessel could still float. Her third deck is used exclusively for freight, and on this occasion her cargo consists of two millions bushels of wheat and a general freight. The present trip will realize for the company about $100,000. There cannot be less than 800 souls on board, including crew and passengers. The prejudice existing against the "Great Eastern" will soon be overcome. The defects in her construction have been remedied mostly, and we cannot see how a vessel could be constructed with a greater regard to safety; indeed in the stormiest weather experienced, there was not the slightest apprehension of danger felt by either crew or passengers. If this ship continues on an American or Canadian route, travel between the two continents must increase ten-fold, and more than half the hardships and dangers of oceanic journeying will be overcome.

The following figures, compiled from a little pamphlet entitled "How to see the 'Great Eastern,'" give additional particulars of her extraordinary dimensions:—

Tonnage,	22,500	tons.
Nom. power of paddle-engines	1,000	horses.
" " screw propeller,	1,000	"
Number of boilers,	10
" Furnaces,	112
Diameter of screw propeller,	24	feet.
Length of shaft, (screw)	160	"
Diameter of paddle-engine cylinders,	6¼	"
Length of stroke,	14¼	"
" principal saloons	400	"
Accommodation for passengers, 1st class,	800
do. 2nd class,	2,000
do. 3rd class,	1,200
do. Troops (alone)	10,000

On board there is a surgery and dispensary, a sail-maker's shop, a carpenter's shop, and a blacksmith's shop, and in each of the shops men are busily employed every week-day.

The life-boats are capable of containing 1,200 persons, and by means of a patent lowering apparatus may be all launched in four minutes.

In the passage from New York to Liverpool 530,000 revolutions of the screw, and over 400,000 revolutions of the paddle-wheels are made.

TRIP OF THE "GREAT EASTERN."

A copy of a "log" of our own, posted daily, will perhaps give as correct an idea of the present voyage, as any extended account we could write you:

Sunday, June 1.—Rounded the bar at Sandy Hook and discharged pilot at 10.30 a.m. Divine service in grand-saloon, in forenoon, by Rev. Dr. Topp of Toronto, C.W., and in the afternoon, in steerage, by Rev. Mr. Morris, also a minister of the Canada Presbyterian Church. A peculiar feature in the morning service was the leading off of the psalm tune "Old Hundred" on the piano-forte, the Americans on board insisting on the instrument being used. Strong head winds. Last sight of land in the evening.

Monday, 2nd.—Wind favorable. Weather somewhat foggy. Calm towards evening. Moonlight. Band played some airs on upper deck; "Home, sweet home," brought tears to the eyes of many who heard it.

Tuesday, 3rd.—Very foggy. Cold. Steam whistle was kept sounding all day and night. Steering east, by one point south.

Wednesday, 4th.—Breeze from northwest. In the afternoon passed through a fleet of cod-fishing boats. Great surprise at seeing small boats so far at sea, but officers soon explained the apparent mystery. A distance off were to be seen riding large ships to which the boats fled in case of storm or distress.

Thursday, 5th.—Very cold. Stiff breeze from north-west, rocking motion and a gentle dip fore and aft. At noon breeze increased, and ship's motion severely oscillating; some difficulty in keeping "right side up with care." At night the breeze had increased to a gale, this monster among floating craft tossing about like a tiny nautilus on the mighty billows. Sea sickness at every room, and a great demand for seidlitz powders and gruel. Storm continued all night; at about midnight came near running down a brig which crossed our bows, carrying no light.

Friday, 6th.—Weather moderating. Heavy showers, rain and hail. Several ships in sight.

Saturday, 7th.—Very squally. Heavy sea running. Ship laboring heavily. Weather milder, a brilliant rain-bow, stretching from zone to zone, seen at sun-set, the most beautiful sight that can be seen at sea.

Sunday, 8th.—Heavy sea rolling, but day otherwise pleasant; sky clear and atmosphere warm. Rev. Mr. Northrup, the celebrated American naturalist, preached on deck in the morning. Captain Patton, commander of the ship, read over the service of the English Episcopal Church in forenoon, and Rev. Dr. Topp preached in afternoon.

Monday, 9th.—Light breeze from north-west. Pleasant. Everything on board again finding its equilibrium. Much expectation among the passengers to see land.

Tuesday, 10th.—Sighted Cape Clear light at 2 a.m. West coast of Ireland in view all forenoon. Fresh breeze from north-east. Passed several other vessels, and here the difference in motion, &c., was for the first time greatly observable. A barque of about 3,000 tons burthen pitched and rolled in the same sea that scarcely moved the "Great Eastern."

Wednesday, 11th.—Took pilot on board at 5 a.m., and steamed slowly up the Mersey. Several small steamboats, crowded with passengers and with bands on board, met the great ship about 8 o'clock, and accompanied her till she cast anchor in the harbor at 11 o'clock. As she passed the British man-of-war "Majestic" the crew on board that ship manned the yard-arms, and gave three hearty cheers, which were duly acknowledged.

The International Exhibition.

(Editorial Correspond. of the Montreal Gazette.)

LONDON, June 14, 1862.

I wrote to you some time since that the Royal Commissioners, after asking the Canadians to erect a timber trophy, asked to have it taken down. The Canadians resisted, pointing out the injustice, and that has been the end of it. I subjoin an article from the Gardener's Chronicle and Agricultural Gazette upon the subject:—

The visitor to the International Exhibition who shall seek for Timber will see on his right in the distance, as soon as he enters the Eastern Dome, a noble pile reaching nearly to the roof of the transept.—When he approaches the pile, he will find that its base is surrounded by most admirable examples of what Canada can produce: for he is within our great North-East American Colony, the pride of England the envy of the United States. There is not such another display from the New World; and when we consider how near is Canada to our own shores, the rapidity of intercommunication between us, and the enormous wealth which this "trophy" represents, it is difficult to avoid feelings of triumph at such a demonstration of British [illegible] and yet [illegible] those who would pull the trophy down, because, forsooth it is thought to stand in the way of a painted window. We have not, however, sunk to such effeminacy as to prefer tinsel to iron, or to sacrifice the interests of millions to degenerate taste. For ourselves, we own that we admire the work of the Almighty even in the rude form of timber, very much more than any combination of blue, red, and yellow glass in a cathedral window. And so does the intelligent part of the public.

To planters in this country the exhibition of timber in Canada is particularly interesting, because not a tree is represented in it with which we are unfamiliar. We can grow them all on our own estates if we think it worth while; and given time enough we can grow them as well. More especially does it concern those who already possess old specimens of Canadian trees to study here the evidence of what they may come to. Take, for example, Black Walnut, which grows magnificently even near London. There is one specimen (No. 53) which is four feet seven inches in diameter, exclusive of its bark. Such timber can be had in Quebec for £71 per 1,000 feet cube. The specimen to which we now refer must be about 400 years old.

North American Elms thrive perfectly with us. They are, however, we believe, exclusively Ulmus Americana and fulva that have been introduced. We now see that another kind, called the Rock Elm, or Ulmus racemosa, is superior to them and to our own; the wood being finer in the grain and less brittle. Of this there is a specimen, about 2 feet 8 inches in diameter.

Weymouth Pines are among the commonest of our hardy conifers. They yield the "Pine-wood of carpenters. Little, however, do our foresters know of the huge specimens that swarm in Canada. "Average height, 140 to 160 feet; average diameter, 3 to 4 feet; but common near Lake Erie 5 to 6 feet in diameter and 200 feet high; or even in some cases 22 feet in circumference, 220 feet high, bare of branches for 120 feet to the first limb." Such monsters are, however, too big to exhibit, and Canada modestly limits herself to about 2 feet 10 inches, or three feet in diameter.

Then there is Pinus resinosa, or the Red Pine, which dislikes our eastern climate, 3 feet 6 inches in diameter, which in about twice its usual size. But there is no encouragement to plant it here.

The Ash of Canada (Fraxinus Americana), famous for its toughness and strength invaluable for the handles of axes and other implements, is displayed in its small forms as well as in the giant proportions that it assumes when full grown. One round, with 305 circles of annual growth, is 2 feet 10 inches in diameter, an admirable example of timber.

There is Oak, too, (Quercus tinctoria), red (Q. rubra), and white (Q. alba), the latter little inferior to British heart of Oak, and not far off 4 feet in diameter. This tree, as much at home with us as with Canadians, is said to be sometimes 21 feet round! in Western Canada.

Then we have Occidental Plane, or Button Wood, 4 feet through; Tulip tree or White Wood, 3½ feet, and Base Wood or American Lime, more than 2 feet, all excellent for cabinet and joiners' work, though unfit to bear expose to weather.

Add to these the numerous specimens of the fair growth of American Chestnut, Hickories, Maples, Beech, Birch, Hornbeam, Hemlock, Spruce, Tamarac or American Larch, and he would thoroughly understand the nature of Canadian timber has a field of serious study hitherto unexampled: now serious in a mercantile point of view, may be gathered from the fact that "Canada exports annually about 30,000,000 cubic feet of timber in the rough state, and about 400,000,000 feet, board measure, of sawn timber. The revenue derived by the Province, during 1860 for timber cut in the forests, amounting to about $500,000." It appears that of the 60 or 70 varieties of woods in its forests, there are usually only five or six kinds which go to make up those exports so vast in quality; the remaining fifty or sixty timber trees are left to perish or are burned as a nuisance, to get them out of the way. The Commissioners truly observe that by showing, in the markets of the world, that it has these valuable woods, and can furnish them at unprecedentedly low prices, it will secure additional purchasers, a result that the capital display in the Exhibition building is admirably calculated to secure. The Commissioners from the Colony state that in extent, and in the variety and value of its woods, the great forests of deciduous trees of North America surpass all others; the most remarkable of this great mixed forest being that growing in the valley of the St Lawrence. The western coasts in high latitudes, furnish only or chiefly the Coniferæ. High summer temperature and abundant summer rains, are, unquestionably the conditions necessary to produce the deciduous forest trees. Western coasts in high latitudes have the necessary moisture, but not the high summer temperature; Western prairies, east of the Mississippi, and the vast deserts west of it, have summer heat but not moisture; hence the absence of all trees in the one region, and of the deciduous trees in the other. In this country we have probably all the conditions except time, under which the Canadian timber has been produced.

All the hardy trees belonging to the Canadian Exhibition are capitally shown, by the production of

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

WASHINGTON, July 3, p.m.

Latest advices at the war Department from General McClellan are dated 9 o'clock this morning, up to which time there had not been any fighting since Tuesday.

General Dix reports the arrival to-day at Fortress Monroe of 553 rebel prisoners, being part of those taken in the late battle, among whom were several Colonels and Majors. Gen. Dix has ordered all civilians away from Fortress Monroe, and no persons will be permitted to pass to that point, or to the army of the Potomac, except those connected with the military or naval services.

FORT MONROE, July 3.—At ten o'clock a.m., the "Nellie Baker" arrived here from Harrison's Landing, she having left there at five o'clock. She brings 25 prisoners and a few wounded.

The most terrible fighting took place on Tuesday last, and with most brilliant success.

The rebels were defeated in every action, and the rebel prisoners admit the loss of at least 10,000 that day.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Fortress Monroe correspondence of the Tribune, dated 3rd, says that General McClellan's position cannot be flanked by any force, however great. Supplies of all kinds of abundance have arrived, and the men are in the best possible spirits.

The rebel prisoners state their loss at 30,000, while ours will not exceed 10,000. The rebels have over 200,000 troops engaged.

HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC TURKEY ISLAND, July 2.—The following is an account of the battles fought in front of Richmond on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, being the 5th, 6th and 7th days of the engagement. On Sunday morning the corps of General Sumner and General Franklin, were left in the works at Fair Oaks, with instructions to evacuate and protect the baggage and supply trains on their way to James river. They had hardly left their position and were falling back on the railroad and Williamsburg turnpike when the rebels discovered their movement, and immediately started in pursuit with their whole force; so rapidly did the rebels approach that our officers had hardly time to place their men in position before they were upon them. The enemy advanced to the attack about two o'clock, which was promptly met by our men. The battle lasted until dark, during which time the enemy suffered terribly, advancing in solid mass to within a short distance of our artillery. The effect of our guns upon their ranks was fearful killing and wounding them by hundreds. At dark the enemy was repulsed and forced to abandon their position—this battle took place about one-and-a-half miles above Savage's Station. Whilst the battle was in process other important events were transpiring, the Railroad bridge across the Chickahominy was burned and a train of 12 cars under full head of steam was run overboard.

All the Commissary and Quartermaster's stores unable to be removed were committed to the flames, together with a large amount of ordnance stores.

The troops which had fought the battle of Sunday, retreated under cover of the night to White Oak Swamp bridge, a distance of about 12 miles there to await the approach of the enemy.

The disposition of the troops on Monday, the sixth day of battle, was as follows:—General Smith's division supported by Gen. Negly's brigade, occupied the right of the bridge, while Gen. Sumner's and Gen. Franklin's corps occupied the left. Heintzleman's corps with Gen. McClellan's division was out on the road to meet the enemy who was approaching from Richmond.

The enemy came up boldly early in the morning, having been heavily reinforced by the troops who fought the battle on Friday on the opposite side of the Chickahominy.

About three o'clock it became evident that some portion of our lines must give way, as the rebels were constantly throwing fresh troops into action. Our troops in front of the bridge now fell back to within three and a half miles of Turkey Island, where the fight was shortly afterwards renewed and continued with the greatest determination on both sides. During the day all the cattle and the greater portion of transportation had safely crossed Turkey Island Bridge. Some of the rear waggons had to be abandoned and fired to make room for the passage of artillerry.

The fight was renewed early on Tuesday morning by the Rebels, they evidently intending to crush our army; it lasted about three hours, resulting in considerable loss to both sides. The enemy then retired, leaving the field to our troops. The Rebels again advanced about three o'clock, p.m. in considerable numbers, but retired, after being shelled by the gunboats and artillery for about two hours, without coming near enough for musketry to become engaged. The loss of our army during these severe engagements is not known, but 20,000 is considered as near an estimate as can at present be giving in killed, wounded and missing. Many of those at present unaccounted for may have straggled away through the country and may hereafter return. The loss of the enemy in killed must have been very heavy, far exceeding that of our army. We have taken about 700 prisoners, among whom are three Lieutenants and one Major.

The army is now encamped on high rolling ground on the banks of the James River, 15 miles from Richmond.

The transports are already unloading supplies at the wharves.

The Commanding General feels confident of successfully meeting any attack the enemy may make upon him in his present position.

The reinforcements the Rebels received from Beauregard and Jackson gave them a force double that of the army of the Potomac, and many of the prisoners taken during the battles belonged to Beauregard's army.

As fast as the rebel forces were cut to pieces, other fresh troops were immediately marched forward to fill their places. They seemed to disregard the lives of their men and held them under the hottest fire of our artillery.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Despatches have been received from Gen. McClellan, dated as late as 10 o'clock, a. m., 4th. The following is their substance, omitting details not proper for present publication:—

There had been no fighting since Tuesday night, when the rebels were repulsed with great slaughter.

The army moved to the position now occupied because it affords greatly superior advantages for the co-operation of the gunboats, of which seventeen are now in the river, protecting the flank of our army.

Statements of the casualities in the severe battles of the right flank cannot yet be furnished.

Our forces were not beaten in any conflict, nor could they be driven from the field by the uttermost effort of the enemy.

No guns have been lost since the 27th, when McCall's division, at the outset, was overwhelmed and 25 pieces fell into the hands of the enemy.

New York, July 7.

A letter to the Post confirms the report of a skirmish on Thursday and the capture of six guns and some prisoners.

Gen. McClellan had removed his head quarters, and the army had advanced some five miles toward Richmond.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer states that the Richmond papers of the 4th acknowledge the loss of 30,000 men, though they claim the victory.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Press of the same date, reports that McClellan is pushing rapidly forward, driving the enemy at all points. The gunboats accompany his advance, shelling the woods and scattering the enemy, his main force following in support.

Washington, July 7.

The Star says a distinguished officer of the army of the Potomac was at Washington this a. m. on his way to visit his family north of this city. His opportunity for learning the extent of the damage received by the enemy in the recent seven days' battles were, from the nature of his position in service, perhaps better than any other Union officer. He estimates they lost in killed and wounded and otherwise rendered hors de combat, the immense number of 75,000 men, or, in other words, their loss was quite half the whole army and is about Richmond.

They refuse to receive flags of truce from Gen. McClellan, conveying inquiries relative to the state of Union officers and others believed to be wounded and prisoners in their hands, thus evincing a great disinclination to permitting McClellan to obtain any, inkling, however obscure, of their real condition since the termination of the battles.

The President has nominated to the Senate Gens. Heintzelman, Sumner, Keyes, and Fitz John Porter to be Brevet Brigadier Generals in the regular army, and Major Generals of volunteers, for gallant conduct in the field.

The Lynchburg, Va., Republican of the 30th ult., says it was currently reported here on Saturday that Gen. Beauregard had been suspended from his command of the army of the West. This cause is not known. If the report is true it will cause a storm about the head of the President which he will find it difficult to allay. We sincerely trust there is no foundation for the report.

There is nothing new from the army of the Potomac.

We are assured by Gen. McClellan of the excellent spirits of the men. All was quiet up to 8 o'clock a. m. to-day.

TROUBLE AHEAD.—The Charleston Courier says:—We have been reliably informed that men of high official position among us—men of good intentions, but of mistaken and misguided patriotism, are sowing the seeds of discord broadcast in our midst, by preaching a crusade against President Davis, and calling for a general convention of the Confederate States, to depose him and create a military dictator in his place.

ANOTHER AWFUL TRAGEDY.—There was a great deal of excitement on Tuesday morning in consequence of a tragedy having been discovered to have been enacted at No. 189, Blackfriars-road, London, which closely resembles the one which recently took place in Ludgate-street, near St. Paul's. Since Sunday last a person named James John Muckford, a widower, residing at 189 in the above-named road, had been missed from his home, as well as two of his children. Late on Monday night, however, informat on was giving to the police of the mysterious disappearance of the man and his children, and the next morning Inspector Gardener, upon entering the room, found the man sitting in a chair in front of the window, his head reclining, his trousers loose, his body covered with blood, which had flowed from several wounds in his abdomen, which he had evidently inflicted with a large carving knife. The two children, named Emily and Catherine, were found lying in front of the fireplace, also quite dead. Mr. Gardner at once sent for medical assistance, and Mr. Henderson quickly attended, and from the examination made of the contents of a cup and a paper found on the table he had not the least hesitation in saying that the children had died from poison, and the man from the wounds on his person.

HURRAH FOR THE FLAG.

Now all good people both rich and poor,
I'll tell you of a Cheap Cash Store.
You'll know the shop by the British Flag,
So hasten there, and do not lag.

JOHN WATTERSON is the proprietor.
Sells Whiskey, Rum, and very good Beer,
With Wine, Gin, Rum-Shrub, and Pop,
That two or three glasses will make you hop.

There's Brooms, Blacking, and the best of Teas,
Tobacco, and Snuff that will make you sneeze,
With Biscuits and Bread, if you please,
Red Herrings, Boiled Eggs, & the best of Cheese.

You can get Fresh Yeast, Sweets and Toys
That please both the girls and boys,
Besides Maple Sugar, Spices and Coffee,
Mustard and Candles, Salt and Toffee.

You can get at the shop Fish Hooks and Lines,
And good Potatoes of all kinds,
Besides Cigars, and Pictures to suit,
Needles, and Laces to lace the boot.

There's Starch, and Soda, and nice Hand-sleighs
That children can have fun on the cold Winter
Very fine Rings, Combs, and Studs, (days.
Brooches, Thread, Beads, and small Washtubs.

So all good people take my advice,—
If you want to get anything very nice,—
Just call at the shop and try any kind;
You'll be sure to be suited to your mind.

JOHN WATTERSON is a kind-hearted man,
And he'll please you all as well as he can.
Mean people get trust, with a shuffling tale,
If they had their due they'd be put all in gaol.

We'll shout my boys for the Christmas feasts,
And go to J. Watterson's for our Turkeys and
For Chicken and Ducks he can't be beat, (Geese,
I've tasted myself and pronounce them a treat.

He has Clothespins, Soap, and Risley's Seed,
Matches and Pins, so hasten with speed
And try the Onions, Bacon and Blue,
Baskets, Buttons, Hams, and Oatmeal too.

Hurrah for the Flag! may it rule the world,
And as J. Watterson's store be always unfurl'd,
I'll finish my verses, and have only to say,
That I'll do something better some other day

PERFECTION

CHURN!

PATENTED IN APRIL, 1862,

By J. W. Smith,

OF PRESCOTT, C. W.

THIS CHURN is decidedly the most useful that has yet been invented. By it the largest churning can be into butter in ten minutes. The cream is poured into a tin hopper on the top of the churn, and runs through a Sack Breaker, which immediately crushes the butter sacks of the cream By the time the cream runs through the crusher it is perfectly cool, and prepared for making butter immediately. One of these churns may be seen at the

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

and at the

STEWART HOUSE,

PETERBORO.

and we only ask persons to come and examine it. They will at a glance be convinced that it is the quickest, most in or saving, and in every respect the best and cheapest Churn ever offered to the public. One real advantage of this churn is that the cream will yield fire per cent more butter than can be obtained by any other known process. This difference alone will make the price of the churn in a very short time.

The exclusive right to manufacture and sell these churns in the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria has been purchased by the undersigned, and they are now prepared to supply them, made with great care, and warranted perfect in every particular.

Further information regarding these valuable Churns may be had on application to

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"TORONTO May 17th, 1863

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A. B. Sy. thwaite to circulate five thousand copies of the "Toronto Evening Journal" to parties named by us containing our advertisement.

ROBERT WALKER & SONS."

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the 'Toronto Evening Journal' will receive one gratuitous insertion in the Toronto Weekly 'Journal,' a large first class paper established in 1857, and at present circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

The terms for advertising are less than has ever been offered to the public before, viz: three cents per line for the first insertion, and one cent per line for each subsequent insertion. Business and Professional Cards (without changes) will be inserted at one dollar per line by the year, when they contain no more or less

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1863.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States beforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal £454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 861 Policies were issued..... 350,690 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or sold Policies..... 11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATING POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantee..... 27,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES..... 1,866,35 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS..... 313,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE..... 96,786 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 1s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Poetry.

"LIGHT IN DARKNESS."

"I saw the wicked great in power,
Spread like a green bay tree.
He passed, yea, was not here I sought,
But could not catch me."

Mid the trouble'd life's upheaving,
See the length'ning shadows fall,—
On the precious word believing,
Saviour, may we conquer all.

What! though life in all a struggle,
Rapidly the day will close,
Bursting like a floating bubble,
Fading like the summer rose.

What! though faithless friends may fail us,
Darkest malice brood around,
Thus our father seeks to lead us,
Where alone the truth is found.

Wickedness and Vice may borrow
Off outrag'd Religion's garb,
And true hearts grow big with sorrow,
Thus to see her beauty marr'd.

Yet for all let Faith glow brighter,
He will vindicate His own;
See the East is flushing brighter
With the morning from His throne!

Though 'mong Christians, loving-kindness,
Christian charity are rare;
Let us pity human blindness,
Look above and find them there.

Though full many a so-call'd Christian
Speaks of truth, and acts the lie,
Shall we love that truth the less, then?
Rather for it let us die.

Shall some erring fellow-creature,
Yielding to the power of sin,
Falling like the flashing meteor,
Make our love or faith grow dim?

Nay, forbid it! let us rather,
E'en though heaven and earth should fail,
Closer cling to Thee, our Father,
Who wilt make the right prevail.

When life's midnight gloom is deepest,
Brightest stars of promise shine;
Weary soul, 'tis thou that seekest,
Water from the Rock Divine.

Whatsoever cloud may hover,
Darkening o'er our heads the while,
Through the gloom we can discover,
Flashes of a Father's smile.

And when earth's short day is closing,
Calmly may we sink to rest,—
In His tender love reposing,—
Leaning on the Saviour's breast.

Acting ever on His warning,
"Occupy until I come,"
May we hear on life's glad morning,
"Welcome, child of God, well done."

Miscellaneous.

Betty Bliss and the Rebellion.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Independent makes mention of one of the daughters of Gen. Zachary Taylor, as follows:

The Rebel Women of Winchester are pert; in fact, they are without exception the most insolent and unladylike people I have ever met with. As they pass our soldiers it is hard for them to keep their pretty lips from pouting—indeed, their pretty lips have occasionally done something more than pout; doubtless you have heard of it.

The name of Betty Bliss is familiar to the public. With it are connected pleasant memories, one of which is that of the old hero, General Taylor, once the President, not of a divided faction, but of all these glorious United States. Betty Bliss is now Mrs. Dandridge, and resides in Winchester. Her home is neat and unpretending, surrounded by trees and flowers. Mr. Dandridge is—oh! shades of the departed great! a rank Secessionist. She hates the flag under which her noble father stood ready to sacrifice his life. She despises the Union for which he would have shed the most precious blood in his warm heart.—Degenerate daughter of an old patriot! well that the dead cannot speak, else would the ashes of the veteran who loved his native land cry "shame." Sad to say, her brother is in the ranks of the Confederate army, and both glory in their apostasy.

It was in prison that I saw Betty Bliss!

Start not, sirs—I will explain. Not that she was there for treason, though it would not hurt her and a few other disunionists if they had leisure to meditate a while behind the iron bars of Winchester prison on the disgrace they reflect upon themselves and the country they cannot injure as they would. She had come with two other ladies to see some of the Confederate prisoners, soldiers belonging to the Louisiana troops. As they entered the room of the warden—a Union lady whose self-sacrificing labor in our hospitals has endeared her to many hearts, was binding up the head of a poor wounded Rebel boy, who suffered from a saber cut. You have no idea of the hard hearts of these Winchester Secesh—I mean the women.—They would push a wounded soldier from their path—they despise and hate our gallant boys. But here was a Union woman caring for a poor, half-broken headed little enemy.

"Are you his mother, madam?" asked one of the ladies.

"Oh! no—I never saw the child before," said the surgeon's wife—and then the secesh put on her thinking cap and turned away in confusion.

You should have heard the way these women talked to the rebel soldiers—unblushingly advising them to wait till they could be exchanged and then come and fight again. One of the prisoners was a poor consumptive half-clothed boy. The chaplain, who was near, (Union), remarked laughingly, that he was going North to get recruited.

"He had rather go South," said the renegrade daughter of General Taylor—"we don't want anything to do with the North."

"It strikes me," said the chaplain, "that occasionally the Southerners do come North to our watering-places and to our colleges."

The fair lady deigned no reply except to utter the benevolent wish that our troops might be destroyed by the yellow fever if not by powder and lead.

"One would have thought that the daughter of General Taylor would at least respect the banner under which he fought, and the country that gave him the honor of the highest office in its gift," said the chaplain.

"We hope to see the flag of the South waving over the Southern Confederacy," was the insulting reply.

"As it will before long," added another.

"Particularly while Jeff. Davis is gaining so many victories just now," chimed in the women.

Fire flashed from those eyes; scorn curved the lips where only smiles should sit; spite tortured every feature, till, even had it been beautiful, the face would have seemed ugly as a demon.

Poor Betty Bliss! I am sorry for her. She was evidently born to be disappointed, especially if she had put her faith in the Southern Confederacy—for that is among the things not only "mighty uncertain," but decidely impossible. I am sorry for Betty Bliss, on some accounts; she may be a very nice sort of women, (the secession ladies don't even allow that of us Yankees) I dare say she is—and probably one of the F. F. V's (in fact, I never saw a Southerner who wasn't), but she is to all intents and purposes as rabid as if she had the hydrophobia, which she has, of secessionism. I trust one day that, for the sake of her father's honest memory, she may forsake the errors of her ways, and go and sin no more.

EYE-WITNESS.

Effect of Sunlight on Health.

Seclusion from sunshine is one of the misfortunes of our civilized modes of life. The same cause that makes potato vines white and sickly when grown in dark cellars, operates to produce the pale, sickly girls that are reared in our parlors. Expose either to direct rays of the sun, and they begin to show color, health and strength.

When in London, some years ago, I visited an establishment which had acquired a wide reputation for the cure of those diseases in which prostration and nervous derangment were prominent symptoms. I soon found the secret of success in the use made of sunshine. The slate roof had been removed, and a glass one substituted. The upper story was divided into sixteen small rooms, each provided with a lounge, washing aparatus, etc. The patient, on entering each his little apartment, removed all his clothing, and exposed himself to the direct rays of the sun. Lying on the lounge, and turning over, from time to time, each and every part of the body was thus exposed to the life-giving rays of the sun. Several London physicians candidly confessed to me that many cases, which seemed only waiting for the shroud, were galvanized into life and health by this process.

Many years ago a clergyman, who had for many years been a victim to dyspepsia, and who had entirely prayed for death as the only door of escape, came at last to consult me. I advised the disuse of all medicines, the generous use of cracked wheat and good beef, and much exposure to the sun. To secure the last mentioned item, I directed him to build a close fence, covering a space twenty feet square in his garden, and plant the earth within with something to occupy his mind and time. Then, when the weather was warm, shutting himself in, he was to busy himself, quite nude, with the cultivation of his vegetables, from ten to sixty minutes each day, always indulging in a thorough bath and vigorous friction before dressing. He was speedily and radically cured.

I was practising my profession in Buffalo, N. Y., during '48 and '51—those memorable cholera seasons. I saw at least five cases of cholera on the shady side of the street and to see to one on the sunny side. One eminent physician in New Orleans reports, that from his own practice, eight cases of yellow fever on the shady side of the street to one on the sunny side.

Who has not read Florence Nightingale's observations in the Crimea in regard to the typhoid fever, as between the shady and sunny side of the hospitals? In St. Petersburg, the shady side of the military hospitals were so notoriously unfavorable to the sick soldiers, that the Czar decreed them into disuse.

The shade trees about the dwellings have done something to make our wives pale and feeble. Is it not enough that our women should have placed between them and the great fountain of light and life six inches of brick wall, without the addition of twenty feet of green leaves? Trees ought never to stand near enough our houses to cast a shade upon them; and if the blinds were removed, and nothing but a curtain within, with which to temper, on the hottest days, the intensity of the heat, it would add greatly to the tone of our nerves and our general vigor.

The piazzas which project over the lower story always make the infection to the upper story, especially for sleeping purposes. I owed, during my professional career a great many cases of rheumatism, by advising the patients to leave a bedroom shaded by trees or a broad piazza, and sleep in a room and a bed which were constantly dried and purified by the direct rays of the sun.—Lewis' Journal of Physical Culture.

ONE OF SHAKESPEARE'S PALL-BEARERS BURIED IN VIRGINIA.—A Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal writes: "An officer of the Nineteenth, strolling through an old burying ground at Fredericksburg, Va., a few days since, espied a few curious and interesting inscriptions. From them I am permitted to copy the following, which, coupled with recollections of the great 'Bard of Avon,' is of singular interest: "Here lies the body of Edward Hebder, practitioner in Physic and Chirurgery. Born in Bedfordshire, England, in the year of our Lord, 1592. Was contemporary with, and one of the pall-bearers to the body of William Shakspeare. After a brief illness his spirit ascended in the year of our Lord, 1616—aged 76."

An Unseemly Organ.

In a small church at a little village near Brighton, where the congregation could not afford to pay an organist, they recently bought a self-acting organ, a compact instrument, well suited to the purpose, and constructed to play forty different tunes. The sexton had instructions how to set it going, and how to stop it; but unfortunately he forgot the latter part of his business; and after singing the first four verses of a hymn before the sermon, the organ could not be stopped, and it continued playing two verses more; then, just as the clergyman completed the words, "let us pray," the organ clicked, and started a fresh tune. The minister sat it out patiently, and then renewed his introductory words, "let us pray," when click went the organ again, and started off on another tune. The sexton and others continued their exertions to find out the spring, but no man could put a stop to it; so they got four of the stoutest men in the church to shoulder the perverse instrument, and they carried it out down the centre aisle of the church, playing away, into the church-yard, where it continued clicking and playing away until the whole forty tunes were finished.

The Baby at the Bar.

A prisoner, arraigned at the Middlesex (England) Sessions recently, for theft from furnished lodgings, was a young mother, who stood at the bar, and in her arms a smiling infant, perhaps the first child, who beguiled the time of the trial with its playful noise and antics. The case was clear, and the jury had no alternative to the verdict "guilty," but they coupled it with a "recommendation to mercy." The judge received the announcement, but could not see on what grounds the "recommendation" was based. Lodging-house keepers must, he said, be protected from these depredations; and with all due consideration for the opinion of the jury, he must pass sentence for six months' imprisonment, with hard labor. So the matter stood for the time. But presently the jury made a second appeal to the learned judge for mitigation. In the course of the discussion, he very acutely said, "Ah, I see what it is gentlemen; it's the baby!" The fact was undeniable, and at length even his lordship yielded to what, we dare say, was the feeling of the whole court. The poor woman was recalled, and told that her sentence was reduced from six to four months imprisonment. Again she appeared with her arms, and, courtesying her thanks, retired.

ASSAULT ON AN OFFICER FOR REFUSING TO KNEEL.—A correspondent of the Montreal Gazette furnishes the following, respecting an assault on a British officer for refusing to kneel in a Roman Catholic Church:—"Lieut. F. G. Berkely marched the Roman Catholic portion of the detachment of the 47th Regt., stationed at Isle aux Noix, to the church at St. Valentin, on Sunday the 1st of June last, Lieut. Berkely accompanying his men to the church; the officer remaining standing near the church door. Some time after the service had commenced, the beadle, Louis St. Hilaire, came and ordered him to kneel at some particular portion of the service, which he very properly refused to do, as he was not in any way acting irreverently. After service, the beadle, assisted by his son, deliberately made two attempts to take Lieut. Berkely prisoner on the Queen's highway, while in the act of giving the word of command to his men to march. A slight scuffle took place of no great moment. This incorrigible beadle, notwithstanding the Priests entire condemnation of his conduct, went a few days ago before a Magistrate of the name of Herbert, and obtained a warrant for Lieut Berkely's arrest. He was not, however, arrested, but allowed his liberty on his parole that he would appear before the magistrates on Monday the 16th inst., at 11 o'clock, on which day Mr. L. G. Macdonald appeared for the defence, and fyled a plea of "not guilty." The prosecution broke down for want of proof, and a judgment id favor of Lieut. Berkely was consequently recorded. We have reason to believe that the military authorities will not let the case drop.

Sons of Temperance Column.

Testimony of William Howitt.

CAUSE OF VICE AND WEALTH.

The following from the Manchester (England) Alliance News, describes the habits of a distinguished literary veteran, William Howitt, who has retained remarkable health and vigor, both of mind and body:—

I am temperate because I have seen and felt the good policy of it. As a literary man, if I had fallen in with ordinary literary habits, I should not have been sitting here to write about the advantages of temperance. If I had lived as the majority of literary men of this age, as "a man about town;" if I had lived in town, and kept the usual late hours, and passed evening after evening in hot-crowded rooms, breathing the deadly effluvia gas, and air deprived of its ozone; if I had sat over the bottle of late suppers, fool-ishly called dinners; and in short, had "jollified," as my literary contemporaries call it, I should have been gone over thirty years ago.

As it is, I have seen numbers of literary men, much younger than myself, dying off like rotten sheep—some of them in their very early youth, few of them becoming old. They have acquired great reputations; for, if you take notice, they who collect about the press, and jolify with one another, and cry up one another as prodigies, are the men who become most popular; and "verily they have their reward."

They reap much money, and much temporary fame, but at what price do they purchase it? At the cost of bodily as well as mental comfort; at the cost of life itself. For my part, seeing the victims to "fast life" daily falling around me, I have willingly abandoned the temporary advantage of such life, and preferring less popularity, less gains; the enjoyment of a sound body; the blessing of a quiet, domestic life, and a more restricted, but not less enjoyable circle circle of society.

I am now fast approaching my seventieth year. I cannot, indeed, say that I have reached this period, active and vigorous as I am, without the assistance of doctors. I have had the constant attendance of these four famous ones—Temperance, Exercise, Good Air, and Good Hours.

And now a word on work. Those who imagine that I only wag a goose quill mistake a little. In that department, indeed, I have perhaps done as much as any man living. Often, in early years, I labored assiduously sixteen hours a day. I never omit walking three or four miles, or more, in all weather. I work hard in my garden, and could tire down a tolerable man at that sort of thing. During my two years travel in Australia, when about sixty, I walked, often under a burning sun of 120 or 130 degrees at noon, my twenty miles a day for days and weeks together; worked at digging gold in great heat, and against young active men, my twelve hours a day, sometimes standing in a brook. I waded thro' river—for neither man nor nature had made many bridges—and let my clothes dry upon my back; washed my own linen, and made my own bread before I ate it; slept uncommonly under the finest tree; and thro' it all was as hearty as a roach!

And how did I manage all this, not only with ease, but with enjoyment? Simply because I avoided all spirituous liquors as I would avoid the poison of an asp. The horrors which I saw there from the drinking of spirits were enough to make a man of the least sense sober. The extent to which spirit-drinking was carried may be judged of by the unexampled fact that one year during my stay £900,000 were paid for duty on spirits alone, and that for a population of only 250,000 souls! Well, then I think I have a claim to commend to my fellow workmen abstinence from beer, spirits and tobacco, as the great co-partner—as the very right hand of co-operation. They are all poisoners of the blood; they are all burnt-offering unto death; they are all destroyers of the bottom of our pockets; and what is worse, destroyer of the peace of families, the constitution of men, the domestic comfort and virtue of women, the physical stamina and the very life of children. They slay the morals of society, the intellects and the souls of men. As I read daily the police reports and the proceedings of our criminal courts, I trace the wide-spread pestilence of spirits and tobacco, in almost every outrage and misery. All these influence the passions or bedrown the intellect; they originate robbery of masters, and robbery of all kinds. They strip their practicers of health, clothes, morals, and sanity; they convert them into madmen and devils. They fire the brain with frenzy, and arm the hand with bludgeons and knives against their own wives and children. The great bulk of the crimes and calamities flow from the tap and the spigot. By this indulgence—surely the most marvellous of infatuations!—an absurd appetite "set on fire of hell," the people encouraged the Government to plunder them most cruelly, in the shape of excise duties. To furnish the Government with this duty, our working millions abandon every duty of their own. They set up over themselves a most terrible tyranny. They keep open gin-shops at every corner, even on Sabbay evenings, when book-shops and simple refreshment-rooms are not allowed to be open.

—The Federal Government has seized Trinity Church, Washington, for a military hospital, on the ground of the secession character of the clergymen officiating there.

Artemus Ward as an Editor.

In the autumn of 18—, my friend, the editor of the Baldinsville Bugle, was obliged to leave perchance duration & go out dig his tators, and used me to edit for him dorin his absence. Accordingly I grows his Shears and commenced. It didn't take me a grate while to shuk out copy enuff from the exchanges from one hore, and then I'd ride up to the town on a little Jenet, to vent my fancies, which had been accumulating rapidly for my mental efforts. (This is vertor fruitfulness.) So I went over to the Rattle Road office and asked the Superintendunt for a pass.

"You a editor," he insted, cryously enuff the plot of subscorin.

"Yes, Sir," sez I, "don't I look purr enough?"

"Jest about," sed he, "but our Road can't pass you."

"Can't, hay?"

"No, Sir—it can't."

"Because," sez I, looking him full in the face with my fragle eye, "it goes as dearnest alone it can't pass anybody!"

Mollifide I him ther. It's the slowest Rale Road in the West. With a mortified air, he told me to git out of his office! I pitied him and went.

THE PRINCE OF WALES' BRIDE.—Princes' of course, must have wives like other men; and, equally of course, our Prince of Wales must have a wife like other Princes and other men. But unlike most other men, his Royal Highness' choice is somewhat circumscribed. He is not free to choose where he pleases; his predilections must be governed by grave reasons of State. There is one royal house, however, a daughter of which fulfils all the necessary conditions, and, accordingly rumor has fixed upon that family as the one which is to furnish the future Queen Consort of Great Britain and Empress of India, and that one is the Royal family of Denmark—the particular member thereof being the Princess Alexandria, eldest daughter of Christian, Duke of Glucksburg, Prince of Denmark, and Heir Apparent of the Crown, in virtue of the settlement of 1853. The Princess is in her eighteenth year, having been born on the 1st of December, 1844, and is reported to possess an amiable disposition and a cultivated and accomplished mind. She is a member of a somewhat numerous family, having three brothers and two sisters. The Princess' father, the Duke of Glucksburg, was born in 1818, and her mother, who is a princess of the house of Hesse Cassel, in 1817. We trust the union of the Prince of Wales and his future consort will be as happy as that of his own august parents, and that that happiness will be extended for a longer period than it has been her Majesty's lot to enjoy here; in which hope, we are sure, every subject of both kingdoms will heartily join.—Illustrated Times.

AN AMERICAN INN-KEEPER.—Old Rowe kept a hotel, where he used to say you could get anything that was ever made to eat. One day in came a Yankee, and stepping up to the bar, asked old Rowe what he could give him for dinner.

"Anything, sir," said old Rowe, "anything from a pickled elephant to a canary bird's tongue."

"Wa'al," said the Yankee, eying Rowe, "I guess I'll take a piece of pickled elephant."

"Well, we're got 'em; got 'all ready, right here in the house, but you'll have to take a whole 'un, 'cause we never cut 'em."

The Yankee thought he would take some codfish and potatoes.

GOING IT BLIND.—How charmingly those blinds of yours are painted!" remarked Incumbus to his friend Succubus, who was furnishing a new and genteel abode.

"They are," replied Succubus, with his blandescent smile, "and you will be surprised, perhaps, when I tell you they are the work of a Blind Painter."

THE SECRETS OF THE CONFESSIONAL.—On Saturday last, our worthy drummer, Sandy Walker, duly attired in official uniform, proclaimed to the public Bo'ness, that "Neil Stevenson, late fleshmonger would not be responsible for any debts which his wife, Janet Stevenson, might contract after this notice." A shot time after the above had been "cried," Sandy again made his appearance, and, after giving his drum a sound beating, roared out with all his pith:—"Notice—Neil Stevenson, for a number of weeks past, had only allowed his wife and four children two pecks of meal and two pints of sour milk to subsist on, and, further, he allowed her neither fire nor salt to cook it with." Whilst Sandy was going his rounds crying this "notice," a number of the elite of the town gathered in his train and judging from their conversation, we imagine that Mr. Stevenson would have suffered a little inconvenience at their hands in the shape of being rather roughly saluted had he made his appearance.—Falkirk Herald.

HARD HIT.—The Cincinnati Commercial says:—Col. Granville Moody perpetrated the following toast at camp Chase, the other day.

"In the name of God,
And Governor Tod
We'll fal ow our flag to Dixie."

To which the Sandusky Register replies:

It is no particular business of ours, yet we cant forbear asking the Colonel if it is exact military etiquete to couple strangers together in that way, before an introduction.

American Affairs.

From the Glasgow "Herald."

When Earl Russell characterized the American war as a struggle for supremacy on the one head, and independence on the other, the truth of the definition was generally admitted by the enlightened portion of his countrymen. The Americans in the Northern States, however, reject this idea altogether, and vehemently contend they are fighting for nationality, and a Union which has become famous among the great nations of the earth. They insist upon their right and title to hold by force of arms a people half as numerous as themselves, and occupying a territory of more than 800,000 square miles, because, as they declare, the prestige and power of the Union would be destroyed by the severance. The evils of slavery are mainly overlooked or forgotten in the prosecution of this idea, and, to all appearances, its realization has become the end and aim of their corporate existence. No sensible man can blame the people of the Federal States for holding opinions of this description, because it is natural that they should feel proud of their boundless territory, their immense resources, energy, greatness, and power, and it is also the most natural thing in the world that they should do their utmost to maintain their dignified position on the American continent. Neither is it surprising that they should be stirred with an intense feeling against those who have deliberat by planned this giant rebellion, and who have rent asunder a hitherto peaceful and prosperous nation. These sentiments, we repeat, are very natural to a high-spirited race, and they were, moreover, the very sentiments held by the people of this country, when the thirteen United Provinces rebelled against the Stamp Acts of the British Parliament. At that time it was believed that the "Revolt of the Colonists," as it was termed, would be stamped out in a single season; and when they did achieve their independence, sagacious statesmen were firmly convinced that the greatness and glory of England would depart with the loss of her American possessions; but these gloomy forebodings have been falsified, and old England remains great and glorious still. It is true that she might have been greater and more powerful, if the people of the United States had remained loyal and contented; but speculations of this kind are just as unprofitable as it would be to speculate upon the grandeur and power of the Roman Empire, had it been fated to endure till the present time.

But although we fought stoutly for our American dominions, and mourned over the final separation, we have learned wisdom by experience, and there is little chance of Great Britain embarking in such unprofitable crusades for the future. Our experience, however, seems to be of little use to our cousins in the Northern States; for they are now playing the same losing game which tried the firmness of our ancestors in the good old times when George the Third was king. They are putting forth all their strength, and sacrificing blood and treasure in a struggle the end and bearing of which they do not appear to see nor to understand. They fondly imagine that victory will cement the broken fragments of the Union, and give the Great Republic a new and lengthened lease of life on its original footing; but this view of the question appears to be utterly impracticable. In the first place, victory over the South, to the end of cementing the Union, can only end in bringing back the human institution of slavery, with all its unfashionable questions remaining for solution. It will also bring back a new and ever-present element of weakness, which will try the patience and tax-bearing qualities of the North to the very uttermost. Six millions of Anglo-Saxons, animated by feelings of the most bitter hatred, and four millions of helpless negro slaves, can scarcely be reckoned as elements of greatness or strength in a reconstruction of the Union; and yet this is the consummation that the people of the North are hoping, wishing, fighting, and dying for. Never was infatuation more decided or complete; and never until now has the world witnessed the spectacle of a free people constructing a Republic amoag themselves by force. Suppose the South finally conquered, would the vanquished States be likely to send representatives to the Congress at Washington to assist in making laws for the raising of taxes to pay the debts incurred in their own subjugation? How would a Legislature composed of three-fifths conquerors and two-fifths conquered—the one animated by the pride of victory, and the other exasperated by the humiliation of defeat—act harmoniously together for the common good of all? It seems unlikely that the two sections of the severed Union can be joined together again on the footing of equal rights and on the principle of self-government. If the seceded States are fically conquered, as conquered provinces they must remain for an indefinite period, requiring an immense army to hold them in subjection. Who can possibly estimate the number of men and the amount of money that would be necessary to govern a vast country under such conditions? The revolted States comprise upwards of 800,000 square miles, as we have already said and one man to every square mile of territory would scarcely be too much for holding the reins of Government firmly among a newly-conquered people; and wealthy as the Federal States undoubtedly are, they could scarcely keep up an army such as that.

The question of finance must before long assert its claims to a hearing and solution of some sort. It has hitherto been kept in the background, as a disagreeable matter generally is; but the longer it is delayed, the more difficult it will be to deal with. The first year of the war will cost the rebelled States about £122,000,000, and the second year is now rolling on without any diminution of expenditure. Paper money is doing the work bravely in the meantime; but a currency of this discription, based on no security but the promises of the Government, will assuredly end in a monetary convulsion or there is something exceptional in American finance. As yet Congress hast trifled with tax bills, and left Mr. Lincoln to carry on the war by means of loans, promissory notes, and the Customs Revenue. The latter source of income is undoubtedly the most legitimate, but unfortunately for the American Government it is also the smallest. When the Union was unbroken, the Customs Revenue never exceeded £13,000,000 per annum, and since the war commenced, the trade of the country has been reduced nearly one-half; the Morill Tariff, while raising the duties has seriously discouraged importations; and above all, Secession has taken away nearly one-third of the tax-payers. In these circumstances the ordinary revenue must be considerably reduced, and if sufficient war taxes are not speedily imposed, the financial system of the Federal States must collapse like an over-strained bladder.

Whatever may be the result of the present contest, it is idle to suppose that the United States can ever become the lightly-taxed and homogeneous nation that it was before. The South, independent or in subjection, will always be a perpetual source of expense and apprehension. The enormous public debt will claim its second pound of flesh; and, in this instance, repudiation will not be polite, as the Americans themselves will be the only sufferers. In times past, the Union may be set down as a nation existing without a standing army, and their can be no reasonable doubt that the absence of that army was the cause of its disruption. If a hundred thousand trained soldiers had been kept on foot and properly commanded, the Secession projects of Jefferson Davis and his associates would have been nipped in the bud, and the country saved their money like sweet, and lost the half of their country like fools. They have now, however, a standing army, and they are doing their utmost to counteract the natural effects of whole years of injudicious legislation; but the remedy may be too late. They have hitherto indulged in dreams of fancied security, conquest, and unbounded liberty, and they now find themselves in the midst of a ruinous war, a dismembered empire, and subject to the authority of a strong military Government. The trying ordeal which the American people are now passing through, may work a salutary change on the national character, and teach them the value of the noble maxim, to "do unto others as they would be done by." It may also teach them that all men are not equal in intellect, or in public usefulness, and that a constitution stands in need of revision when more numbers outweigh intelligence, honesty, wisdom, worth, and all the attributes that make up the true dignity of man. Meanwhile, has the time not arrived when the great nations of Europe might offer a friendly meditation?

Irredeemable Paper Money.

The property of the loyal States is estimated at twelve thousand millions of dollars; the prices of the country are deranged six and a-half to six and three-quarters per cent, as shown in the premium of gold, making a difference on the property of $750,000,000, or about fifty per cent more than our whole national debt. This disastrous change in price of $750,000,000 is the natural result of the issue of about $750,000,000 Government legal tender notes. Furthermore, the business transactions in prosperous years are estimated at five thousand millions, and since the rebellion at one-half, or twenty-five-hundred millions of dollars; therefore it follows that prices in the yearly business of the nation are also charged this year about $150,000,000 per annum, and in prosperous times about $300,000,000 per annum, owing to Mr. Chase's paper money system and speculative schemes in which there is nothing original, but simply an exact copy of what history has frequently recorded as the inventions and practice of weak theorists, despotic rulers, or irresponsible, reckless, and unprincipled adventurers.

If the issue of $70,000,000 government legal tender notes change the prices of property in the loyal States $750,000,000, and the yearly business transactions $150,000,000, what shall we see and feel when the whole $150,000,000 of legal tender notes authorised by the February act of Congress are engraved and used? The difference will be, of course, fully double, or $1,500,0 0,000 change in price on property, and $300,000,000 per annum in business prices. If Congress authorise another $150,000,000 of legal tender notes, which the paper money politicians, bank and stock speculators, are likely to engineer through Congress this week—what then? The Government paper money in the country will be $300,000,000, or more tha four that in circulation to-day

The results, when we reach this inflation—unless these paper money schemes are summarily stopped beforehand in their headlong career toward national bankruptcy and suffering—will be a change in price of the property of the loyal States equal to three thousand millions of dollars, and in the annual business transactions of $600,000,000 every year. Long before that period arrives, every ounce of gold and silver in the country will have disappeared from sight, and universal ruin and embarrassment will rouse the nation to consign to political annihilation, amid the contempt and execrations of a justly indignant people, the authors of these paper money schemes.

Paper money politicians may command from Washington the obsequious telegrams of the Associated Press that glorify them and their financial policy, but the laws that govern finance and commerce are above and beyond the power of man—even a paper money man. The premium on gold; the enormous rates of foreign exchange; the unprecedented foreign drain of gold—the life blood of currency; the paralyzed industry and enterprise of the nation; the caution and distrust of our capitalists; the turning of Wall Street into a gambling arena of stock speculators, are the hand-writing on the wall for the paper money men and their confederate conspirators against the true and permanent interests of the United States in the original and proper integrity.—New York World.

Our Language.

A little girl was looking at the picture of a number of ships, when she remarked, "See what a flock of ships. We corrected her by saying that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and a fleet of sheep was called a flock.

And here we may add for the benefit of the foreigner who is mastering the intricacies of our language with respect to its nouns of multitude, that a flock of girls is called a bevy, and a bevy of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffalo is called a herd, and a herd of children is called a troop, and a troop of partridges is called a covey, and a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rabbits is called a heap, and a heap of cows are called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of whales is called a school, and a school of worshippers is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd, and a crowd of gentle-folks is called the elite, and the elite of the city's thieves and rascals are called the roughs, and a miscellaneous crowd of city folks is called the community, or the public, according as they are spoken of as the religious community or the secular public.

—The Rochester Union states that Mr. Elliott, engineer on the locomotive Rochester, which drew the Charlestown express train from Buffalo to Rochester, on the night of the 6th of July, made the run from Batavia to that city, a distance of 33 miles, in thirty-four minutes and twelve seconds.

DR. RYERSON AND THE "GLOBE."

In Saturday's Leader Dr. Ryerson comes out in a mortal long letter, headed "Dr. Ryerson's reply to the three weeks attacks of the Globe." It occupies three columns, is written as loose and prolix as his letters generally are, and it has the usual quantity of spice and gall. Since the discussion in the Anglican Synod on Separate Schools the Globe in common with other journals throughout the country has seen fit to criticise somewhat severely our Chief Superintendent on the gratuitous and questionable assistance he has afforded the Episcopal body to carry out their designs. There is something so passing strange in the Doctor's conduct in all these moves of aiding parties desiring Separate Schools that it is no wonder he is attacked. The opinions of the Globe in these attacks are generally those of the Reform press through the country, but the Globe being the leading paper, and, above all, its being the most severe, not only in the present instance but its proprietor being death upon the Doctor some time ago in the small matter of "casual advantages," it is singled out for reply.—We learn that another letter is to follow, and that henceforth the Superintendent is anually to reply to the Globe "lest such statements being constantly reiterated and seldom answered will assuredly be believed." We suppose the reply may possibly be appended to his anual reports on education as a necessary part thereof. However, answer as he may and write as he will it is the settled conviction of a large portion of the country that Egerton Ryerson has been the means of already introducing into the national system of education the agent destined to overthrow it, we refer to the Roman Catholic Separate School system. This is the wedge which as yet to destroy his "own offspring," and every assistance he gives to parties introducing measures relating to Separate Schools is proof positive of his efforts at demolition, his own reservations to the contrary notwithstanding. Has he not written in his anual reports that "the claim of any Church to State support for its teaching, whether of the young or old, is inconsistent with the avowed constitution of our Government, and incompatible with the principles of equal rights and privileges amongst all religious persuasions and classes?" Did he not last spring expose the conduct of Mr. Scott in introducing a Roman Catholic Separate School Bill, state distinctly that nothing of the sort was wanting, and state further that members who would vote for or support the Bill were enemies to the country? and yet he turned round and assisted Mr. Scott in mending the Bill. And, did he not since assist the Anglican Synod in the draft of their Bill for Separate Schools? And all in the face of the above assertion, that State support for denominal teaching "is incompatible with the principles of equal rights." Dr. Ryerson of all public men of Upper Canada is the most inconsistent; he has invariably been led in all his public acts by the force of circumstance, not of principle. His political course is marked by the most flagrant violations of consistency, and his official course is no better. He, above all men, should never rebuke any one for repudiating responsible government. His introduction to his present position as Chief Superintendent of Education was brought about by his famous series of letters, proving that the then Governor, Sir Charles Metcalf, in acting without the consent of his sworn advisers was doing right; that the Ministry in entering their protest against the arbitrary and unconstitutional conduct of the Governor were wrong, and their resignation uncalled for. Dr. Ryerson then attempted to prove that the Governor was justified in making appointments to office over the heads of his Ministers, and that Mr. Baldwin—the patriot, the wise, the good, the father of his country—was wrong. It was for this extraordinary service that he obtained his present official position; a better man than himself had first to be disposed of. This Sir Charles readily did, and introduced the whitewasher of himself to the post of Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada as a mark of his gratitude for such able services. It ill becomes such a man as this to taunt Mr. Brown with opposing responsible government, or read a homily to him on consistency. He takes an opportunity in his letter to refer to Mr. Brown's defeat at the last election in the division in which the Doctor resides, but he is silent on the fact that no individual worked harder in that division, and no one contributed so much to secure that defeat, as this same Dr. Ryerson. "O, consistency, thou art a jewel." Our space prevents us at present from reviewing further this hodge podge of a letter. When its companion appears we may notice some more features disclosed in it.

THE FOOTE CHARGES.

It would be as well if newspapers which publish the evidence taken by the committee on public accounts relative to the extortionate charges for stationery, &c., made by Mr. Foote, of the Quebec Chronicle, as showing the embezzlement of the late government, would just state that the present government have paid a number of the bills, notwithstanding the high prices; that they have retained, although not paid for when they took office, large quantities of the station ery, and that Mr. Foote's paper, the Quebec Chronicle, has been taken into their confidence, and is now their chief organ at the seat of Government. We have not one word to say in palliation of the charges made by Mr. Foote, or the conduct of the Government in paying them; but fair play compels us to say that supporters of the new Government are not in a position to throw dirt at the old, on his account.—Review, 11th inst.

The newspapers publishing the Foote charges may not be in a position to state that the new Government did pay a number of the bills; and if they did, it may be a question if they could escape paying them if they were all endorsed and ordered to be paid, as the one which we published last week. Many an unjust bill has to be paid by Government, when, as in this case, its predecessors incurred the liability. The sin lies not so much in paying the bills, as winking at the infamous impositions of unprincipled men, by ordering goods from them. It matters not who are the guilty parties of such a perversity of public trust, —we denounce the conduct of the parties concerned, whether it be the Government of John A. or John S. We hope we shall never descend so far as the Review has done, in upholding any administration in wrong doing. He shows to-day that he defends men more than measures. He will go any length to get his favorite party out of a slough, or plunge the party he opposes over head and ears into one. The old Government deserves all they have received, and a deal more, despite the efforts of the Review and the clique to hold them up as paragons of virtue. Their past reckless and wicked conduct in the profligacy of public money, is now being felt by every inhabitant of the Province, and, in consequence, they receive as they deserve, execration. If they new should follow a similar course they will be similarly treated. No set of men, however, unless lost to all sense of principle, will dare follow their example hoping to escape the retributive vengeance of an indignant people.

THE LATE STORM.

On Sunday night last we were visited with a fearful storm of wind, hail, and rain. For a fortnight previous we were without rain, save two very light showers, not more than sufficient to lay the dust. On Saturday night and during Sunday it looked as if we were about having a thunder storm, and about half-past 8 o'clock on Sunday evening huge dark clouds were seen, and distant thunder was heard, which became by degrees more distinct, till about a quarter past 9 the wind and rain commenced, followed shortly afterwards with a fearful shower of hail, which continued for some time. The hail was very large, and the lightning was bright and incessant. An immense quantity of water fell in a short period—every place was covered with water, and the root crops received considerable damage by the water running on the surface, but especially by the hail. Fall wheat next morning had the appearance of being party threshed—a great many heads cut off and otherwise injured. Corn leaves are completely riddled, and a deal of the stalks broken off. Potatoes, turnips, cabbage, pease, &c., all give signs of hard usage. Fences were blown down, trees broken, fruit blown off, sheds and barns unroofed and injured. Any quantity of windows broken; Mr. Douglass' and the Catholic churches suffered most in this way. We are pleased to learn that the line of the hail was confined to a narrow compass—a short distance south and north of the Town nose fell. We learn that the barn and stables of Mr. Whatley, in Smith was set on fire by the lightning on Sunday night, and burned; a number of farming implements were destroyed. The loss sustained by some is considerable, but still it might have been worse. A Mr. Hudson of Otonabee, we hear, estimates his loss in crops, buildings, and fences at £60, and no doubt we shall hear yet of further destruction. Next morning some pieces of hail were picked up, and we were assured that some pieces were 1¼ inches long, by an inch in diameter. We never witnessed such a hail storm in this quarter.

Some three weeks ago we heard that during a thunder storm a barn and stable belonging to Mr. Thos. Young were struck with lightning, which tore pieces of the roof and walls, but did not set them on fire. There is a fair share of moisture now in the ground, and we shall expect to see the effects shortly on the crops. Tuesday was St. Swithin's, and it rained heavy, so that we may count on rain every day for 40 hence, unless the old legend is at fault.

The Scottish Provincial Assurance Company.

The following extract taken from the Freeman of the 24th ult.,—a paper of very wide circulation in Ireland—of the success of the Canadian Branch, under the management of Mr. Davidson Parker of Montreal. Mr. Joseph R. Walton, is agent for Peterborough.—The Freeman after urging the claims of life insurance generally remarks:

"But it is not enough to impress upon those who are uninsured (and who still form such a large majority of the community) that it is their duty, as far as in their power, to avail themselves of the advantages offered by these institutions. They may naturally ask, Where shall we insure? Where there are so many claimants for patronage it is difficult to choose.' To this we reply that there are a number of long established, well tried and prosperous companies, who are well entitled to the confidence of the public. And without undervaluing the benefits offered by any of these companies, we would at present direct particular attention to one of them—the Scottish Provincial Assurance Company—which may fairly claim to rank among the most successful and best conducted institutions of the kind in the United Kingdom. It must be classed among the old established companies, inasmuch as of the 150 companies now in operation, "fully one hundred of them have been formed since the Scottish Provincial was established in 1825. For the last nine years especially, it has annually increased "its business to a large extent; and it will "be seen by its last Annual Report "that during the five years ended 31st "January last, its business has so much increased that in the year ended 31st Jan., "1862, the amount of new policies effected "had been one-half as much more as in the "preceding year, and was nearly three times "as much as the amount of policies issued "in the first year of this quinquennial "period."

☞ Mr. Parley J. Ayres some time ago handed us a couple of letters for publication which he received some two years ago from Rochester, giving intelligence of the incendiary who fired his shop in 1855. We learn from Mr. Ayres that his object in requesting their publication was to remove a rumour that had existed of his having been implicated in the affair himself—a rumour, we are persuaded, that will not be credited where he is known.

☞ We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. Dr. McNab, which occured yesterday. She has suffered for some time past from a cancer, which burried her in middle life to the tomb. The funeral takes place on Friday, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Two steamers arrived at Montreal from Glasgow on the 11th inst.,—the Damascus and the Caledonia—the one belonging to the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company and the other to the "Anchor Line." The former left Glascow on the 25th June 24 hours previous to the latter, and the Caledonia arrived at Montreal half an hour previous to the Damascus.

From our Ottawa Correspondent.

OTTAWA RIVER, July 9th, 1862.

DEAR EXAMINER.—The Book tells us that "as cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country"—but bad news is as much in demand as good news—how is this to be explained?

Alas! for the news coming daily from our kinsfolk over the line. The chastening rod of the Most High is heavy upon that people. Long have they been oppressors to a race, for the having "skins not colored like their own"; and, while other nations were letting the captive go free, they were riveting the chains of Slavery. But God has taken the matter in hand, and will make short work of fulfilling his promise in breaking the power of the oppressor.

The news, however, here intended, is not from a foreign country, nor a far country; and is not exclusively good, nor entirely bad. Emanating from a spot on the Ottawa some thirty miles below the city, bearing that euphonious name, perchance your readers will relish to hear a little about things general and particular hereabouts, especially as this region is contagious to the capital elect of our great country.

That city is, at present very quiet, a circumstance your readers may infer from the knowledge of the fact that not a hammer is raised on the Government buildings. Silence there reigns supreme. This is felt severely by many hundreds of workmen, who hitherto have had profitable employment rearing these Legislative piles. The appointed commission is busy, and it is to hoped their enquiry will be thorough, and the result such as the people have a right to expect—corruption exposed—evil-doers punished, and economy enforced. No time in the history of Canada was it more necessary to turn over a new leaf. Far better for the days of the Family Compact to return than for the country to be ruled by a Ministry so reckless and so unscrupulous as that which has just passed away.

Another source of dulness in Ottawa City arises from the fact that the Lumber trade is rather inactive. Some parties in this trade have, however, done very well this season, while many others complain. A very large quantity of timber has stuck, and will not reach market this season. Not only is this the case on the streams of the upper Ottawa, but also downwards, below the city. On the South Nation, several thousand cribs are hopelessly detained, thus depriving the owners of the necessary means of paying their men and furnishers, and having a surplus to reward their own toil and risk in the venture of getting out a raft.

What portion of Canada cannot sympathize in another sorrow, of which we complain? If every blade of grass and grain had a tongue, the vocal volume arising would lift the very hearens in expiring entreaty for rain—rain or death. Providence in the exercise of its inscrutable and wise proceedure, has during the present season, witheld both the early and the latter rain. This applies to, perhaps the most valuable crop that grows,—hay. The time to cut has arrived, but in most fields of these parts there is positively nothing to cut—the like was not seen before by the earliest settlers. In the whole month of May it only rained twice—on the 21st, freely; on the 27th, only showers. In the month of June it only rained three times—twice, mere showers, on the 18th and 24th; on the 30th there was a good rain, but it did not wet to any depth; this is the last rain we have had, and the weather continues hot. In some cases, late sowed crops are not up. Potatoes, generally, look well, and early-sowed grain crops appear wonderfully well on many farms, considering we have had so much heat and so little moisture. May the Giver of every good and perfect gift open the windows of heaven and pour down upon the thirsty earth drops of fatness, that man and beast may live and not die.

Yet another visitation has been sorely felt in large portions of the Ottawa country, fulfilling the adage: "Troubles never come single." Fire has proved a troublesome agent, and, to many, an expensive one. The assistance of fire at the Spring season is patent to every settler who has to redeem the earth from the dominion of the forest. The long continued drought of the present season made everything so dry that fires spread from the field which were being cleared to those already under cultivation, so that hay and grain crops were burned, houses, barns, fences, and even live stock destroyed. One young settler in the Township of Buckingham, named Guy Larwell, fought the enemy vigorously to stop its progress towards his out-buildings, but was worsted in the attempt; his stable, harness, sleighs, and other property to the value of $400, were speedily consumed. Still worse fared his adjoining neighbor, who, with his family, was driven out of his house, which, with its contents, was soon in ashes. The flames spreading through and around his fields, burned a flock of sheep, some pigs, and a colt, leaving the poor man not only houseless, but stripped of nearly all he owned. The day of this calamity was the 17th of June, when a high wind lent power to the flames, and fighting fire was the employment of every one—very many being great losers. The Sheriff of this county, Mr. Treadwell, had several valuable buildings burned, and also many hundred cords of firewood. The evil was great and wide spread.

And now, dear Examiner, adieu. Should you hereafter desire to hear further from the Banks of the Ottawa, the agreeable task of gratifying your desire may be attempted by

NOTES BY THE WAYSIDE

LETTER No. 4.

LIVERPOOL.

To a stranger Liverpool is an attractive city. Its public buildings, Halls, Museums, Reading Rooms, Libraries and amusements offer a perpetual round of enjoyment to the enquiring mind. Besides, it has the advantage of being built something after a plan, which cannot be said of many of its sister cities. Manchester for instance seems to have grown up by dozens, and to have been stuck together one piece after another; so it is with other places we have visited.—The streets of Liverpool are wide and clean and the rays of the sun manage to come struggling through the clouds of smoke and vapor overhanging the city about once a day at least.

St. George's Hall is a grand building. It covers an area of about four acres, and can accomodate within its walls nearly 10,000 persons. The organ is the largest in the Kingdom, and as it opens its hundred throats the sounds are terrific and shake the seats surrounding it. Of course there is not much music in all that, but the noise is sublime.

"Oh Change," is a wonderful place and not at all what one would imagine it to be. A dingy building with a bronze statue in front, and more than one human statue within, in all one can see at first sight of the market where fortunes are bought and sold, lost and gained, and where the heart of the great Commercial world throbs. A celebrated French writer once wrote that he always judged of a country's advancement in civilization and educational culture by the size of its Post Office. If his mark was a correct one Liverpool deserves to be ranked high in that scale. The Post Office building is four storeys in height, of free-stone blocks, and covers about two acres of ground.

It would afford much pleasure to many of your readers to take a look out on Elliott street at the horses and vehicles as they pass and re-pass. Two, three, four, and five horse teams are numerous, but the three horse (all abreast) team is most common in omnibusses and other four-wheeled vehicles. Isaacson's patent safety Cab is a singular machine. It is covered, runs on two wheels, the passengers sit in front and the driver sits on an elevated seat behind, with the reins stretched over the top. The horses are light, swift, and pace over the curb-stone pavements at quick time. The draught horse, used by the carters, is heavy beyond anything to be seen in Canada or the States and it is essentially a "beast of burden." With the cabbage, sprat, and coal men and women the much-abused donkey is the favorite. It is a sight to see the philosopher's animal-of-patience as it preserveres in its steady course, struggling on with a burden almost covering it, and paying little attention to the blows it gets on every side.

BIRKENHEAD.

On the opposite side of the Mersey from Liverpool lies the town (or city) of Birkenhead. For a retreat from the bustle and troubles of business its gardens, parks, and avenues must offer a good opportunity, and the thousands who daily flock to them by the ferries and omnibuses attest that they are well known to be so. It is a very general but a very erroneous belief that to the Americans belongs the credit of introducing street railways to the world. Street railways there are in this place older than they can possibly have existed in the United States. All the omnibusses run on rails, and as the fares are cheap nearly every one rides in the omnibus. British omnibus proprietors have found out a fact that American and Canadian ones could profit by, viz: that by lowering their fares one-half they more than double their business. The view down the River from this place is good, and the "Big Ship" makes a fine appearance as she lies majestically riding at anchor in the middle of the stream.

The population is about 20,000, and ship building is the principal trade carried on.

MANCHESTER.

This, the principal manufacturing city in Britain, is of course also the principal sufferer by the scarcity of cotton on account of the calamitous war in the United States. Everywhere in that once most flourishing of all English cities the effects of this misfortune are seen. Large factories and warehouses which at one time gave employment to thousands of operatives are now closed, and we are informed that the establishments now running are doing so, some on one-half and others on one-quarter time. The misery and wretchedness arising out of this state of things, for humanity sake let no one ever be permitted to describe. But this cannot last much longer. The British mind is fast being trained to believe the United States the author of all its sorrows, and they are firm in the belief (erroneously it may be) that the war is one of oppression. They take the issue that the South is ready to accept a compromise and so end the difficulty, but that the North is bent on a war of subjugation, and therefore they ascribe the prolongation of the war to the Federal government. The question is often asked by the Americans why it is that the tide of British opinion has turned against them. It is one easily answered. Interest in most cases guides the judgment of Nations as well as individuals. Would it be natural for this country to continue to indulge sympathy for the negro race in America (if Slavery was the issue of the war, which is denied) at the expense of worse than slavery to her own white laboring population? It is well understood too, that the Morril tariff act has virtually closed all American ports to British manufactures. How, then, can this country be expected longer to have a very deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of a Government that seems by its actions to wish no further friendly intercourse with us? You have no doubt noticed in the press and through advices, that intervention is being freely discussed. That discussion is a reflex of the sentiments of the people. We pretend to no gift of prophecy, but we will venture the opinion—formed from close observation—that forcible intervention in American affairs, on the part of Britain and France if the war continues, is inevitable. We have not the exact figures at our finger ends, but we see it stated, that the supply of cotton in hands will not last more than six weeks, even at the present decreased rate of consumption. What then is to become of the unemployed millions?

PETERBOROUGH.

The above name, so familiar and so welcome, was the announcement that met our hearing as the train stopped at a station on the Liverpool and Great Northern Railway, about seventy miles from London. As the time of stoppage was only five minutes, of course we could see little of the place, but the surrounding country is certainly as fine as any we have seen in England.—Fields, beautifully hedged in, and as level as a bowling green; hay ready for the sickle, oats in ear, and the other crops proportionately well advanced. The farm houses are the very pictures of contentment, and in every respect Peterborough in England, as far as we could see of it, is as much a credit to the country it is in, as Peterborough in Canada West is to the Province it is located in.

For the Examiner.

12th Day of July in Norwood.

I hope you will allow me the privilege of committing a few thoughts through the medium of your very valuable paper, concerning the celebration of the 12th day of July, in this place.

The preparatory works were going on for quite a short time previous to that day.—Early in the week preparations were being made by some of the brethren in different parts of the village in raising arches; it may be well to mention here that the arches raised and finished were little inferior, if any, to some raised in larger towns at the time His Royal Highness visited us, and I can assure you that they bring no discredit to the builders, or the village with which they are connected. On nearing the Lodge room of No. 34, Bros. Harper's arch appeared in grand style, robed in evergreens and mounted well with the "Orange and the Blue," under which spread to view some splendid mottos. On the front facing the west read the following: "Fear God, honor the King," "Love the Brotherhood," "Derry, Aughrim, and the Boyne." The other face showing forth that motto which ought to be sunk deepest in every true Orangeman's heart, and that is, "Behold how sweet, and how pleasant it is for Brethren to dwell together in unity;" then in broad, plain letters came "Our God, our country, and our Queen." On the Key stone of the arch appeared also many of the emblems of the Illustrious Order, of the highest degrees. But passing further on and casting the eye southward, from Queen street, in front of Thomas Finley and Kennedy's carriage factory, there arose another fine structure, which shows that the "Prentice Boys" of Norwood have sacrificed time and patience in fixing up for the auspicious morn. Though in this instance the mottos were few yet the arch was in no instance inferior to the other; it was plain and substantial, and the builders deserve great praise for their colours. The District Master and Deputy appeared on well mounted steeds, which appeared to appreciate the doings of the day, and about nine o'clock a. m. the streets were lined with spectators from all parts of the neighbouring townships to look and witness

THE WALK.

The approach of the Belmont lodges was soon known by the sound of the fife and drum, they were met and welcomed heartily by the Brethren of 34, who respectfully opened column for them to pass through, then marching on to meet the other lodges of the district, which soon added largely to the procession of the day, they marched through the public square of the village and the teams were soon put away in safe keeping for a time. A few moments for a rest was given but the time was shortened by the approach of the Percy district. The word being given for assembling into procession was soon obeyed, and it was a very imposing sight to see the district of Norwood march forth to meet their kind Brethren from the county of Northumberland. Thus the procession augmented, and now it is formed in one vast column, marching through the village, twelve or thirteen stand of colours fluttering in the gentle winds of Heaven, and every face seemed beoyant with gladness. After having marched through the various streets of the place the procession was led down Queen street under the evergreen arch (built by the "Apprentice Boys.") On nearing the specious green square opposite the International Hotel the word was soon passed round that all was ready for

THE DINNER.

The tables were very commodious indeed, every thing seemed to be in good style, the place was well fenced in from intruders and a number of fine trees placed all through the grounds for a shade, and they served the purpose well. The tables groaned under the weight of the good things of this life, there was plenty of every thing that a refined palate could desire on any occasion whatever, and indeed if Brother Jonathan himself were present he could not have taken time to complain, or rather he would have found no room for complaint. The tables were honored by having Lieut-Col. Haultain, M. P. P., from Peterboro', and the Hon. S. Smith, who partook of the viands with great delight. Soon the thousands partook of the good things and were well satisfied, after which the District Master assembled the crowd round the stand erected for

THE SPEAKING.

The Hon. S. Smith being introduced to the Brethren, amid loud cheering came forward in his colors which he assured us were ever worn by a slave nor ever would, he hoped; to this we say Amen. The hon. gentleman spoke in good style, and through his speech was loudly applauded, and perfectly satisfying the multitude. As soon as he finished his speech he proposed three cheers for the Queen, which was responded to as true Britons ever do, in cheering loud we believe had the orange body of Canada the like in print to study over through the year, before this day twelve months there would be more and better men amongst us. He spoke well and honestly, but then we all know what the worthy Col. is, he must and will speak frankly and free, for we believe he is a man in the strictest sense of the word; he courts the smiles of none, nor does he fear the frowns of any. The subjects he propounded were deep, and made a lasting impression upon the minds of all present. There is only one thing for which I am sorry, and that is that I had not the art of Phonography, so I could have given your readers the full speech, but take it for granted that it was good, truly British and loyal to the core. When he closed three cheers were proposed for the Colonel which was responded to in great style, and three times three were given, after which the Percy district made way for home after having spent the day in festivity and gladness. The Norwood district then returned to the square and gave three hearty British cheers for the Queen, &c., and three for the District and Deputy Masters, then came three good Orange cheers for King William the Third.

The procession then broke up, the several lodges of the district making for home, they were well assured that they could go home satisfied with the proceedings of the day, for in truth all "Went merry as a wedding bell."

And at six o'clock Norwood was composed once more and assumed her noted quietness. I am proud to state to your readers that during the whole day there was not an angry word passed between the brethren assembled, which is a great change from what such days used to see. I think, however, by this time I have intruded too far upon your good nature and will close, hoping we may all be spared to witness many more such days.

Norwood, July 14th, 1862.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, July 14.

The steamer Baltic has arrived. She landed her 1,200 prisoners at Fort Delaware.

Louisville, July 12.

The train due here at six o'clock last evening did not arrive till near midnight. The passengers report that Col. Morgan's rebel cavalry had been within seven miles of Cave city, and that they had left that point, 1,500 strong, for Lexington. Col. Morgan also announced his intention of visiting Louisville.

Washington, July 12.

The Border State representatives are holding a caucus to-night, to consider and frame a reply to the President. There are three points apparently agreed upon among them.

First. That the Border States have come up to the full demands of the Government heretofore made upon them, they having raised fully 80,000 men now fighting for the Union, and they will raise their quota under the new call. In regard to the President's emancipation offer, heretofore embraced in Congressional resolutions, these men say that it is not practicable nor specific. It proposes a change which can only be enforced through State conventions, and there it requires years.

Kentucky's present constitution requires four years to call a convention and have it meet, and then, after going through the preliminary stages and getting a State's consent, there would be no act of Congress to consummate, and a question would still be an open one, whether the National Government could appropriate the millions of money needed to carry out the scheme.

The specific legislation at once precede the States preparations. To obviate the delays of organized State action the Border State representatives think the offer should be at once made, and directly to the individual citizens of the Slave States, and the questions will at once be solved, and in time to aid the Government.

Congress would at once prove its willingness to appropriate the money, and the people of the States show their readiness to aid the Union, even at the sacrifice of a radical change in their social organization.

In conclusion, our representatives will assure the President that their constituents revere the Constitution and Union as dearly as ever; that they admire his heroic efforts so far to preserve both, and on that platform will not be surpassed by any portion of the Union, in furnishing men and money for the work.

Washington, July 12.

It is understood that an order is about being issued reducing the term of enlistment for the additional 300,000 volunteers from three years to one year. The object of this is to receive a large number of men, who would not enlist for the longer, but would readily do so for the shorter period. Besides, the calculation is that the rebellion will be crushed in less than a year. To Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, this change is greatly due.

Springfield, Mass., July 13.

Another rousing war meeting was held in this city last evening. Twenty-two thousand dollars were subscribed by a few wealthy citizens for the purpose of inducing enlistments, and the amount will be largely increased. Seventy-five dollars is to be given to every volunteer from this city, in addition to the Government bounty.

Louisville, July 13.

Rumours have reached here that Morgan's guerrillas, 2,000 strong, in two squads are at Harrodsburg and Danville, destroying property and stealing horses. Considerable excitement exists in Louisville, on account of the proximity of the guerillas.—Effective measures have been taken to prevent incursions.

Nashville, July 13.

Between 3,000 and 4,000 Georgian and Texan guerillas, under Col. Forest, attacked the 11th Michigan and 3d. Minnesota, in Murfreesboro, early this morning. There was desperate fighting. At 3. p.m. the Michigan troops had surrendered. The Minnesota troops, strongly entrenched, cut the enemy terribly with Hewett's Kentucky battery repulsing them with very great slaughter in three charges. Flgs of truce were sent in by Forest demanding the surrender of the place. Col. Loomis replied he could hold his position a week. The railroad track was torn up but replaced. An attack on Nashville is not impossible. Col. Lucas is reported falling back on Nashville. Canonading is heard repeatedly here. Col. Bonas has arrived with several companies.

A later despatch special to the Associated Press says:—Murfreesboro is taken by the Confederates, Mostly Texan Rangers, under Forest, but shelled by our batteries. Shrewsports the 9th Michigan captured. The 3d Minnesota, with battery, were holding out at last accounts. Brig. Generals Duffield and Crittenden of Ind., are prisoners.

Great excitement in Nashville; an attack expected. We will make the best fight possible, and if compelled to move will shell the city. A battery is in position for that emergency.

Nashville, July 13.

The city is full of rumours about the fight at Murfreesboro to-day. About 8 o'clock this morning, a large force of rebel cavalry drove in our pickets and assaulted the town.

Memphis, July 12.

The Vicksburg Whig reports the damage to the city as very severe.

A Vicksburg despatch of the 4th states that the bombardment is tremendous and unceasing. The inhabitants have taken refuge in the woods. Should the invaders land, we will drive them back at the point of the bayonet. Vicksburg cannot be taken.

Fort Monroe, July 13.

A rebel spy was captured yesterday by some telegraph men.

Gens. Richardson and Gorman paid a flying visit here to-day.

Cols. Forney of Ala., Williams of Va., and Capt. Murphy of Ala., arrived here from Harrison's Landing. They were wounded and taken prisoner at Williamsburg.

Baltimore, July 14.

The American of this p.m. says we learn from Mr. Wm. Airey, of this city, who escaped from Richmond on Tuesday last, that the rebel troops in and around the city, prior to the recent battles, were estimated at from 215,00 , to 220,000, and large reinforcements from the direction of Petersburg had been arriving for the previous ten days and nights, which were said to be from the coast, but our informant could not ascertain whether any portion of them were of Beauregard's army.

Explosion of a Percussion Cap Manufactory at Birmingham.

FEARFUL DESTRUCTION OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

On Saturday afternoon an explosion occurred at the precussion cap manufactory of Messrs. Walker, Graham-street, Birmingham, by which six people were killed and more than thirty injured more or less severely, four of them not being expected to recover. Birmingham of late years has been notorious for the prevalence of explosions of this kind, and it is less than three years since the manufactory of Mr. Pearsall, in Whitehall a reet, blew up and more than thirty were killed and wounded. The consequence of this was the insertion in the Local Act of a clause forbidding any percussion cap manufactories, or any manufactories of explosive compounds of a similarly dangerous character to be established in the borough without the magistrate's license. How it happens that the manufactory of Messrs. Walker has not been removed out of the borough is not generally known, but it is certain that at the time of the Whitehall-street accidentthe Messrs. Walker stated publicly that they did not mix the explosive compounds on their premises, and invited the public to inspect their works, which they contended were quite safe. We are informed that no later than last week he Govern ment inspector went through the works, and expressed a highly favourable opinion.

The manufactory is in Graham-street, in one of the most densly populated parts of the town, and stood between the Railway carriage wheel works of Messrs. Neale and Warwick, and the steel toy manufactory of Messrs. Heeley, which last abuts on Mount-street. Since the death of the late Mr. Walker, the business has been carried on by his two sons and three daughters, all of whom were on the premises at the time of the explosion. It is cast may to pay the wages of the persons employed, most of whom are girls between fourteen and twenty years of age, on the Saturday afternoon; and in consequence, at half past four o'clock on Saturday last, most of them were at the manufactory although not actually at work. A few minutes later the explosion occurred, and the whole manufactory, in one mass, lifted as it were from its very foundation, fell into the street, burying beneath the ruins nearly all the people who were within at the time, it is said that several women who were standing in the street at the time were covered by the debris; but up to this time, their bodies have not been found. The noise of the explosion was so great, that it was distinctly heard in the Bristol-road, which is more than a mile distant. Many of the people who were standing in the street at the time received severe injuries, several boys having their faces, as it were, spotted all over with percussion caps. The walls of the manufactory of Messrs Heeley were blown down, and most of the shops fell in. The people at work blown out of the windows, and many of them were much cut and injured. The stamping room fell in, and although three or four men employed in it succeeded in making their escape, one of them was less fortunate, and was caught beneath the falling ruins. The premises of Messrs. Neale and Warwick were very much shaken, and the outer walls are now in such a tottering condition that they may be expected to fall down at any moment.

The shrieks and cries of the sufferers buried in the burning debris were heartrending. In less than five minutes a large band of volunteers entered upon the difficult task of extracting them. This work was one of the most arduous character, and as the walls were falling on every side, it was one of great risk. Yet no one held back, and several of high standing in the town, of whom Dr. Wilson was one, were amongst the foremost. As fast as the sufferers were got out of the burning rubbish they were taken in a cab to the General Hospital. By five o'clock there were the engines of the various fire-offices on the spot, and great assistance was rendered by the firemen. About the same time a large body of police arrived, under Superintendent Spores, and they quickly erected barriers to keep the crowd from a too close vicinity. The men had not been long at work before the body of a young woman who has not yet been recognised was found. The face was so blackened and disfigured that not even the outline of the features could be seen, and one leg was blown off. Soon afterwards the body of a boy of about fourteen, fearfully mangled and disfigured, was found. Miss. Walker, who was very severely injured, was amongst those got out and taken to the hospital, and the two Messrs. Walker are buried somewhere under the ruins, and have not yet been found. Up to the time of writing, men are busy in search for the bodies of those who are missing, and several have not been discovered. In all more than forty people were taken to the General Hospital, where they were promptly attended to. Four of these have severe fractures of the skull, and are not expected to recover. Many are severely wounded about the head and face, and two have the upper lip cut off as clean as though it had been done with a knife. The scene at the hospital was very painful. Four women were crying and sobbing, and asking for their children, and it was no relief to them to find that their children had not been brought there. At about half-past five o'clock the body of William Biddulph was drawn from the ruins of the stamping shop of Messrs Heeley, which had been blown down. Deceased was about twenty-eight years of age, and was married. The body presented a frightful appearance, both the forehead and skull being smashed in. Shortly after this the body of another girl was found, and was taken to the Duke of Marlborough public-house, and later still the body of a man, who was so disfigured that he could not be recognised, was discovered. Up to a late hour the bodies of Messrs. Walker had not been found.

All the streets in the neighbourhood were filled with immense crowds, at one time over 50,000 people were assembled. When night came on, and fires and torches were lit, the scene was wonderfully impressive.

Latest Particulars.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Up to this time eight persons are dead. About ten o'clock last night, the one of the Misses Walker who is not injured, came down to the ruins, and pointed out the spot where she thought the bodies of her two brothers would probably be found. In about an hour the body of Mr. Richard Walker was found. At midnight they also found that of Mr Thomas Walker. It is believed there are still other bodies lying under the debris, and every exertion is being made for their recovery.—London Morning Star.

Jesse Watterson is a kind-hearted man,
And he'll please you all as well as he can.
Some people get trust, with a deadening tale,
If they had their due they'd be put in gaol.

And get in J. Watterson's for our Turkeys and Our Chickens and Ducks he can't be beat, (Geese,

TORONTO EVENING JOURNAL.

CIRCULATION 5,000!

AN EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

IN August last the first number of the Toronto Evening Journal made its appearance, and it has been published regularly each week from that time to the present.

The Proprietor feels grateful for the liberal advertising patronage extended to the paper thus far. Arrangements are now being made to give additional interest to the paper, both for readers and Advertisers.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants frequently purchase space in the Toronto Evening Journal for the publication of their Circulars, and furnish the names of thousands of Farmers and others to whom the paper is delivered and mailed—in addition to the regular issues. For instance, the following order just received from one Wholesale Firm in this city will explain the manner in which extra editions of the paper are attended to:—

"Toronto May 17th, 1862

"We have this day bargained with Mr. A. H. St. Germain to circulate five thousand copies of this 'Toronto Evening Journal' to parties named by us containing our advertisement

ROBERT WALKER & SONS.

In this way the paper enjoys a large circulation, and has, consequently, become a first class advertising medium. All advertisements ordered for the 'Toronto Evening Journal' will receive one continuous insertion for the Toronto Weekly "Journal," a large first class paper established in 1852, and [illegible] circulated in almost every part of Canada West.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT. DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-ninth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April.

Alexander Simmonds, Esq., of Drumsallas, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheets for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, shows the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1183 Proposal	£454,625 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	356,686 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS by Death including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	21,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	90,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. That step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amounts of New Policies Issued.	No. of Policies Issued.	No. of Policies Lapsed.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.
